FAMILY RECORDS.

WE ARE NOW PREPARED to receive orders for FAMILY RECORDS of an approved form.

Each book is divided into five forms.

The first form is that of a "FAMILY RECORD," with ruled and printed spaces for births, marriages, and deaths, in each family, also for names, dates, and places, one page accommodating one family.

The second form is a "CHURCH RECORD," with spaces for blessings, baptisms, confirmations, ordinations, endowments, and patriarchal blessings and various particulars of the same.

The third form is a "SEALING and ADOPTION RECORD," with spaces for name of person sealed, birth, death, time, place, etc.

The fourth form is a "MISSION and APPOINTMENT RECORD," with spaces for names, date of birth, field of labor, date of appointment, departure, release, etc.

The fifth form is a "RECORD for BAPTISMS, ENDOWMENTS, ORDINATIONS, and SEALINGS for the DEAD."

Each book is furnished with a title page, on which the person owning the record can enter his or her name. An explanation of the forms, or instructions how to keep the record is also printed in each book.

These Records are well printed and ruled on good ledger paper, substantially bound. We can furnish them of any size, from one to five quires, or larger, but probably five quires is as large as will be desired. We can also furnish the various forms in a record, proportioned to each other to order.

SERICULTURE.—CHAPTER 2.

THE SILKWORM.

On Food for the worms: There are five different substances in the mulberry—first, the solid or fibrous; second, the coloring matter; third, water; fourth, saccharine; fifth, resinous.

The fibrous substance, the coloring matter and the water, excepting that which composes the body of the silk worm, cannot be said to be nutritive to that insect. The saccharine matter is that which nourishes the insect, that enlarges it and forms its animal substance. The resinous substance is that which separating itself gradually from the leaf, and attracted by the animal organization, accumulates to itself and insensibly fills the two reservoirs and silk vessels which form the integral parts of the silk worm. Therefore the different proportions of elements which compose the leaf, follow that cases may occur in which a greater weight of leaf may yield less that is useful to the silk worm. "Thus the leaf of the black mulberry, hard, harsh and tough, produces abundance of silk, the threads of which are very strong and coarse. The white mulberry leaf of the tree, planted in high lands, exposed to cold, dry winds, and in light soil, produces a large quantity of strong silk of the purest and finest quality. The leaf of the same tree planted in damp situations, in low grounds, or in stiff soil, produces less silk and of a quality less pure and fine." The less nutritive substance the leaf contains, the more must be consumed to complete its development; in consequence, the worm, from its fatigue by taking less nutritive substance, would be more liable to disease than the worm of a more nutritive kind.

The same may be said of those leaves which contain sufficient nutritive matter, but of less resinous substances in this case the insects would thrive and grow, but probably would not produce either a thick or strong cocoon, proportionate to the weight of the worm.

State of leaves proper for feeding: All silk growers have recommended the feeding with dry leaves, or leaves free from both dew and rain; nothing is so obnoxious to the insect as wet leaves from either. Count Dandois, one of the greatest experts on the silkworm, remarks: "These insects would be injured by eating leaves moist with either dew or rains;" p. 39. "The stripping of leaves should not be begun before the disappearance of the dews and ought to be concluded before the setting of the sun; it is all important to have always a supply of dry leaves." Count de Hazzi, p. 65—67. "The preservation of the health of silkworms depends essentially on the leaves being perfectly dry when given to them. Wet leaves invariably produce a diarrhœa.—Manual published by order of Congress in 1828, p. 128.

It would be needless to multiply authorities on this topic. The worst feat that can be given to the silkworm, and which has always injured it, is that which is termed manner, and which arrives from the diseased state of the tree. The blighted or rust spotted leaves do not injure. The worm will eat this leaf, carefully avoiding the spots.

Preserving the leaves: Hence, to avoid these accidents and to supply a resource for many days, a stock should be always kept on hand, sufficient for two or three days, which may be kept without prejudice in cold places, sheltered from the light but not too dry; such as cellars, storehouses, back floors, etc. They would lose their dampness in too dry a place and not in one too damp. They should not be heaped up together too much, so as to promote fermentation.

Mode of gathering leaves: Count Nerrie recommends the passing of the hand from the lower part of the branch to the top and to strip the tree of its leaves upwards and not downwards, as the latter would injure the buds. This should be particularly enjoined on children and others who are employed in picking.—By D. Graves.

Household Hints.

