A MAN

WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY, WILL SEE, BY EXAMINING THIS MAP, THAT THE CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R. R.

IS THE GREAT CONNECTING LINK BETWEEN THE EAST & THE WEST!

Its main line runs from Chicago to Council Bluffs, passing through Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Geneseo, Moline, Rock Island, Davenport, West Liberty, Iowa City, Marengo, Brooklyn, Grinnell, Des Moines (the capital of Iowa), Stuart, Atlantic, and Avoca; with branches from Bureau Junction to Peoria; Milton Junction to Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Eldon, Belknap, Centreville, Princeton, Trenton, Gallatin, Camden, Leavenworth, Atchison and Kansas City; Washington to Sigourney, Oskaloosa, and Knoxville; Keokuk to Farmington, Bonaparte, Lentonsport, Independence, Oskaloosa, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, Spring Mound, and Pella Junction; Newton to Monroe; Des Moines to Indianola and Winterset; Atlantic to Lewis and Anita; and Avoca to Harlan. This is positively the only Railroad, which owns, and operates a through line from Chicago into the State of Kansas.

Through Express Passenger Trains, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, are run each way daily between CHICAGO and PEORIA, KANSAS CITY, COUNCIL BLUFFS, LEAVENWORTH and ATCHISON. Through cars are also run between Milwaukee and Kansas City, via the "Milwaukee and Rock Island Short Line."

The "Great Rock Island Route" is exclusively equipped. Its road bed is simply perfect, and its track is laid with steel rails.

What will please you most will be the pleasure of enjoying your meals, while passing over the beautiful prairies of Illinois and Iowa, in one of our magnificent Dining Cars that accompany all Through Express Trains. You can go an entire meal, as well as any person at a first-class hotel for seventy-five cents.

Appreciating the fact that a majority of the people prefer separate apartments for different purposes (and the necessity for the accommodation of this line warranting it), we are pleased to announce that this Company owns Palace Sleeping Cars for sleeping purposes only.

PULLMAN PALACE CARS are run through to PEORIA, DES MOINES, COUNCIL BLUFFS, KANSAS CITY, ATCHISON, and LEAVENWORTH.

Tickets via this Line, leading to the Great "Rock Island Route," are sold by all Ticket Agents in the United States and Canada.

A MOUNTAIN MYSTERY SOLVED.

GLIMPSES OF LIFE IN THE THINLY SETTLED INTERIOR COUNTIES OF ARKANSAS.

At the foot of the Boston Mountains dwells a man named Mason. He is over eighty years old and his tall figure, white hair and patriarchal air give him an indescribable appearance. His house is a rough but comfortable log cabin, and the few acres around it afford ample subsistence. An excellent marksman he has never abandoned the use of his trusty rifle, while the numerous deer and bearskins within and without the cabin bear ample testimony of his skill and success. With the exception of his wife he lives entirely alone. But his life has not always been thus desolate. Only a few years ago three children brightened his humble home, two boys, John and David, and one daughter, Lizzie, who was the pride of the old man's heart and the light of his rude cabin. The sons were light-hearted boys, given to drink somewhat, but liked by everybody, while Lizzie was a rare wildwood blossom. Her soft blue eyes and flaxen hair played sad havoc with the hearts of the younger portion of the opposite sex in all that section, and many sought her hand in marriage, the fortunate young suitor being a young man named Charles McKinley, rather dissipated, not worth a dollar, yet handsome, a very forest Apollo—in short, just the kind of a man to win a young girl's heart.

