Things Preserved in Amber.

[Harper's Round Table.]

The main source of the amber supply is the seacoast of the Baltic Ocean. It is found gum, originally the exudation of a species of conifer now extinct. This gave in luxurious profusion hundreds of thousands of years ago on the marshy coasts of northern Europe, when the climate was much warmer than it is today. The natural history of amber is thus explained. The immense forests of amber pine underwent their natural downfall and decay. The resin of the wood accumulated in large quantities in bags and ponds and, in the soil of the forest. Where the coast was slowly sinking, the sea by and by covered the land, and the amber, which had been gradually hardening, was at last deposited at the ocean bottom. But in higher regions the pine continued to flourish, and so amber would still continue to be washed down to the shore, and deposited in the later formed green sand, and the still later formed stratum of lignite or brown coal.

The gum became fossilized by its long burial underground. More than two hundred specimens of extinct life, animal and vegetable, have been found imbedded in amber specimens, including insects, reptiles, plants, leaves, shells, fish, etc., which had been caught in the liquid gum and entombed there for all time. Some of these specimens are curiously perfect, and to be almost priceless, and one English collector has a cabinet of them which is valued at $100,000. One specimen, a lizard about eight inches long, a little jeweled monster, perfect in its form and coloring. Indeed, in many instances science is able solely through this medium to study details of animal life which perished from the earth many hundred thousand of years ago. There are flies preserved with wings poised as if for flight, where the pitiously sheen slowly through the yellow amber is as brilliant, as if they were floating alive in the sunshine.

Jokes for Dinner Time.

A little girl was told that too much hot buttered toast would make her ill. Looking at the dish for a moment, she thought she saw her way out of the difficulty and exclaimed, "Well, give me another piece and send for the doctor."

The child's fear that a mistake is not a beefsteak would hardly be comprehended by the Kentucky woman, who, on being informed that her lover only played for dinners, suppers and small stakes declared that she was rejoiced to hear that he never played except for something to eat.

The proprietor of a new Washington hotel celebrated its opening by inviting a large number of distinguished to a supper. At the table a distinguished judge of diminutive stature took offense at the jocular remark of the landlord and, handing him a dollar, said: "No, I wish to pay for my supper." The landlord handed him back fifty cents, saying, quietly: "Children, half-price."

CORN FODDER.

Convenient Homemade Derrick and Wagon Rack For Handling It.

An Iowa man devised convenient homemade apparatus for loading corn fodder in the field and again unloading it at the corn husker. A description of the derrick, with diagrams, is copied from The National Stockman. The contrivance includes a temporary field derrick, an extemporized wagon rack, also a derrick used at the husking machine to unload the fodder from the wagon rack.

The writer says: "I took wheels from an old mower for the rear wheels and have smaller wheels in front made the same as caster wheels. With this small derrick I pick up a whole shock of corn at once and load on to a wagon conveniently located. The horse that operates the derrick then draws it forward to the next shock, and so on. I have a hay sling trip on rope and when shock is brought around over load unhitch and the rope is released ready for next shock."

The writer says of the other derrick, which is used at the husker: "I have shown a single rope, but I use block on derrick at crib, as a team will easily raise a load of from 10 to 12 shocks. The temporary rack (shown suspended by the large derrick) can then be raised at one end so the corn will slide down conveniently near to the feeder. I have used them for the last four years with great satisfaction."

Right Kind of Horse.

Let us have a useful, intelligent horse of medium size, with a deep, thick chest, upstanding neck, full forehead and large, bright eye, an open nostril and an erect ear; a short leg, heavily muscled, with a long, low scale that brings the foot fightly to the ground. Then, with a short back and a strong loin, we shall have a horse of good action, of great endurance, and one that will give good promise of enduring service for 20 years. For such a horse there is a strong and a growing demand. Who will breed him and out of what blood lines will he be produced?—Professor Davenport.

One Reason

Why Scott's Emulsion cures weak, thin, pale people with poor blood and stubborn coughs and lingering colds is because it is almost half pure cod liver oil, the most nourishing food in the world. This is a fact. Its wonderful curative powers are due to this. Scott's Emulsion is sold by all druggists at 50c. and $1.00.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle effective pleasant effectually directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.
