FRAGMENTS.

Gone for sale. See advertisement.

THE Utah University students and their friends are spending the day at Garfield and are having an enjoyable time.

THE plumbers' strike remains unchanged. The union employers show no signs of yielding to the demands of the workers and say that they will hold out firmly to the end.

THE Union Pacific are now selling one-half fare tickets to the A. O. U. W. meeting at Helena, Montana, which convenes on the 21st inst. for the occasion. The rate is $24.75, and the tickets are good for two weeks.

VIOLATORS of the garbage law are reported to be numerous throughout the city, especially in the Fourth precinct. Unless the statutes are complied with in this respect, Sanitary Inspector Stewart today said that prosecutions will certainly follow.

THE third section of the City Council for this week will be held tonight. The report that "Wentland will be nominated a couple of councilmen who will be duly supported and made the tools of Dunn to enable the latter to fulfill his purposes still," is for the most part, papers here feel, a myth on the gentleman's vanishing pension. He intends to be will make no more trouble hereafter. It should be remembered that Wentland was not the author of the more annoying resolutions but that it was the creation of some practical jokes.

Flat 5 Trouble.

The committee engaged in preparing petitions on behalf of the property holders of Flat E for the adjustment of the city plat, will be at the new Nineteenth ward meeting house tomorrow (Saturday) evening, from seven to half past nine o'clock to receive signatures from all who have not signed. The attendance of all such persons is earnestly requested.

Supreme Court.

So far as public interest is concerned, the proceedings in the Territorial Supreme court this morning are entirely worthy of newspaper mention. The Chief Justice and Justices Andersen and Blackburn begin the day's work with the case of Mortimer Sheen, plaintiff and respondent, vs. Joseph Mosley and Wm. Skeen defendants and appellants, and the hearing of this appeal took up some time. The original action was for damages for unlawfully depriving the plaintiff of the use of certain waters to which it is alleged he and his associates were entitled, at Four Mile Creek.

Police News.

The case of Arthur Norwood charged with assault and battery has been set for Tuesday next at 2 p.m.

Charles Gorman will be tried for a similar offense this afternoon.

Louise Dumont and Marietta Champagne, a couple of french women of loose character, are docketed for prostitution.

The inebriates were Eph. Kelly, Jos. Nattrass and George Paul. The two former escaped punishment by a suspension of sentence. The latter dropped $5 into the itching palms of Clerk Glenn and left Justice Kesler's dust begrimed sanctum.

Suicide and Murder.

John Talard, an old resident at Heber City, committed suicide yesterday by taking strychnine. He had been despondent for some time; was tired of living and frequently threatened self-destruction. He had long been an invalid. He leaves a wife and daughter. The latter was in this city at the time of the suicide, but left for her home soon afterwards. The funeral took place at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Word was received at Heber City to the effect that one Enos Davis had murdered his wife at Ashley while in a fit of jealousy, and had fled to the mountains for safety. A posse of officers are in pursuit.

Musical Exercises.

The musical exercises for the lectures on Sunday School subjects to be given in the Assembly Hall next week, by Dr. Karl G. Maeser, will be rendered by the following choirs:

Monday, June 13th, Twenty-first ward choir.

Tuesday, June 14th, Sixteenth ward choir.

Wednesday, June 15th, Fifteenth ward choir.

Thursday, June 16th, Eleventh ward choir.

Friday, June 17th, Tabernacle choir.

Saturday, June 18th, Twenty-second ward choir.

The superintendents of the schools furnishing music are requested to provide six chairs on the stand when their choirs are present, and on Friday night one each.

DOG POISONING.

One of Detective Franks' Bloodhounds Gets a Small Dose.

Detective Franks is the owner of a brace of young bloodhounds for which he says he would not accept an offer of $100. They are a pretty pair of animals, and have lately taken an active part in the pursuit of several fugitives from justice. The last occasion was about a month ago, when they got upon the trail of a prisoner who made his escape from the penitentiary, and the officers followed soon after. This morning some "friend" of Mr. Franks dropped a slow little morsel of poisoned food in one of the dog's yards, and the unknown cur lowed a portion of the meat to be eaten before the dying. The prompt administration of a strong emetic, however, worked satisfactory results, and the animal is all right again. If the miscreant responsible for the fatality not be discovered, he may be taught a lesson which will not be without its salutary effect. This dog and cat pois ening business has gone on in the city along enough.

THE UTAH CONTEST.

Full Text of Cannon's Speech Before the Convention.—In Eloquent Oration.

"I AM A 'MORMON' AND WILL BEAR THE BURDEN."

The First Appeal Made to the Republican Convention Upon "the Other Side" for Utah.

By Telegraph to the News.

THE UTAH QUESTION.

It Was Certainly Not Decided on Its Merits.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 10.—[Special to the DESERET NEWS.]—The committee on credentials reported last night in favor of seating all the contesting delegates from Utah, and this, so-ming the convention adopted that report.

