CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, 5. — When the clause appropriating $10,000 for rent of the building for U. S. pension office and bureau and education was reached, a long discussion ensued, and the amendment was at last adopted, which appropriated $16,000 for that purpose, and authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to procure a fire-proof building with suitable accommodations for those offices, for rent, not exceeding that paid for the Seaton House and to rent the same instead of the Seaton House.

The appropriation for stationary, carpets, repairs of building, printing, &c., for pension office was reduced from $25,500 to $17,500.

All the other amendments of the committee restoring salaries of employees in the bureau of education, post office department, and the department of justice and agriculture were agreed to.

Sherman, of Ohio, submitted an amendment providing that all powers of transfer and suspension of officers held by the supervisors of internal revenue shall hereafter be conferred upon the commissioner of internal revenue, and the other powers of supervisors shall hereafter be exercised by the collectors of internal revenue. Agreed to. Without further important action adjourned.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, 5.—The committee on elections offered a resolution declaring Bennett, the sitting delegate from Idaho, not entitled to his seat; ordered printed.

Blaine, rising to a question of privilege, proceeded to address the House, and after a lengthy speech, said it was his intention to read every one of the letters referred to.

The first letter Blaine read was addressed to Fisher and dated 1861. It referred to the settlement between the writer and Fisher, and contained an allusion to a $10,000 note given for Spencer rifle stock. Blaine said an explanation was necessary in reference to this note. Two years before he came into Congress, persons who owned the patent for the Spencer rifle came to him and said the rifle ring in Washington was so strong that they could get no chance for a contract. He came to Washington and succeeded in getting the War Department to recognize the Spencer rifle, for which service he was paid a reasonable fee. Afterwards, before he came into Congress, he was asked and took $10,000 of the Spencer rifle stock, which he had paid for. The next three letters contained nothing important, and referred mainly to the settlement between him and Fisher. The fifth letter referred to a decision made by Blaine, as Speaker, on the last night of the session in 1869, ruling out the amendment offered by Julian to annex the Memphis and El Paso bill to the bill relating to the Little Rock road. Gen. Logan, at the suggestion of the Speaker, made a point of order against the amendment, and the Speaker ruled it out. This was some months before he (Blaine) became interested in the stock of the road. Additional letters were then read in full, Blaine making explanation in regard to one which referred to $6,000 of the Union Pacific bonds, which Blaine said belonged to a member of his family, Gail Hamilton, and upon which he had lent money. These bonds never belonged to him. There were three other papers included among the letters relating to the Northern Pacific railroad, concerning which Blaine said nothing, except that he would have them printed in the Record with the other letters. The memorandum of letters made by Mulligan was then read at the Clerk's desk, and Blaine then said this was all. Having finished reading the letters, he said he had been completely exonerated by all the witnesses from the $64,000 bond charge. There was one witness whose testimony he wanted in order to make his vindication complete, viz., Josiah Caldwell. He would ask Knott, chairman of the judiciary committee, whether he had telegraphed to Mr. Caldwell, and he wanted a categorical answer.

Knott said he had failed to get his address.

Blaine wanted to know whether they had received any dispatch from Caldwell.

Knott said he would answer at the proper time.

Blaine, stepping down the aisle in front of the speaker, said he had information that on last Thursday morning Knott had received a telegram from Josiah Caldwell completely exonerating him (Blaine) from the charges made against him, and that Knott had suppressed that dispatch. Here occurred such a scene as has seldom been witnessed. Blaine's assertion was received with prolonged applause, the entire republican side of the House beginning it, and the crowded galleries joining in, until the Speaker's gavel could not be heard. The applause lasted for some minutes, and when order had been restored, Blaine said he would conclude by offering a resolution calling upon the judiciary committee to report forthwith to the House whether any telegram had been received from Caldwell, and if so, its contents. The greatest confusion reigned for some minutes, and the Speaker ordered the door-keepers to remove from the floor all persons not entitled to it.

