SUNDAY SERVICES.

Elders Eugene M. Cannon and Matthew Cowley Thomas in Speakers Tabernacle.

The presiding officer at the Tabernacle services yesterday afternoon was Angus M. Cannon, president of the Salt Lake Stake.

Choir sang the hymn:

Press on the land, let heart and hand
In unity co-operate, to unite.

Prayer was offered by Elder Geo. A. Smith.

Choir further sang:

How are the nations sunk in night,
Bow down in mere delusion.

Elder Eugene M. Cannon, who had recently returned from the Society Islands, was the first speaker. He said it was a great pleasure to him to take part with the saints at home in their worship. His appreciation of meeting with the Saints and listening to the inspiring words would be much greater because of his loving term absent from home for some time and mingling with a dark-skinned people who had not reached that degree of civilization to whom we had obtained. In the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints the Saints were given the privilege of coming upon themselves the responsibilities of a mission. If they were faithful unto the calling wherunto they had been called, God would bless them to the extent that they would be able to do a good and noble work. The Saints believed that it was God who called the young men to take His work upon themselves. He had called the brethren from the workshop, the store-room the farm and the office. They had gone out willingly, yielding obedience to the call and had been highly blessed to so doing.

The speaker said that the people of the Society Islands were generally looked upon as a barbarous people, and they were such to a certain extent. But as time advanced, they were taking on civilization little by little and many arts of them could teach the most civilized a lesson. During Elder Cannon's absence he had labored on the Society group and the Tuamotu or lower Archipelago. Here he found many good-hearted, honest people, some of whom were very sincere in the religion which they had embraced. At present the Church membership in that portion of the Lord's vineyard numbered about one thousand souls and the work was still going on in a very encouraging manner. Years ago the Gospel was first introduced among that people. At that time a good many had embraced the work, but afterwards it was stopped in that land for a time with the result that those who had taken upon themselves the name of Saints, fell away. It was just recently that the Gospel had been introduced there, but God had been with the Elders in their ministrations among the people, and had blessed their labors exceedingly.

At the conclusion of Elder Cannon's remarks he read a few verses from the Scriptures in the Tahitian tongue.

Elder Mathonihah Thomas who had been laboring as a missionary in Virginia, was the next speaker. He said it gave him joy unspeakable to meet with the Saints in the greatest sanctorium in the world. The privileges which the Saints were in the enjoyment of often made him think that of all people upon the face of the earth the Saints should be the most happy. That spirit which had been revealed in the latter days was the same Gospel that Christ Himself instituted when He was upon the earth. He gave unto the people the law and set the institutions upon the earth to administer that law. Such a mode of procedure was natural and necessary. In government affairs legislators were chosen to make the law and elsewhere officers were chosen to see that the laws were carried out. Christ became His ministration taught the law as currently in His Apostles had where He was called to lay down His life, they had those principles so thoroughly imbedded within them, that they went forth and spoke the law, and rather than that they wrote the law. But it had been taken from the earth because of the wickedness of the people, until the time appointed in it had been again restored with all the gifts and blessings which followed it anciently.

The living oracles of God were here upon the earth now, as they had been in ancient times, yet notwithstanding this fact, were thousands and thousands upon His footstool who declared in emphatic terms that revelation in this dispensation was something which God would not bestow. The Saints, however, had received the light; they had been baptized into His Church and had hands laid upon them for the reception of His Holy Spirit. The law of God was the guardian law that had ever existed upon the earth. It embraced everything that was good and true, and overspread it, gave unto those who heeded it, blessings which they would not be able to contain.

There was no excuse for the darkness in which the nations of the earth were now groping. Light had been established upon the earth and the Gospel of Jesus Christ was open for all who had inclined to embrace it. The Church had its Prophets and Apostles, its Teachers and Deacons, and through these officers God's work was being promulgated in the earth, that all mankind might have a chance and a privilege to become heirs to the blessings which had been revealed in the latter days. The Gospel of Jesus Christ was the most complete and beneficial organization, that ever did or ever would exist upon the earth. Its principles were in exact accord with the word of God as contained in the Book of Books, and its doctrine embraced all truth and truth would prevail. The difficulty in the people of the earth was a want to understand and sooner or later, those who had rejected it, would learn that they had rejected God's word, and His saving grace. In conclusion the speaker testified that he knew that the Church of which he was a member was the Church of God; he knew of the gifts and blessings following those who yielded obedience to it and felt that there would come a time when the name of Joseph Smith would be revered and honored and when he would be counted as one of the greatest benefactors that ever lived upon the earth.

Choir sang the anthem:

Hosanna.

Benediction was pronounced by Elder Henry P. Richards.

Vouchers of State Institutions.

Attorney General A. C. Bishop has transmitted to State Auditor Morgan Richards Jr. an opinion in answer to the following letter:

"Appropriations having been made to the various institutions of the state for maintenance, repairs, improvements and other special purposes, what kind of authority, voucher or order should be presented to this office by the respective boards of institutions to warrant a person acting for State warrants for a portion or all of such appropriations?

