CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The sixty-seventh semi-annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will convene in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, at 10 o'clock on Sunday morning, October 4th, 1897.

The officers and members of the Church generally are cordially invited to attend the meetings of the Conference.

WILFORD WOODRUFF,
GEORGE Q. CANNON,
JOSEPH F. SMITH,
First Presidency.

A WORD OF WARNING.

We do not expect to have many more chances to warn the political managers and delegates who are about to engage in the business of putting up tickets to be voted for county and State officers, as to what their plain duty in the premises is. But while a chance still remains, it is important that they should be made to realize, if possible, the gravity of the responsibility they are to assume.

Firstly, the people want reform, retrenchment, economy.

Secondly, they want experienced, capable, broad-minded and responsible men in position.

They are not asking much as to a candidate's politics, this year, but they are going to ask a great deal as to his qualifications. They are in no humor to permit the payment of political debts with public offices—they will vote down that kind of a proceeding, if it is attempted, with such sudden unanimity as to startle some of the petty bosses. They have been paying party debts until they are hardly able to pay any other kind. They are not particularly susceptible to the wiles or persuasion of the place-seeker—on the contrary they are largely disposed to look upon all such with aversion.

There is going to be such a winnowing and scrutinizing of tickets this fall as probably no election in Utah ever witnessed. The News for once is able to recommend and urge that very policy. We shall work for the election of the best and ablest men, with special reference to their ability to redeem County and State—and only, but, when the time for such election arrives—from the growing burdens now weighing the community down. Regardless of tickets or parties, regardless of age or youth, regardless of religious affiliations or any "ensaps" or "pails," this paper intends to do its utmost to secure the election of the choicest and ablest candidates out of the whole lot that shall be presented. We know there will be thousands of voters who feel to make the same promise and work to the same end.

Hence the warning to the conventions to be strictly on their good behavior, and in their nominations to be satisfied with none but the fittest and worthiest material they know how to find.

SPAIN AND TURKEY.

The most reliable report, probably, published for a long time about the status of the Cuban insurrection is that given by an alleged Japanese spy and intended for his government, although it found its way first to the office of Captain General Weyler. Representatives of the Spaniards are inactive, though superior in numbers to the rebels, and claim that the general is so busy calculating his profits that he can find no time for an actual campaign. It concludes with an intimation that the time has come for Japan to seize the Philippine Islands, which, the report says, can be done in the same way that France occupied Madagascar.

Spain, only a century ago one of the mighty chief of the kingdoms of the earth, is now suffering from a condition that seems to threaten it with dissolution. It is struggling to keep the still remaining colonies from which in earlier times it brought home untold wealth. Nevertheless for immense sacrifices, Cuba is being converted into smoking beds of ashes. The soldiers die from fever or are slain by the insurgents. The time apparently approaches when the struggle will cease for lack of money and men to carry it on, and in those straits, a power not yesterday conceded from a condition of barbarism, is seriously contemplating the advisability of making another of Spain's chief colonies. What a change in the period of a brief century!

No less remarkable is the situation in eastern Europe where the Turkish empire, once the terror of the world, is now but rarely considered to present. The recent butchery of Armenians in Constantinople, where it is asserted 3,000 persons were sacrificed on the altar of fanaticism, has so turned the tide of public opinion among the civilized nations against the Turkish military has resulted in a concerted demand of English support from the Porte. The representatives of the powers are preparing to defend themselves and the foreigners against possible attacks on their residences, while the liberal Mohammedan element is clamoring for the dethronement of the ruler, which probably means that he is no longer safe in his own palace against the poison or the dagger of the assassin.

Spain and Turkey! The extreme west and the extreme east of the European continent in the convulsions of death! Yet the former was once the leading power of that part of the globe, and before the explosion of the other all Europe trembled. Are these not indicatives of an approaching day of judgment upon old conditions and those who played leading parts therein? It certainly furnishes subjects for reflection that those two nations, little nearly always, even in their day of highest glory, were the homes of the two extremes of fanaticism that once met in mortal combat. One, the scene of the inquisition with its tortures and sufferings inflicted on its victims; the other spreading Mohammedanism with sword and fire; and both may by this time have had an opportunity to very nearly fill up the measure of their iniquities.

RETURN TO THE GOOD BULL.

A feature in which the public district schools have been held by many persons to be superior to private or denominational institutions, is the personal opportunity afforded the parents by the former for keeping some watch of their children's punctuality and progress. This is done by a simple system of monthly reports upon a card issued by the teacher, which the child is required to bring home promptly, with the signature of the parent or guardian; failing in which, the teacher's business is to visit the family and ascertain the cause of the omission. A truant or disappointed pupil is thus compelled to stay the proper recreation, and the parent is reminded to spend an hour in the work and advancement of the child.