Keep fresh lard in tin vessels.
Keep yeast in wood or glass.
Keep preserves and jellies in glass.
Keep salt in a dry place.
Keep vinegar in wood or glass.
Keep meal and flour in a cool, dry place.
Sugar is an admirable ingredient in curing meat and fish.
Lard for pastry should be used hard, as it can be cut with a knife. It should be cut through the flour, not rubbed.
Crusts and pieces of bread should be kept in an earthen jar, closely covered, in a dry cool place.
In boiling meat for soup, use cold water, to extract the juices. If the meat is wanted for itself alone, plunge in boiling water at once.
Broil steaks without salting. Salt draws the juices in cooking; it is desirable to keep these in if possible. Cook over a hot fire, turning frequently, searing on both sides. Place on a platter, salt and pepper to taste.
To prevent meat from scorching during roasting, place a basin of water in the oven. The steam generated prevents scorching, and makes the meat cook better.
Beef having a tendency to be tough can be made very palatable by stewing gently for two hours with pepper and salt, taking out about a pint of the liquor when half done, and letting the rest boil into the meat; brown the meat in the pot, after taking up, make a gravy of the pint of liquor saved.

Do Insects Reason.

Dr. J. Lawrence Hamilton, who has made insects a study, writes to the London Times that he saw a boy remove a small spider and place it in the centre of a big spider's web, which was hung among foliage, and distant some four feet from the ground. The larger animal soon rushed from his hiding place under a leaf to attack the intruder, who ran up one of the ascending lines by which the web was secured. The big insect gained rapidly upon its desired prey, the smaller creature, (spiders are cannibals, notably the larger females, who are given to devour their smaller male lovers). When the little spider was barely an inch in advance of its pursuer, it cut with one of its posterior legs the line behind itself, so that the stronger insect fell to the ground, thus affording time and opportunity for the diminutive spider to escape along the ascending rope of the web.

Jones was always complaining of his wife's memory. "She never can remember anything," said poor Jones; "it's awful!" "My wife was just as bad," said Brown, "till I found out a capital recipe." "What is it?" said Jones, eagerly. "Why," said Brown, "whenever there's anything particular I wish the missus to remember, I write it down on a slip of paper and gum it on the looking glass, see?" Jones is now a contented man.

SHORT AND SHARP.

The Queen of Sheba was up to the fashions. We are told that she came to Jerusalem with a very heavy train.

It is better to have loved and have busted up somewhere during the correspondence than never to have loved at all.

Mrs. Lovely says that males are of no account from the time the ladies stop kissing them as infants till they kiss them again as lovers.

A Chicago man, who has just been maltreated in a fight, is named Thomas Booth. We suppose that T. Booth crushed to earth will rise again.

"Are these soaps all one scent?" inquired a lady of a juvenile salesman. "No, ma'am, they are all ten cents," replied the innocent youngster.

The kingdom of heaven has a door so low that all must stoop to get into it.—Yonkers Gazette. Yes, and lots of people are left on the stoop.—Boston Com. Bulletin.

Edison's phonograph can whistle, sing, howl and jaw, but it can't throw a stone at a yowling cat on a back fence, or kick a chromo agent off the front stoop. There is still lots of room for improvement.

"Look a here? What d' you give your hoss for the bots?"

"I give him a pint of turpentine."

Next day—"Look a here! I give my hoss a pint 'f turpentine, an it killed him 's dead 's a hammer."

"So it did mine."

A great many men, when they see a paragraph in their paper which doesn't meet their views, sit down in a pet and write to the editor: "Stop my paper!" And then for more than a week they wonder why the earth doesn't stop revolving on its axis.

"Just one," murmured he, involuntarily drawing closer to the luscious lips, that smiled upon him with such ravishing bewitchingness, while his own quivered in an agony of expectant anticipation. "So I notice," replies she coolly, glancing at the clock, "and time for you to turn up your coat collar, and shut the door from the outside." He went.—Danbury News.

A stupid-looking countryman halted before a blacksmith's shop, the proprietor of which was forging a shoe, and eyed the performance with much interest. The brawny smith, dissatisfied with the man's curiosity, held the red-hot iron suddenly under his nose, hoping to make him beat a hasty retreat. "If you give me sixpence, I will lick it," said the countryman. "I'll stop the bmggart's jaw," thought the smith, as he took from his pocket a sixpence and held it out. The countryman quickly grabbed the coin, licked it, and walked away, whistling, "Did you ever catch a weasel asleep?"
