EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Italians are going largely into the railroad business. Seventy new lines are to be built and extended next year.

Chicago has 3,000 more saloons than churches. Chicago is a "Christian" city, and would like to "Christianize" Utah.

The Boston Post man asserts that Philadelphia girls like onions, but he is mistaken. They only use them as weapons of defense when called on by unwelcome admirers.

Our woolen manufacturers would do well to read the Textile Record of America, published monthly in Philadelphia. It is full of new suggestions and information of value to them.

The Atlantic Cotton Factory Company of Atlanta, Georgia, have adopted the use of the Weston electric light after a severe test, and consider it far superior to gas and much cheaper. They have ordered more machines so as to light all their works.

What with the Boers in South Africa and the bears in Ireland, John Bull is kept in very hot water, and like the man who caught the bear, he can't hold on and he daren't let go. Conquest and forced dominion may have their glories among men, but they have also their penalties and discomforts.

Abraham Lincoln's name was received with thunderous applause during a recent lecture before a Norfolk audience, and a few days ago the Atlanta Constitution claimed that the people of the South have a keener appreciation of his character, his genius and many excellencies than the people of the North.

The following is recommended by Dr. Henry Barnes, in the Practitioner, as an easy plan to detect arsenic in paper hangings or any other suspected fabric: "Immerse the suspected paper in strong ammonia on a white plate or saucer; if the ammonia becomes blue, the presence of a salt of copper is proved; then drop a crystal of nitrate of silver into the blue liquid, and, if any arsenic be present, the crystal will become coated with yellow arseniate of silver, which will disappear on stirring." The test is not new, but appears not be so well known as it deserves to be.

A modification of the telephone has been utilized by Professor Roberts, of the London Mint, to detect spurious coin. Two equally strong and very rapid intermittent currents of electricity are passed over two coils connected by a wire. A coin, known to be good, is placed in one coil, and the current being disturbed, the telephone registers that fact. Another coin is placed in the second coil. If good, the equilibrium is restored, and the indicator is silent; if counterfeit, consequent disturbance is noted. The currents are affected similarly only by equal volumes of metal and alloy.

Cincinnati is somewhat agitated over the smoke nuisance, it having concluded that the unpleasant and uncleanly atmosphere retards the growth of the city. It is proposed that a method for consuming the smoke be adopted. The London underground railroad has declared a process by which the complete consumption of the smoke is accomplished, and there is no reason, apparently, why it should not work as successfully above ground. It would improve nearly all the large cities of this country to get rid of the smoke, which, especially where factories are numerous, becomes a serious nuisance.

A pitiful tale was told in the Court of Special Sessions, in New York, a few days ago, where a sewing-woman was arraigned on eighteen charges of petty larceny. The poor soul could get no work, indignantly refused to lead a life of shame, and was starving. While there was work to do she had transmitted the largest part of her earnings to her aged parents in the country, and when the time came that no more work was to be had she found herself without the necessities of life. Then she stole the clothes of her fellow borders, and pawned them to buy bread. If this had occurred in Salt Lake, the whole country would have howled at the inhumanity of the "Mormons."

IS IT FATE?

THE New Force News, among some remarks, under the head of "Fatalism," about the success of systems and ideas which have been violently opposed by the masses of mankind, has the following:

"Right among us is growing and fast spreading a religion that many good Christians think is all wrong—Mormonism. But the people are quiet, temperate, prudent, industrious; the faith is growing quietly but strongly; it wants only persecution to bring it to full fruition; our Christian brethren are anxious to begin that persecution, forgetting their own boast, that 'the blood of the martyrs was the seed of the church;' and the end of it all no man can guess; but sometimes it seems as if the Turk is right: 'What is to be, will be.'"

This is eminently correct. The religious system popularly known as "Mormonism" is bound to prevail, because it is true, because it is animated and sustained by a power superior to man, and because it is destined to succeed, no matter what forces may be brought to bear against it. People may call this "fatalism" if they please, but this word is designed and cut out to resist and survive all that is intended and used by its foes for its destruction. And the very means continually devised to extirpate it have proven, and will prove, among the most potent methods to increase its vitality and aid in its triumph.

We recognize in this the hand of Providence. "Mormonism" will not be left to die of inanition or to sleep for lack of incentive to action. Those who fight it always misrepresent it and the aims and acts of its adherents. It is never placed fairly before the world in an argument against it nor in a measure enacted for its suppression. This naturally stirs up those who believe in it to renewed allegiance and to an attitude of defence, while they rationally conclude that truth cannot be brought against it, or its enemies would not invariably resort to falsehood in their crusades.