Here is the reply:

"The law relating to the University of Utah provides that 'the funds appropriated may be drawn quarterly at the request of the board of regents, by the state treasurer, upon the order of the board of regents, or such officer as the board may designate.' Under the by-laws he must receive duly authenticated monthly statements showing the expenditures made and disbursements during the preceding month.

"It would appear that in the absence of any express provisions upon these subjects, the legislature, in imposing a monthly duty in the management of these institutions, intended some formula and instructions to be given by the board of regents, or directing out these funds as the executive might suggest.

"In relation to the State industrial school, the provisions are as contained in section 1001, page 403, volume 1, of the Compiled Laws of 1888, which are not repealed by the Constitution and have not been repealed; that the funds appropriated for that school should be drawn out as the boards may be needed.

"The requisitions for the deaf, dumb and blind institutions may be drawn quarterly in advance.

"The state board of equalization solicitor and to be paid quarterly and the salaries and necessary expenses allowed upon the order of the state board of examiners.

"As to the Agricultural College, there is no provision as to the time of payment, but some must be drawn out on the order of the board of regents, and, in the absence of any rule, I am inclined to think the appropriations should be drawn out in the same way, and in your judgment and discretion, think proper.

"There ought to be a uniform rule respecting these matters, and I would suggest that you call the attention of the code commission to the subject, in order that it may come before the Legislature at its next session. Until then, these questions will address themselves to your good judgment and discretion.

"I have the honor to be,

"Your obedient servant,

"A. C. BISHOP,
Attorney General."

Farmington Lagoon.

Hereafter, or rather after September 1, the round trip fare to the pretty Farmington Lagoon will be fifty cents instead of twenty-five. The latter rate was simply announced in the first place as the new resort would get the advertising value it was properly entitled. It offers advantages for summer outings not possessed by any other resort and as time goes by it will be become popular with the masses.

One night when Mr. Isaac Reese was stopping with me, says M. F. Balch, a prominent merchant of Quartermaster, Washington, I heard him groaning. On going to his room I found him suffering from cramp colic. He was in great pain and I feared he would die. I hastily gave him a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He was soon relieved, and the first words he uttered were, "what was that stuff you gave me?" I informed him. A few days ago we were taking dinner with his father and he said he was never without that remedy. I have used it in my family for several years. I know its worth and do not hesitate to recommend it to my friends and customers. For sale by Druggists.

Mr. C. G. Moore, principal of the public schools at Anaheim, Cal., says: "I have used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and have found it an excellent remedy for bruises and slight wounds."

Insurance usually results from a sprain or other injury, or from rheumatism, for which Chamberlain's Pain Balm is generally admitted and universally praised. It relieves almost immediately and in a short time effects a permanent cure. For sale by Druggists.

"It is the best pain remedy in the world" is what Mr. L. M. Hutsons of Mangum, Tenn., says of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. "What made me to make this assertion is from the fact that my mother had a bad turn two years before and we took over two or three doses of that remedy to relieve a complete cure." For sale by Druggists.

READ WHAT

A Leading Financial Paper of Wall Street Has to Say About the Firm of

E. S. DEAN & CO.

35 BROADWAY, N. Y.

The world of finance that centers in and around Wall Street is an entire one, and is naturally subject to lively incidents. Continual chances are made and lost, fortunes are lost, are formed in history and has made the name of "Wall Street" synonymous with things financial and speculative.

Time has not yet rubbed a chance for many years; indeed, ever since its existence as a field for financial operations. Its history is vivid and fascinating to the student, and has ever been a dream of wealth, and many of the chapters read like a romance and suggest an Eldorado for those whose natures are adapted to such fortune. The records of individuals who have gathered within a few years, say, even a few months or weeks, fortunes that have made them the envy of opportunities, have inspired the wonder of everyone who has read of them, and have fired countless thousands with the ambition to do the same.

Notwithstanding all of the records that have been published regarding Wall street operations and some manipulations, comparatively few people ascertained the methods followed, and the majority fancy that little intelligent investment is forbidden them, and that it must remain only for individuals with enormous capital and abundant brains. In the ignorance of the details of the speculative operations they imagine that one must be a wonder of genius, and also have an immense capital at his disposal, in order to reap the enormous profits attendant upon successful speculation, and the erroneous belief that the ordinary investor who ventures to operate in the market is at the mercy of the united financial kings who are identified with Wall street, has kept thousands of people from taking advantage of the tempting opportunities for profitable investment that are being continually offered in this famous mart. Were it not for the fear, many business men would be induced to venture to study and learn the methods employed by professional theory, and would embark in speculation in order to keep the enormous profits at chance for success as any of the operators on the street. Many a man with a small capital would, after a careful study of a month, be in a position to make profits from some speculative venture to would appear extremely small, yet with the returns from any ordinary investment.

The fear that is thrown in many is the result of lack of enlightenment, and this difficulty is, and has always been, largely compounded by the professional brokers in Wall street. This call has always come more to discourage outsiders from the knowledge of Wall Street financial operations than to help them. They have never advanced any facilities for the benefit of the thousands of investors who reside out of New York and who would gladly avail themselves of any favorable opportunity to engage in financial speculation.

