FROM PROVIDENCE.

Doing Noble Work.—The Fruit Pests.—Caring for the Poor.

Editor Deseret News:

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 28, 1894.—I thought a few lines from here would not be out of place. I can say the people as a rule are feeling well in health and spirits. We had a fine time last Saturday night. The choir got up a surprise on Brother John Scheuss, as he leaves to go on a mission to Germany. He has been a good worker in the choir for many years, and was alive to all the duties he was called to perform. The choir invited the bishopric and presidents and counselors of all quorums and organizations to join them, and when Brother Scheuss came to practice for the last time for awhile, he found the tables spread with loads of provisions waiting for him to come and help eat them.

After supper we had songs, recitations, speeches, dancing, games, and all in good spirits. Brother Scheuss had a little means given him to buy books necessary for his mission work.

I would say we have a plan in this ward which I think would be worked by other wards. It was started here twenty years ago by Brother M. D. Hammond when he was Bishop here, and it has never been allowed to cease. It is this: When an Elder is called to go on a mission, the Bishop sends out collectors and I don't believe any one of those Elders have ever had to furnish a dollar to take them to their field of labor. We have furnished a great many missionaries in twenty years, but the people look upon it as a pleasure as well as a duty, to aid them in going to carry the Gospel to the nations who sit in darkness.

Professor Hammond will be here tonight to lecture on fruit culture, and how to care for the pests that destroy fruit. It is expected the meeting house will be crowded, as the people are alive to this industry, and it will not be long before we have a canning factory here, thus adding to the wealth of the town.

Meetings are well attended, and our Sabbath schools and associations meetings are doing well. We also have a brass band started here and the boys are doing exceedingly well for the time they have been started.

We have had no snow but we won't hear the cry of the poor this winter as they are being well cared for during the cold weather.

TRAMP.

AFFLICTION.

BLIND, DEAF AND DUMB YET SHE HAS A WONDERFUL MIND.

The resources and possibilities of modern methods of intellectual training have found another marvelous instance in the case of Helen Keller, an instance fully as wonderful and conclusive as that furnished by the famous Laura Bridgman. The interesting child is now about 14 years old, according to the Illustrated American. Her babyhood, deaf, dumb and blind in infancy, and yet she has been educated up to such a point that she was enabled, at 12 years of age, to write, by means of her own typewriter, a sketch of her having been led forth from darkness into the light of knowledge. Her sketch is beautifully composed, and is said by the editor of the paper in which the composition has been published to have been free from errors of spelling and the like.

In view of the child's dreadful afflictions the mere mechanical work of the achievement is remarkable enough, but when to this is added a distinctly fine quality of literary skill, the mental attainments acquired by the girl are quite amazing. We cannot resist the temptation to quote a portion of her recital of her first perception of the sea.

"Suddenly we stopped," she writes, "and I knew, without being told, the sea was at my feet. I knew, too, it was immense! Social and [illegible] sense of the sunshine seemed to have gone out of the day. But I do not think I was afraid, for later when I had put on my bathing suit, and the little waves ran up on the beach and kissed my feet, I shouted for joy, and plunged fearlessly into the surf. But, unfortunately, I struck my foot on a rock and fell forward into the cold water.

"Then a strange, fearful sense of danger terrified me. The salt water filled my eyes and took away my breath, and a great wave threw me up on the beach as easily as if I had been a little pebble. For several days after that I was very timid and could hardly be persuaded to go into the water at all; but by degrees my courage returned, and almost before the summer was over I thought it to be the greatest fun to be tossed about by the sea waves."

In this issue will be found the advertisement of Henry W. Ash, proprietor of the Prairie Queen Nursery of West Union, Iowa. Mr. Ash has a full line of fruit trees and small fruits, ornamental tree seedlings, and he proposes to sell these direct to the consumer, thereby effecting a saving of not far from 50 per cent in the price usually paid when nursery stock is handled by traveling agents. The Prairie Queen nursery has issued a very handsomely printed wholesale price list and catalogue which it calls its "Silent Salesman," and in looking over the varieties with the prices affixed, we are convinced that the title is no misnomer. The catalogue includes nearly everything that is tested and found to be of value, and the prices ought to sell the stock to any one who desires to plant at all. Mr. Ash is, by the way, one of our oldest and best known nurserymen. Write for a catalogue.