The violent methods advised or countenanced by prominent preachers, statesmen and officials to prevent its spread or to publish its devotees, also have the effect of startling the public into recognition of its claims to general attention, and tend to create sympathy for it in humane and just-minded persons of all parties and creeds. It is kept constantly before the notice of the world and made the subject of conversation in public and in private. Its friends could not devise any plan which would bring it into such prominence as is given it by its opponents. The result cannot fail to be beneficial to it, when those thus attracted examine fairly into its claims and principles.

Opposition is life and increase to "Mormonism." It is no weakly, sickly thing that fades or wilts in scorching blasts of hatred or freezing gales of animosity. The agitation only gives it vigor and stiffens it into stern resistance and unfaltering determination. But it is not positively aggressive. Its strength is in calm and impenetrable defence, in divine union and unshaken faith in its ultimate victory.

Those who write, and preach and legislate against it never take into account the secret power which animates, vitalizes and impels it. They foolishly imagine that its strong and complete organization is under human control, handled by the craft and tyranny of a few, while the many are in bondage, moved to compliance with priestly dictation by fanatic submission to arbitrary authority. These could not be a greater mistake. But the notion has obtained such wide acceptance for so many years that it is almost vain to attempt to correct it. Still we will try to present the truth at every favorable opportunity, and that is, that the real moving force of "Mormonism" is a spiritual influence possessed by all its members, from the greatest to the least, which is one in essence though manifested in degree. Its recipients call it the Holy Ghost. But no matter what their enemies may consider about it, there is no question among the Latter-day Saints of its existence and operations. And it is folly for the skeptical to say that it is imaginary or the effects of enthusiasm. Its influence is a reality as much as the light of the sun, the warmth of fire, or the force of material substance in motion. It is the same to people of all nations, habits, customs, points and languages. It comes as the result of obedience to fixed and simple conditions, and as naturally as the harvest follows proper planting.

It is this that holds the people together. It is this that testifies to them of the truth or error of what their leaders speak. And it is this voice in the soul that urges them to duty, and to make self subordinate to the needs of the system and the divine command. And as fire is it is a living active principle, animating young and old according to the strictness of their adherence to its whisperings, as sure will it remain to comfort, unite and fortify its possessors, in spite of all the pressure that can possibly be brought against them by men or governments. Yea, more. The very efforts made to force them, or ridicule them, or persuade them from the practice of their faith, have the effect of confirming and consolidating them.

We never have any fear of hostility to "Mormonism." As the Nez Perce paper intimates, "our Christian brethren" are taking the best course to kindle anew the flame of enthusiasm in our hearts, and to stimulate us to renewed exertion in the cause in which we have enlisted for the entire war, not for a term nor a season. Fate or not, "Mormonism" will stand and endure and conquer. As all nations have failed to crush Judaism and the Jews through a universal warfare of centuries, so the united combined world will fail to extirpate "Mormonism" and the "Mormons." For the same unseen Hand which has preserved the Hebrews and is bringing them into power and prominence in the latter days, is also to be discerned by the wise in the movements of the Saints, and will surely exalt them after their afflictions, into the glory and dominion predicted by the modern prophets and the ancient seers!

DISTRESSED IRELAND.

NEW YORK, 28.—The World's London special says: Replying to a deputation of the Dublin corporation to-day, Chief Secretary Forster said the Government could not now propose immediate franchise reform, as it was too busy with the more important measure of the land bill. He left it to be understood that the franchise measure would be considered in good time.

This has been indeed a dismal Boxing Night. Rain has descended in torrents, all the streets are almost deserted, but the wet weather has a good effect on the theatres which have had very large audiences.

The Herald's London says: The long expected prosecution of the Land League leaders begins this morning at 11 o'clock. Workmen have been busy for weeks in trying to extend the accommodations but the court is still insufferably inconvenient. Admission will only be given by ticket. The front row of the gallery is reserved for ladies. About half have been accommodated. The Crown is represented by the Attorney General, Solicitor General, Sergeant Bolton, Messrs. John Naish, Q. C., David Ross, Q. C., James Murphy, Q. C., and A. M. Porter, Q. C., with Mr. Constantine Molloy, the best criminal lawyer in Ireland. The counsel for the defendants are Messrs. Francis MacDonough, Samuel Walker, W. McLaughlin and Peter O'Brien, with Messrs. John Curran, J. Nolan, Richard "Adams" Dillon and A. M. Sullivan, M. P. Apprehensions have been expressed in some quarters that the trials will be postponed because of the number of jurymen who will be challenged. One of the panel is Richard Hunting, a well known American who is the English agent of a New York manufactory of sewing machines and who only comes to Dublin on an occasional visit. He was held to be competent to serve because the office of the Dublin agency is registered in his name. A barrister who is well acquainted with the justices gives his opinion that they will suffer no delay and will force another panel immediately if this one fails. Immense interest is shown in the trial throughout the city. The universal opinion seems to be that the jury will disagree.