Cannon interviewed a minority report and made an eloquent speech in favor of it. The "others in" were overjoyed at the recognition of their faction as if half a loaf were better than no bread. The Straights feel that the question is not decided on its merits, it being sunk in the stormy sea of politics.

The following is the full text of

CANNON'S SPEECH.

There are three parties in Utah, the Republican party, the Democratic party, and the "Liberal" party. The sitting delegates, O. J. Salisbury and Frank J. Cannon, represent the Republican party of that Territory, consisting of 8,000, who vote the Republican ticket every time it is in the field. (Applause.) The two gentlemen whom I to propose to seat with me, that we may be accomplished to save our rights with them, by the authority report, represent the "Liberal" party and nonintercourse, which never voted the Republican ticket in Utah from the day it was created to the present time. I assert that we might as well have a Democratic man, disgust come in here to share our seats as to have these gentlemen come to to vote with us. The mere fact, which will be asserted in you, no doubt if any one shall speak in opposition to the minority report, that our Republican ranks there is of recent growth and development must not stop us, it seems to me, if justice is to be done, because the question is not how long a man has been a Republican, but how good a Republican he is (applause). The objection which is raised to us, and to our having sole possession of the seats is that one of us is a Mormon. I am he, and I will bear the burden. When the Republican party declared in its platform that it would exterminate the twin relic of barbarism, it fought one with the sword, and it fought one with intelligence. Thank God it conquered. It conquered with the sword, and when it had finished its work in the South it wrote with the hand of peace, "that fair." Now it has accomplished just so much in Utah by schoolhouses, by newspapers, by law and by the growth of intelligence in the younger people of that Territory. (Applause.) I say that now has come the time to let the angel of peace write with the hand, as Utah says, that it may be longer curse the nation with the annoyance which has always been springing up in the demands for legislative measures. We want freedom; where shall we appeal for it except to the Republican party, which is the only guardian of freedom. (Applause.) I say if you seat these men, you seat them on the old issue, they do not know that Brigham Young is dead. (Laughter.) He died when I was in knickerbockers and I decline to be responsible for old sermons which he uttered in the early days of Utah. I appeal to the Republican party which has been the liberty-giver ever since the day that God Almighty called it into being (applause). I tell that this convention will recognize Republicans in Utah and not Liberals. If you should decide in favor of the majority report, you make the Republican party in that Territory a shuttlecock to be knocked back and forth by the so-called liberals of Democracy and Liberalism and I say this, that if you will give to us our seats and the encouragement thereby afforded to go out and work for Republicanism with heart and hope and strength, we will give you a state of Utah that shall be Republican some time when you get ready for it. We will come, not as Mormons, but as loyal great American citizens, friends of the Republican party. This is the first time that an appeal has ever been made to the Republican convention to do something upon the other side of Utah. You have had pianos in your platform time after time with regard to polygamy, with regard to dissolution of the Church over the State. Now finish them by recognizing that we are one, because it is so now."

Here chairman McKinley's gavel fell and Cannon was forced to cease.

By order of the Board of Education an examination for teachers will be held in the Public Schools, beginning at 9 a.m., Tuesday, June 14.

The Boy Sought to Defend His Home.

A gentleman owning a fine building formed a friend to inspect it. The two proceeded to the carriage house, the dog was released and his master admitted. Wearied of this, the friend applying a set of heavy gloves to his hands, the boys fell to work. The challenge was accepted, the gloves were donned and the two men raised their hands in the attitude of defense.

The crimson fell for his opponent's face. Scarcely had his arm shot out when the building, suspecting danger, gave signal to a flash and bar, and his teeth in the man's forearm. There is a tradition, and it seems well borne out in fact, that when a bulldog once fastens his teeth in either man or beast he lays back and they can be scarcely pried apart with an instrument.

Such was the case with this particular bulldog. No amount of coaxing or beating had any effect upon the brute. The man suffered excruciating agony, but it was not until a second man was applied to the dog that he could be forced to relinquish his hold. The brute was killed, the man's wounds were cauterized, but notwithstanding the loss of his arm he suffered by the injury and is to this day.—New York Herald.

A Boat in the Park.

Cornelius O'Dowd, in one of his inimitable essays, tells us that once upon a time in the County of Cavan a quarrel occurred in the hunting field between two gentlemen who we will call Captain Holmes and W. Jones, Esq. Very hot words passed between them. "Let us settle the business at once," cried the captain, "I have pistols in the house." "Sixteen hundred," said the squire, "I'm your man."

It was at length decided that they should fire at the castle yard at fifteen paces, each after to hold a handkerchief in each of his opponent's. "Where are you, you scoundrel?" cried the captain when they came out into the yard. "I'm here, you sheepshead," replied the squire. "Stand out fair," said the captain. "It's what I'm doing," said the other. "Give the word and fire at once," said the captain. "Not until I say so," said the other.