When quiet had been restored, Hunton, chairman of the sub-judiciary committee, was recognized, and made a statement that the resolution had passed the House ordering the investigation, and declared that Blaine expressed dissatisfaction with the names selected for the sub-committee; he found fault with Blaine, who preferred to come to the House occasionally with his grievances, and divulged what was going on in the committee room before the committee finished the investigation. He said Blaine had courted a quick investigation, and complained of dilatoriness on the part of the committee, when he (Blaine) really retarded the work. Coming down to the Mulligan letter, he said the moment Mulligan mentioned the fact that he had letters of Blaine's the latter whispered to Lawrence to move an adjournment. Lawrence explained he was ill. In justice to Blaine, he declared that the motion was made on that account, only, not because Blaine was afraid of what was going on. He then spoke of Blaine's acquiring the letters, and considered the letters the property of Mulligan. He said Blaine had invited him to the House to read the letters, but he declined unless the whole committee were so privileged.

Blaine — Does the gentleman from Virginia know of the despatch received from Josiah Caldwell in London?

Hunton—My friend, the chairman of the judiciary committee, will reply to you in full on that subject.

Blaine—Then I ask you to state whether on Thursday morning last the gentleman from Kentucky (Knott) did not call you out of the committee room and acquaint you of that fact?

Hunton—If my friend from Kentucky does not answer you in full, I will.

Knott took the floor and said he had listened to the imputations upon himself within the last two hours, and should now attempt to answer them. He did not want a personal encounter, but the gentleman from Maine had lugged him in unnecessarily. He defended Hunton and Ashe, and considered them the superiors of Blaine. (Hisses from the republican side).

Knott—That is all right. There are three kinds of animals in the world that hiss—vipers, geese, and fools. (Laughter.) Knott declared that the sub-committee was formed before Blaine's connection with railroads was even suggested. He twitted Blaine with being extremely anxious every time the railroad subjects were raised, and suggested that Blaine was watching carefully for the Cincinnati Convention. For his own part he hoped Blaine would be nominated, as he would be easy to beat. If he should receive the nomination and be elected by the American people in the face of all the facts, then all I can say is, may the Lord have mercy on the American people. (Shouts of laughter.) He said the judiciary committee was to decide the ownership of the letter to-morrow. If he denounced Blaine for coming before the House at this juncture in such a way and for such a purpose now, there might have been a grave question presented to the consideration of the House growing out of these letters, and that question is whether, after the House has committed the question for investigation to the committee, the authority of the House can be trifled with by having the witnesses who are summoned before that committee met by the wayside, pumped dry, the documentary evidence in their possession obtained from them surreptitiously, and contemptuous refusal made on demand of the committee to deliver it up. As to the cable dispatch from Josiah Caldwell, it is true last Thursday morning I did receive a dispatch. The gentleman from Maine seems to know the precise hour at which I received it and the contents. He seems thoroughly posted on the subject, but permit me to say with regard to the insinuation, that the telegram has been suppressed, and that any man, high or low, whoever he may be, who will elsewhere make such an insinuation, will have to take the consequence. I hurl the falsehood back into the teeth of any man who makes the suggestion as to the suppression of that dispatch! (Applause on the democratic side.) I received it. I did not suppress it at all. In less than thirty minutes after I received it I read it to several gentlemen, but there was no particular address in London from which it purported to come, and I did believe, and am not altogether certain yet that I do not believe it, was a fixed up job. (Murmurs of dissent from the republicans).

Hale and Frye besought Knott to read the dispatch.

The latter replied, When I get ready I will.

Frye—If the gentleman refuses to produce that dispatch I will be entirely satisfied that Blaine has not learned the whole of it, and I desire to ask if there is not something else in that dispatch which is kept back?

Knott—No, sir; will that satisfy you?

Garfield and several other republicans—"Read it! read it!"

Knott—Will the gentlemen possess their souls in patience? I have not the dispatch here. It is at my house. The contents of it are substantially as stated by the gentleman from Maine.

