The Mammoth Gold Lode of San Bernardino.

Of Captain S. T. Curtis, one of the present owners, says the Virginia Enterprise, we have some interesting particulars in regard to the recently discovered mammoth gold bearing quartz lode in San Bernardino county, California. The great vein is situated on a ridge composed almost wholly of quartzite. This ridge lies between Holcomb and Bear Valleys, on the eastern slope of the Sierras, and about twenty-five miles north of Mount San Bernardino, one of the highest peaks in Southern California. Holcomb Valley is 8,240 feet above the level of the sea, and the mine is some hundreds of feet above the valley. The great ledge cuts through the ridge of quartzite we have mentioned, and has been traced about two miles. Through this distance it crops out at intervals, sometimes just above the surface, and again to a considerable hight. On the claim of the Gold Mountain Mining Company, purchased by Captain Curtis and others, and which comprises 4,500 feet on the summit of the quartzite hill, the lead is about fifty feet wide and crops out the full length of the claim to the height of from thirty to sixty feet. In these croppings gold is to be seen in almost every part with the naked eye, even where the rock is sixty feet above the surface. The lowest assay ever obtained—which was from a piece of what seemed to be almost wholly quartzite—yielded at the rate of $18 71 per ton. From this the assays run far up into the thousands. A piece of the rock, in which not a particle of gold was visible, assayed in San Francisco, showed over $3,700 per ton in gold.

Wherever the lead crops out gold is to be seen with the naked eye, and much that is quite coarse. Curtis estimates that there are in the croppings and that can be quarried out, no less than 600,000 tons of quartz. In other places along the lode at least the same quantity may be quarried. Curtis set some men at work on a drift which is to be run lengthwise into the lead a distance of 100 feet, when a depth under the croppings of 160 feet will be attained. It is then the intention to make cross-cuts. This is being done for the reason that as yet nothing is known of the interior of the vein, it having only been prospected by breaking rock off the croppings. The principal locations on the lead are the Littlefield, the Hub and the Mohave Chief. Besides the 4,500 feet of ground purchased by them, Curtis and party have bonded another claim of 3,000 feet. They have also secured large tracts of timber land and an abundance of water. Wood is abundant and can be had, delivered at the mine, for $2 25 per cord. Lumber likewise delivered, can be had at from $13 to $15 per thousand. Labor is also cheap, and with a proper 50 stamp mill ore can be reduced at a cost of $2 per ton.

About two miles from the claims of Curtis & Co. some Mexicans have been at work for about two years with arastras, and have taken out a large amount of money. They are on the same lead which is now creating so much stir. The big lead was discovered by one Carter, who had been engaged in prospecting for his brother in the neighborhood, at $40 per month. He had met with but little luck, and one evening while going home from work resolved that he would quit. He stopped in a ravine and stood leaning upon a huge boulder, ruminating against his hard luck. The sun was setting, and as its rays fell upon the rock upon which he was leaning, he saw particles of gold glittering all over it. The next morning he went up to the top of the hill and found the huge rich croppings mentioned above. The reason that the lead was not sooner discovered was owing to the fact of the whole foot of the hill being quartzite—no one thought of there being anything else at the summit. A man said to Curtis: "I have been in this region fifteen years, and have walked about that hill a thousand times. When I think of it I feel like taking a pistol and blowing my brains out." Even though there should be nothing but what is to be found on the surface, the lead is one of the biggest finds of the age.

PIOCHE NOTES.

From the Record of Dec. 27—

On Christmas evening Hugh Gately was run into by a large sled, on which three men were coasting down hill. In trying to get out of the way he was tripped by the sled and severely injured, both legs being broken below the knee, the right one in three places, and much of the flesh was torn off.

General hilarity and feasting at Christmas, but little "fighting whisky" drunk.

From the Record of Dec. 28—

Three men were injured by an accidental explosion of about twelve pounds of powder at the Raymond and Ely mine, Dec. 27. Marsh Pierce was considerably injured in the eyes and somewhat otherwise, Jacob Henry had his hands burned considerably, and John O'Brien had his left hand burned and one eye somewhat injured.

Fred Pierce struck S. Ashim in the face, Dec. 27, and then Ashim retaliated with a pick handle on Pierce, and Pierce felt considerably wounded.

On Friday evening S. C. Barnes received a dispatch from C. Drake, dated Monroe, Utah, Dec 26, announcing that Johnson, agent for Barnes, had been shot and dangerously injured. A dispatch from the same party, dated yesterday, says Johnson was at Marysville, and that Biggs was there with others trying to capture the party by whom Johnson was shot. Johnson's wound is described as being in the breast, below the heart. He was still alive, but it was feared he could not recover. Johnson worked in the Dexter stables while Barnes owned them. He will be remembered by many in this place. He is a Canadian, and a very industrious and worthy young man.
