PROVO.

PROVO, UTAH, FEB 8, 1896.

Garden City Notes.

Superintendent Bisset of the Provo woolen mills has returned from a two weeks' business trip to the East. The factory has been closed for some time for the purpose of taking stock, etc. A meeting of the directors will be held Monday, and it will then be decided when the factory will commence operations again.

County Attorney Gash has moved from the court house to rooms 8 and 10 in the First National bank building. The room he has previously occupied will be used by District Judge Wilson.

Marriage licenses have been issued to Arthur J. Lee, aged 23, and Ida M. Liter, aged 21, both of Springville; Parley Carter, aged 23, and Hannah C. Rasmussen, aged 18, both of Provo.

The Brigham Young Academy Polysophical society gave a leap year ball in the opera house last evening, which was well attended and greatly enjoyed by those present.

Father Twelves, of the Fourth ward, is quite ill, suffering from asthma and dropsy.

Henry Harrison, of the Eureka liquor house, has been charged with selling liquor to minors. Parley Carter swore to the complaint.

Alex Hedquist, a shoe dealer in this city, made an assignment yesterday with O. E. Wright as assignee. The liabilities amount to $2488.22, which it is believed the assets will fully cover.

John Hartley, of Coalville, a patient at the asylum, died suddenly Wednesday from the bursting of a bloodvessel in the brain.

An assay from a claim near American Fork canyon by a Mr. Adamson, of American Fork, shows $30.53 gold. It is said that this claim is on ground owned by Provo parties who located the ground as an onyx claim. They are taking steps to investigate matters.

RENDERING BEESWAX.

A Plan by Which the Work Is Done Neatly and Without Waste.

A correspondent of The American Bee Journal gives the following illustrated description of his mode of extracting beeswax:

There is no vexation of the flesh to be compared with what I have had in my search for the best method in rendering beeswax. I tried fire, hot air, steam and the sun processes, but with little satisfaction. The extracting was either too slow and wasteful or proved damaging to the wax. It is said that necessity is the mother of invention. Recently I had a great amount of wax to extract and made it a serious, sober study. I fixed on a plan which was at once put in execution and with most gratifying results.

A large iron wash kettle is filled about one third full of water and placed over a fire. The comb to be rendered into wax is placed in a sack of cheesecloth and packed down by pouring over it boiling water. This is done in a tin can of about a foot in diameter and three feet high. After the bag is nearly filled, the tin can containing it is placed inside of the iron kettle. To keep the bag with the wax fixed to the bottom of the can, and at the same time under the hot water a few inches, insert a press made of wire, with two uprights, but united above. To the crosspiece of the wire above suspend a smoothing iron, with a hook, in order to keep the bag under water, and to maintain a constant gentle pressure. A brisk fire is maintained under the iron kettle, and the water in both vessels is kept to a boiling point, until the wire press has settled so far to the bottom to show that the wax may have been all extracted and was now floating on the surface.

RENDERING COMB INTO WAX.

After the above process is completed withdraw the fire, and when the water gets cold, remove the wax from the can. If removed in broken pieces, which is usually the case, it is afterward melted on a stove in a suitable cake for the market. If the cake in the can is likely to be too thick, the wax had better be removed in a liquid state. In substitution, this way of rendering wax is to do quick and very neat work, with no mishaps and with little or no waste. And the cost of the machinery is in keeping with the business! Sometimes, after removing the wax from the tin can, I give the debris a second boiling, should the first boiling not bring all the wax to the surface. Through this process of ebullition, the wax of black comb becomes comparatively pure, leaving its pigmentous properties in the water, which is turned black and dirty. For a second or subsequent boiling, change the water in the can.

In the cut, A represents the iron kettle; B network of wire or of spiral form, at one end of the wire press; C and G wire press, D tin can, E piece of wood to keep the wire press in place, F comb in bottom of can, H smoothing iron.

Value of a Good Seed Bed.

The superiority of early plowed, well packed land as a seed bed for wheat was proved more conclusively this fall than ever before in the winter grain growing belt. As a rule the severe drought made germination almost impossible. Where fields were broken as soon as the oats or other crops were cut, then carefully worked down, wheat made a good start and came up quite evenly. On the other hand, ground plowed late or carelessly prepared for seeding produced uneven and very imperfect germination. If sufficient moisture happened to be present to start growth, the loose soil permitted such rapid evaporation that the young plant was quickly killed or so seriously injured that it will be of little value, especially where any considerable amount of vitality will be necessary to resist freezing temperatures this winter and early next spring.—American Agriculturist.

The Farm Walk.

Some one has found out how far a farmer has to walk to put in and attend to 40 acres of corn. To plow the ground with a 16 inch plow he walks 330 miles, to harrow it thoroughly before planting he walks 50 miles and to cultivate it afterward he will have to travel 350 miles, making a grand total of 730 miles, besides garnering.

A GOOD OUTLOOK.

With Grain Low and Eggs High Success Is Well Assured.

There was never a better outlook for the poultry keeper, says Poultry Monthly. Grain is very low, and so low, in fact, that the like was hardly ever known before. On the other hand, eggs bring a good price. It is a splendid time to start in business. Lumber and building materials, paint, etc., are low and labor is plenty, so any man can put up a good, substantial henhouse at a very reasonable cost.

Talk about the poultry business being overdone, we have never seen any indication of it in this section of the country. There is a steady, active demand among city people for eggs of known and indisputable freshness and quality. The supply is not equal to the demand very often, and therefore there is an abundance of room for further enterprise in the line of poultry keeping. Our advice to any prospective poultryman, to any man or woman who thinks of going into poultry raising, would be, start now. Everything is favorable. Fine stock can be obtained from breeders of pure bred fowls in abundance and at lowest cash prices.

Go at the work in a businesslike manner. Post yourself and find out all you can by reading poultry books and papers and, above all, by visiting as many practical poultry keepers as possible. Glean as many ideas as can be found; then carefully sift them. Cast aside the chaff and preserve the sound grain, for let it be understood there are always to be found some chaffy ideas. The wisest and most sensible men have some points upon which they are often a "little off." Do not, beginner, branch out too largely the first season. Work prudently ahead, and a fair measure of success is well assured.

SAPONIFIER.

Pennsylvania Saponifier is the original and old reliable Concentrated Lye for family soap making and general household uses. Beware of counterfeits. The success of this article has induced unprincipled parties to imitate it. None genuine unless Pennsylvania Salt Manufacturing Co. Philadelphia, is stamped on the lid. Ask your grocer for it and take no other.