The State trials were formally opened to-day in the Court of Queen's Bench before Lord Chief Justice May and Justices Fitzgerald and Barry. The court room is densely crowded with spectators. Chief Justice May read an address stating that after the misconception which had arisen as to what he had said on a former occasion he should not take part in the present trials.

The great crowd of people around the approaches to the four courts loudly cheered the traversers upon their arrival. The judges took their seats shortly after 10 o'clock. The body of the court is occupied by council and other members of the bar. The principal gallery is filled with Irish members of Parliament, a few ladies, and a sprinkling of the general public. Chief Justice May, read with considerable composure, a document declaring that he should not take part in the present trial. It contained a vindication of his former speech. The announcement that he would not preside at the trial caused no manifestation. After Chief Justice May had finished reading, Justice Fitzgerald took the chief seat, and trials were proceeded with before him and Justice Barry. Only 18 out of the 24 jurors called, answered their names.

At a meeting of the Home Rule members of Parliament yesterday, resolutions were passed in addition to those already announced, that union among the Irish members of Parliament is absolutely essential, that large discretion must be conferred on the parliamentary committee, to which the members present pledge themselves to submit, that any attempt in parliament to pass a coercion bill shall be resisted to the utmost by every means in their power. It was stated during the meeting that no English or Scotch bill would be allowed to be proceeded with until the arrears of Irish legislation are wiped out.

A deputation of the corporation of Dublin has interviewed Forster, chief secretary for Ireland, and urged the government to introduce a bill in Parliament to assimilate the franchises of Ireland with those of England. Forster said that government intended that borough franchise be made alike in the two countries, but that it would be as well not to meddle with the county franchise at present as they were looking forward to a great change in the English and Scotch county franchise, and perhaps the Irish franchise would be dealt with at the same time. The government, he said, were of the opinion that the municipal franchise ought to be similar to that of England, but they could not promise to deal with the matter immediately, as other Irish business was very pressing.

Four laborers have arrived to work for Benzinger.

Chinese Commissioner Resident in San Francisco.

W. H. Trescott, one of the commissioners to negotiate a treaty with China arrived by the steamer City of Peking this evening. He has been besieged by interviewers since his landing, but remains strictly reticent regarding the proceedings of the commission and the terms of the treaties. The only information he vouchsafes is to the effect that the commission on arrival at Peking took up quarters at the American legation. The negotiations, which occupied one month and one day were carried on at the Chinese foreign office. Commissioner Swift is at Shanghai, and will return by the next steamer, and he (Trescott) will go east Wednesday. As to the terms of the treaty and the spirit in which the propositions of the commissioners were met by the Chinese or the nature of the intercourse with the Chinese authorities, Mr. Trescott maintains the most rigid silence. He says he has not seen the reports heretofore published regarding the work of the commission and declines to either affirm or deny them.

Museum.—The Curator of the Deseret Museum returns thanks for a copy of the Bible Almanac for 1881, from the publisher, J. H. Homan, Esq., of this city. A small tract of 52 pages, published at Boston by the Author, Elder Parley P. Pratt in 1855, has been presented by Brother Edwd. W. Richards. This little work contains "The Millennium, a poem, and Hymns and Songs on various subjects, new and interesting, adapted to the dispensation of the fulness of times." On page 20 the following lines occur:

"Let the poor Indian, if he chance to scan
O'er the wide Bible, he beholds man's all he
Has ever read, or heard, or dreamed in life,
Whose only mention is the chase;
Mourning the simple, he cries out in the place;
With trusting heart his streaming eyes survey
A book and a meeting in his way
Chrisolomor! ah! good, it seems to me
Before the throne, his prayers and incense
Cried unto God, saying, Father of the Great Spirit of our fathers, hold a hand,
Pity the red man, to his cries give ear,
Long hast thou scourged him, hear my prayer
To bestow to comes thy kindness
Where will the white man's true ambition
Binding the members in its chains
And let our scattered remnant dwell in Rather refused the just demand
Or, as it is, with the wonders stored
Become equal, and still to see no more
Forbid, Great Spirit, make the world
Know thy truth, thy instructions
Through the streets.
Make hatchet armed pale-faces
Are surely Boycott
And to the earth extend the reign of Peace
Let blood in blood shed
Cease, hatchet, hatchet was Cease, hatchet, hatchet was, but