"Get behind the pump, yer honor, yer behind the pump before you fire," whispered the groom, pulling the captain by the coat. He did so, and the ball lodged every it was the whole time that it had lay in more than three months before it could get out again.—Leeds Mercury.

A Pleasant Explanation.

A globe-trotting Englishman's hair it was to amuse himself and while away life by going wherever there was promise of novelty, danger or excitement. He had been to the African diamond fields, to the Mahdi's realms, to our frontier Indian camps and he was on his way to Alaska. But one trip he made was to see the cowboys, about whom he had read a great deal.

"They are a very run sort of beggars," said he—"a very run sort. But they're not half bad as a lot, d'you know. I'm sooner got into bed in the hotel in the first cowboy town I got into than a band of the beggars come dashing up the street firing off their revolvers like madmen. It happened that the hotel was a very nondescript frame building, almost as thin as cardboard, and in five minutes the walls of my bedroom were riddled with bullet holes in the most surprising manner. Fancy my satisfaction—for I had traveled 3,000 miles to witness that very thing!"—Julian Ralph in Harper's Weekly.

A Hint to People Who Use Lamps.

Policemen and firemen are frequently called into private houses to put out exploding lamps or clothing that has caught fire from an accident of the kind. When a lamp is blazing coming high it requires considerable nerve to take hold of it and hurl it out of a window, but that is the simplest and best way to prevent disaster. If that is possible, or if the burning oil has got on the carpet or table cover, a shovelful of sand, or failing sand, of common soil, will generally do all that is necessary.

The same applies to any one whose clothing is covered with oil and on fire. If he can be down and have some soil shoveled on his clothes the fire will go out instantly, whereas a dozen buckets of water would hurt him much worse than the fire. A woman who is in danger of being burned in a room where a coal oil lamp is turned in a good precaution, and may check at the start what might otherwise be a most disastrous fire.—Exchange.

What Became of the Money.

Eugene Field's wife is the financial manager of the family, for the poet is as proficient in his expenditures and as extravagant in his charities as a man can well be. Not long ago Mr. Field received him with a sum of money to make a payment on his life insurance policy, and an hour after he left the house he returned followed by a man bearing eight large purchased boxes. These contained a magnificent collection of butterflies—rare specimens—and had taken every cent of the insurance money. But Mrs. Field's only complaint was, "Dear me, Gene, where on earth can we put all these things?" The house is a veritable museum of animals and inanimate curiosities, from rare books to cuneiform—San Francisco Argonaut.

Looking Down a Bottle Through.

A new instrument has recently been added to the list of optical instruments, called the bottle telescope, invented by Professor Jenson. It is the invention of a Danish man, and consists of a lit tube, enough to keep the bottle's mouth open and an arrangement of reflectors to determine easily the condition of the liquid and specimen.—New York Journal.

AN EYE TO BUSINESS.

A Scene in the Express Business Was Witnessed in New York.

There is an old, weathered, spotted gray horse that stands over on Canal street, near Sixth avenue, every day, and what he does I know about one and the express business it would not be worth while for a rich man's coachmen to be building trouble at twenty five cents a load to bother about.

The corner of the streets is a sort of waiting place for expressmen, and a dozen wagons may be found in line there daily. The wagon at the head of the line assumes the first business that comes in sight, and when it moves away, as only express wagons can, the others move up, the wagon that went off taking a place on the end of the line when it returns.

Yesterday the old gray horse was fourth in line. The first wagon was hitched, and the driver left his companions, who were as usual, congregated on the corner, and drove off. Horse No. 2 and 3 promptly moved up without having an invitation or invitation from their respective owners. The old gray horse stood. He was quietly munching his oats from a tub on the sidewalk.

The horse behind him, a dilapidated looking bay, began to move, and has also poked the head over the end of the old gray's wagon. After the consideration he came to the conclusion the old gray had no intention of moving just then, and pulling out he passed him at a slow trot and took the vacant place ahead of him. The others moved up in order.

When the old gray finished his morning meal he looked about and saw at a glance that something was wrong. He probably discovered it before, but preferred to eat his oats and settle the matter afterwards. He had no time to waste on the second horse, and so he was compelled to take it for granted that he was in the wrong. He moved to take a look, and tried to get out of the line, but it was no use. The way was blocked, and he was helpless, and he quietly munched away and took a glance up the head of the line. Just then a small rattle, and the old gray started off with a weight and he had to follow, while the other horses long the line made in shame.—Chicago Tribune.

In Holland the cow has become such favorite in the snow-girt that they can no longer be trusted to work the windlass of railways. In consequence the animals have been discharged and vehicles were put into their places. The reason are not drawbacks. 'Tis well. Women were ever good at working the pulleys.