It is impossible for the country traders to take advantage of the opportunities that are daily offered by quick turns in the market, and they must rely upon the choice of their commission houses in making their orders in time to be effective. There are thousands of investors who possess a small capital who would be glad to turn it to advantage in Wall Street. But as the fluctuations in the price of stocks are generally made within a few days, or even hours, these investors are inured to take the risk of losing the small capital or to leave it idle in the form of possibilities nothing short. Many "outsiders" or country speculators have an account with their brokers, and they place their orders with them. Whenever they see an opportunity to make a profit, not by the time their orders are received the market is often changed and the opportunity lost. This state of affairs has served to keep an immense amount of capital out of Wall Street, and has deprived thousands of people from participating in the most profitable form of investment extant.

Had the brokers of New York organized a corporation for the purpose of receiving outsiders' accounts, and combining same to operate with all their discretion and to the mutual advantage of their customers and themselves, millions of dollars that have been lying idle, or invested in slow capital investments, would have been invested in Wall Street, and the immense fortunes that are being continually made in speculation would be distributed among the country traders instead of accumulating in New York. Besides these brokers would do a much larger business, and would make more money in commissions than they have ever made.

Any institution of this description would meet with the hearty endorsement of every solid citizen throughout the country, and the capital invested would, if combined, make an enormous capital the power of which would be a mighty factor in the Exchange. If this large combined capital was operated with as one general account, on the co-operative plan, and under some well-defined system, the immense profits could be made by its manipulation, and the investors in the syndicate of co-operation would receive earnings on their investments, the magnitude of which would dwarf any medium of investment now known.

This idea has often been discussed in New York financial circles, but has never been acted upon by any reliable business until a short time ago. Several years ago, E. S. Dean, a prominent operator, formed a system, which has since come his name, by which country operations could be conducted on mathematical principles, including all of the great rules which accompany individual operations, and thus insuring returns which, although comparatively slower and smaller than would result from any successful individual venture, would be much surer.

In order to properly operate this system a very large capital would ordinarily be required, and it was with the purpose in securing this capital that the firm of E. S. Dean & Co. was formed. This firm has for a long time done a very large business and has advertised to provide investment accounts.

The amount of discretionary business which this house received forced about of its regular business at the start, and were become so large as to allow the firm to organize a special department for the handling of discretionary accounts and also to permit of the operation of the new business E. S. Dean Stock System of Speculation. Time for the first time was an enterprise that had long been dreamed of put into operation.

But it was no large corporation or syndicate of brokers that put this long cherished plan into operation. It was simply one firm and consequently many predicted its failure. Notwithstanding predicted, but such a result was soon absolutely hopeless by many curious houses who daily witnessed the prosperity and constantly increasing operations of the firm. The operations of the firm were watched with great interest by every financial house and every operator on the street, and finally became so well known for its final outcome. Continued success has followed the transactions made by this house, until now their business is enormous, and gives the firm a place in the history of Wall Street, the outside speculator and the investor with small capital is enabled to operate with the same facilities as the operators who are right on the scene of action and who possess large capital. Indeed they are enabled through this institution to obtain a greater advantage, for all investments in this particular department are consolidated, and the combined capital thus attained has enabled the operators in the hands of the experts employed for its manipulation, allowing them to overcome contingencies that would ruin the individual operator who has but one fortune with which to protect himself. It is a practical illustration of the true adage, "In union there is strength."

It is particularly gratifying to note the success with which the institution has met. We desire to see Wall Street and the whole financial world invaded by the small, but honest investor, and we hope to see the day when one can truthfully say that Wall Street is not a trap in control of a few powerful interests, but is the open and fair arena for every investor in the land. It is fast becoming so, and this institution has done more than anything else to effect a result that constitutes.

As long as this enterprise is operated under the principles now followed, it can only be fortunate. It will also retard the growth of the institution, but it will pay going an investment. The semi-annual statement issued by E. S. Dean & Co. in January, speaks better than any words can convey, to most of the readers and friends of that institution. The special order department for the last half, ending July 1, 1896, showed an average 33 per cent per month, or very nearly four hundred per cent per annum. Such earnings as these are indeed wonderful, and they prove the power of combined capital and co-operative speculation.

Not only has this enterprise attracted the attention of investors outside of New York City, but speculators who reside in New York are fast realizing the advantage to be derived from entering the combination of so large a combined capital, and are eagerly investing in this co-operative system. The firm's only business has hitherto been to such principles as to constitute extraordinary enlargements of their offices at 35 Broadway. Some of the best known operators in the country, both in New York and now contemplating moments of this institution's special order department. The firm does not rest on its laurels, but is constantly improving in every branch, and keeps adding every improvement that is calculated to facilitate its business. It has recently engaged the services of two of the best informed railroad experts in the United States, Mr. H. Holland and L. H. Reese, to handle its operations in railroad securities, and it now has in addition one of the most complete bureaus of information, containing statistics on stocks and commodities, etc., that is in existence.

We cannot too strongly indorse this institution, and we wish it all possible success. It is the pioneer in this field. Will there be others?—Wall Street "Reporter."