The Mason family were anything but pleased with her choice, and spared no effort to break off the attachment the lovers had for each other. Lizzie, however, could not be moved. Entreaties and threats were alike unavailing. The former gave her courage to plead for Charley the latter made her cling closer to him. The young man was also firm. I will never give up Lizzie, he said with a big round oath, when questioned on that point. Finding all other efforts useless the Masons resorted to more violent measures. John Mason met Charles McKinley one day in the forest, and a terrible fight ensued, in which both were badly cut and bruised, but in which John was decidedly worsted. This stirred up additional bitterness and for a time threatened to draw the majority of the surrounding families into the quarrel and disturb the peace of the neighborhood. Lizzie sought to pour oil on the troubled water, and her gentle words melted the hardened natures that evil passions had filled with wrath. There was a reconciliation between her lover and brother, and there was general rejoicing in consequence, when an event occurred which changed amity into distrust and suspicion. The event was no less than the sudden and mysterious disappearance of Charles McKinley. He was last seen alive alone in the forest beyond the mountains, and was on the trail of a herd of deer. The most rigid search failed to discover him or any trace of his whereabouts. He had dropped out of sight and life as if the earth had opened and swallowed him up. All sorts of stories were rife. One said he had been murdered, another that he had run away, still another that he was purposely hiding himself and would suddenly return. But as time went on and he neither came nor was heard of, the suspicion that he had met with foul play gained ground rapidly, growing into certainty in the minds of very many persons. Of course John Mason was accused of the murder, and though he strenuously denied the charge, the evidence against him was strong enough to warrant his apprehension. Once in the meshes of the law, it seemed as if a hundred circumstances came up all crying trumpet-tongued "Guilty!" Divers persons had heard him threaten to kill Charles McKinley; that young man had himself said that he did not consider his life safe so long as John Mason remained in the country. Even John's father admitted reluctantly that his son had declared his intention of riddling Charles McKinley with buckshot, while David corroborated the parent's statement. Thus the coils of circumstantial evidence closed tighter and tighter about the young man, and beyond his base assertion, there was nothing to be said in refutation. The blow had fallen on the young girl with crushing effect. The sudden disappearance of her lover, the arrest of her brother on the charge of murdering him, almost drove her insane. She, however, shared the popular opinion that young McKinley had been murdered, and that her brother was guilty of that terrible crime. Urged for a reason for her belief, she finally admitted that it rested on the slender foundation of a dream. She added that on the night succeeding the day upon which Charles McKinley disappeared she had dreamed that she saw her brother and him in a violent quarrel. The men were in a dark ravine; there was a mountain to their right and a deep dense forest to their left. She heard their words; she saw John strike McKinley with the butt of his rifle and fell him to the earth. That blow was fatal. The young man never spoke afterward. John hid the body in a dark cave in the mountains, and there it still remained! This dream made a powerful impression upon the young girl, and though many were disposed to laugh at it, even while admitting it told tremendously against her brother, nothing could shake her faith and confidence in its horrible reality. She insisted that it was true, though no trace of the body could be found in any of the numerous mountain caves after a most rigid search, and the vision rested only upon her individual statement. But her faith gave it tenfold power; her acts seemed to confirm her belief. From that moment she was a changed woman. Slowly she pined away. The color faded from her cheeks, giving place to a death-like pallor; her step, once light and elastic, became slow and languid; her eyes lost their tender glance, and sparkled with an unearthly lustre; she uttered no complaint. Like the gentle girl who loved the unfortunate Irish patriot, Robert Emmet, she passed to her early grave, forgiving all, beloved by every one, the victim of a broken heart!

John Mason broke jail and fled to Texas, his brother David going into exile with him. This settled all questions or doubts as to his guilt or innocence. Flight was accepted by one and all as a confession of guilt. Liberal rewards were offered for the capture of the brothers, David being considered an accessory to the crime, but neither was ever apprehended. From the Lone Star State they went to Louisiana, and in New Orleans fell victims to that dread scourge, yellow fever. Letters now in the father's possession contain the most fervent protestations of their innocence, and subsequent events plainly exonerated them from complicity in the taking off of young Charles McKinley. For, years later, when the main actors in this strange episode slept in their quiet graves, miles and miles apart, which interest in the scenes we have related had almost died away, or was recalled with awe at the hunter's winter fireside, the mystery surrounding the disappearance of the young man was brought to light. A party of hunters, while chasing a bear in an adjacent county, found his remains in a cave in which the animal they were pursuing had established his lair. There was only a ghastly-looking skeleton of a man, a rusty rifle, and rudely carved in the yielding rock upon which it rested, these words, "Lost, can't find my way out. Charles McKinley." That was all, but it told its own story. It solved an enigma that darkened many lives. It cleared from the foul stain of murder, though too late, John Mason and his brother.

This was the life-history, a record which, by the way, is authenticated and can be verified by other living witnesses—the old man told us one evening as we sat beside the glowing fire in the big fire-place of his lonely cabin. The night-wind swept down the deep mountain gorges with the roar of an angry sea, the stars twinkled dimly overhead, the howl of the wolf echoed dismally far out in the shadows of the woods, while the darkness of night filled all space.—*Wild Springs (Ark.)