Blaine—I do not know that I can repeat it in the exact terms. The purport of it is that Caldwell had seen Scott's testimony in the New York papers, and that it was substantially correct that he had not let Blaine have any bonds, and that he would send an affidavit to that effect, but that he was engaged in the railroad enterprise over there and could not come to give his testimony without serious pecuniary loss. This is substantially what is in it, and if the gentleman had only waited, that dispatch would have been presented to the committee for whatever use the committee might see proper to make of it. I had no desire to injure the gentleman from Maine personally, and especially not politically, but I desire the truth may be told. As for myself, I had no knowledge of any transaction by the gentleman from Maine inconsistent with the highest personal integrity. I do not desire that he should be injured in the least, but I do desire that every person guilty of wrong, we shall turn the gas on and let people see. (Laughter and applause).

Blaine moved the previous question on the resolution, and attempted to make further remarks, but was prevented by loud calls to order, and by the Speaker ruling that he was not entitled to the floor for that purpose.

The House refused to second the previous question, and then, on motion of Banning, the motion of Blaine was referred to the committee on judiciary—yeas 135, nays 97. The House, after a day of great excitement, adjourned.

EASTERN.

The Black Hills.

YANKTON, D. T., 5.—A large party returned to-day from the Black Hills, bringing $20,000 in dust. They report no Indians on the Fort Pierre route, and look on the order of the military, suspending travel, as an outrage. Several ore freighters, who left teams at Pierre, are expecting to buy loads here and return at once.

A dispatch received from the military headquarters to-day, dated the 4th inst., states that a courier arrived from Red Cloud this morning, says Yellow Robe arrived at the agency six days ago from the hostile camp. Eighteen hundred and six lodges, on Rosebud, were about to leave for Powder River, below the point of Crazy Horse's fight, and the Indians say they will fight, and have three thousand warriors.

Sentenced.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., 5.—D. A. Tiemann and F. L. Hestelman, liquor dealers, Kansas City, were sentenced in the U. S. District Court to-day, to one month in the Jackson County jail, and the firm to pay $5,000.

Speaker Kerr.

WASHINGTON, 5.—Speaker Kerr came into the committee room quite feeble, and presented a long statement, which was read by Elliott. In this statement Kerr says he remembers Green having come to him, and thinks likely that Harney introduced him, but that point he don't recollect. He is certain, however, he never knew the man Harney, and that consequently, Harney never visited him anywhere. Harney never paid, nor proposed to pay, him any money for any purpose in the world. His whole statement on that point is wickedly false.

Railroad Sale.

NEW YORK, 5.—The New York and Boston Division of the New York, Boston and Montreal Railroad was sold to-day under the first mortgage bond foreclosure sale for $3,230,835. It was purchased by the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, who are trustees for the benefit of the bondholders.

WESTERN.

Chinese Labor—Arming for Fight.

SAN FRANCISCO, 5.—A dispatch from Carson, Nev., reports that from sixty to a hundred armed men, supposed to be the anti-coolie club of that city, stopped a gravel train near the tunnel, a mile west of the town, on the Virginia & Truckee Railroad, and ordered back the Chinese laborers that were on the train, and would not allow them to work.

It is reported that both parties are arming in anticipation of a fight. Chinatown is in danger of being burned. Excitement intense.

Trade Dollars—Australian News.

Discount on trade dollars six and a half to seven and a half. Halves three and a half to five.

Arrived the Pacific Mail steamer Colima, from Sydney via Auckland and Honolulu, bringing British mails.

From the Sydney Herald, May 6th—

Victoria.—Favorable reports have been received from the gold fields in various parts of the colony.

Queensland. — The Hodginson river gold fields, reported so rich, have proved a failure, and there is much distress in consequence among the miners. Reports from the agricultural and grazing districts generally are favorable.

South Australia.—Mr. Boucaut, premier of the colony, in a recent speech, outlined the plan of giving assistance to immigrants by paying their passage to the colony and providing them with lands under certain conditions.

The yield of wheat in Western Australia this year is sufficient only for home consumption.

New Zealand, 1.—Nine earthquake shocks have been felt in the south of Caulesburg and the eastern part of Otago.

Agricultural reports are of a favorable character. The Custom House returns show largely increased exports to Australia and reduced imports thence.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the question of the unification of the colony.