Many of the denominational schools which formerly had not adopted this plan, have recently done so and, we believe, with good results. Strangely enough, some of the public schools have abandoned it, whether at the dictation of the trustees or at the caprice of the teacher we cannot say. This latter proceeding seems to us to be another departure from a good rule. Of course the system of parading each month each pupil's excellence or demerit, especially if done in a public way, might be made a great evil in the school as a whole and a source of undue pride or jealousy or other injury among the children individually. But every one with the judgment and intelligence that characterizes the capable teacher would be able to prevent these effects by preventing their cause; while the main benefit—the furnishing to the parent every facility for knowing exactly what his child is doing in school—is far greater than any risk or injury that can reasonably be expected. To say that parents who want to know how their children are progressing should visit the school or examine the teachers' or trustees' records, is but begging the question. Thousands of parents who are sincerely interested in their children's welfare cannot so readily take the time to do this as frequently as would that be necessary. We insist that it ought not to be required of them. If they have a right to the information referred to, as we claim they have, the teacher whom they pay ought to be required to furnish it to them.

NIHILISM.

Rev. Dr. Joseph Parker in London, who is nothing if not original, has intended a new term with which he proposes to enrich the vocabulary of theological controversialists—if they are willing to accept it. The new word is "Neodoxy." He says that describes the governed theological atmosphere of England, which is neither orthodox nor heterodox, but simply progressive, will not say regard for where it is going.

Commenting on this "neodoxy" a religious paper observes that it is not exactly a new experience in the world of theology, for classical commentators say the Athenians were liked to spend their time in nothing else but either to tell or hear some new thing," and then continues:

But newness in a popular sense is when the preacher says upon his own principles the creed of Jesus Christ without saying any hard expressions or anything calculated to offend anybody. The minister that will do this, and do it in a proper way, will not lack people to hear him. Nothing is more popular than a preacher who every time he preaches will give people something to hear. Those who accept his doctrine are pretty sure to be those who believe that the Apostles taught some truth by every word of their lives, which is far from unimaginable. It is easy to see a priori that to be the person who is with which so compel respectability and may discover nonsense. And without any controversial spirit we believe it is best to keep to the main truth.

This is true, and yet how can it be avoided by anyone left entirely to his own fallible judgment as to the course he proclaims? How can a preacher help being "liked about" according to the winds and currents that obtain, as long as he has no other guide than "reason," or his fellow that reason slowly discovers, and the conclusions drawn from these facts, modified from time to time by new discoveries or alleged discoveries? The certainty with which ancient heralds of the truth appeared was based on knowledge obtained from a higher source. Only by standing on the ground where they stood can modern theology escape the errors of both heterodoxy and "neodoxy."

MISSIONARY SUBSCRIBERS.

Elders in the mission field who, being subscribers of the News, fail to receive it by reason of change of address or from any other cause, will please direct all letters pertaining thereto to the business department of this paper. In the large mass of correspondence which comes to the editorial department from various mission fields, a note of change of address or failure to receive the paper is liable to be overlooked, whereas, if there were a separate note enclosed, addressed to the business management, it will receive prompt attention. Frequently presidents of conferences, especially in the Northern states, send in their regular correspondence a list of the names and addresses of Elders, with the request that the paper be changed to the new location given. These lists being for publication, go to the editorial and not to the subscription department, unless either give additional trouble or are liable to be passed by. When there is a list intended to secure a change of address for the copy of the paper that is being sent, or when it contains new names which are to be added to the subscription list, it should be separate from that intended for publication, and should be addressed to the proper department to receive prompt consideration. A little care in this respect will avoid delay and disappointment. The attention of the office of Chattanooga is specially invited to this, that future missionaries may have the information necessary to insure their getting the papers they actually receive.

THE ST. PAUL Pioneer Press has investigated conditions in Minnesota and finds that during the past twenty years the population of the cities there has grown four times more rapidly than the population of the rural districts. In fact the savings deposits of the farmers have increased while those of the city residents have decreased. The logic of this is that, from a financial point of view, the time has not come to abandon, to the state, the cultivation of the soil to become day laborer to the cities.

WILLIAM F. GIBBON, Editor, and D. F. Fort, Manager, announce that on October 1st, 1897, they expect to issue the initial number of the new series of The Utah Industrialist, a semi-monthly magazine devoted to Utah's industrial interests. Their circular says: "It will be the aim of The Industrialist to furnish such information and news of the industrial movements throughout Utah and neighboring states as may be useful and interesting to everyone."

W. H. HARVEY, the reputed author of "Coin's Financial School," now prefixes "Professor" to his name. Time was when he was called "Judge," and prior to that he was content to be a common "Colonel." In the multiplicity of these high-sounding titles, his old friends will regained to remember that when they knew him he was only plain "Bill."

THE MEN who have difficulty in paying his bills these hard times ought also find occasion to be still when one equally hard-pressed creditor makes a continuous request for such payment as can be made.
