No Doubts.

Judging from the universal satisfaction that Dr. Price's Perfumes have already given, there is no doubt but that as high a reputation for charming perfumes will soon be acquired by the firm of Steel & Price as they have already gained for their culinary preparations. The delicate fragrance of Dr. Price's Perfumes makes them very popular.

FOR THE PUBLIC GOOD!!

OUR FIRE-PROOF STORE about to be erected, and which will form part of HANHAM'S MARKET BUILDINGS, First South Street, City, will be 50 x 21 feet; from floor to ceiling, 16 feet. It will have an AIR DRY CELLAR, 50 x 20 feet; from floor to ceiling, 10 feet; ventilators, doors and windows in north and south ends, and is designed for storing dried beef, hams, &c., and also to keep fresh meat wholesome when we are in the "nineties."

It will be the best house in Utah for a WHOLESALE MEAT MARKET.

The New Remedy at Last.

If the methods by which physicians test the soundness of the lungs are reliable, it is certain that when these delicate organs are so diseased that all the ordinary prescriptions for pulmonary complaints are useless, a complete cure can be effected by the persistent use of Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. Statistical records of its results show that in two-thirds of the cases of consumptive cough in which it has been given, the lives of the patients have been saved by its operation.

LOCAL AND OTHER MATTERS.

Keys Found. — There are four bunches of keys at this office, which have been picked up at different times and left here for the owners. Who has lost any?

Lecture.—On Thursday evening, commencing at 8 o'clock, Prof. T. Lewis will deliver his lecture on the "Scroll of Time," at the Firemen's Hall. All are invited. Admission free.

The Wrong Name.—Among the names of Elders called at the last Conference to go on missions to the Eastern States was that of H. C. Heiselt. It should have appeared as C. Heiselt, the latter being the elder who was called.

Lost.—A small parcel containing two ladies' neckties was lost this morning on the north sidewalk of South Temple street, east of the Eagle Gate. The finder will confer a favor by leaving it at Z. C. M. I. for the owner.

Seventeenth Ward.—The work on the 17th Ward Assembly Rooms is progressing finely. The carpentering, plastering and painting on the second floor are finished, and the upholstering will be completed to-morrow. The dimensions of the hall are 51 feet long by 32½ feet wide. The ceiling is 17 feet from the floor, contains three centre roses, from which will depend six handy chandeliers, and is bordered by an elegant plastered cornice. On the south end of the hall are three stands, the centre one for the use of speakers, the others for sacramental and other purposes. There are six side windows, and three large doors in the entry way. The graining, ornamental plastering, &c., reflects credit on the artists, and the hall, when finished, will be one of the finest in the city. Religious services will probably be held there on the coming Sabbath.

The Sunflower.—The sunflower is a stranger in this region. Although not a thing of much beauty it is undoubtedly an efficient purifier of the atmosphere. This was, we understand, proved at the Observatory in Washington, at one time a very unhealthy locality, but was greatly improved by the liberal planting of sunflowers.

An exchange has the following good things to say about it:

"There is an idea common to cultivated as well as ignorant persons in the south, that the sunflower is a healthy plant to have about premises. The negro, about whose cabin you see them, will tell you: 'Dat keeps sickness away, sah!' The Russian variety, with white or light-colored seed, is considered the best. We have no doubt of the sanitary value of the plant, and prefer it to the Eucalyptus, for many reasons. The stalks abound in potash, the leaves are eagerly eaten by horses and cows, and greedily by poultry, and it is asserted that a small quantity of sunflower seed mixed with the food of a fowl, will impart a fine gloss to his fur, while it is a certain cure for gapes, if given immediately after the ailment is discovered. In the latter case about a pint of seed should be mingled with the oats or cornmeal fed, when a cure will be effected. As a sanitary plant, the results of experiments go to prove unquestionably that by cultivation of the sunflower many sections afflicted with fevers and kindred complaints arising from miasm, have been relieved. It is thought to be a disinfectant, absorbing quantities of moist and noxious gases, and exhaling an oxidized oxygen."

There are a number of persons in this city who use a decoction of sunflowers, to the exclusion of all other medicines, in cases of summer complaint, diarrhœa and dysentery, for which ailments they claim it to be a most efficacious remedy.

City Council. — The Council met last evening, Mayor Little presiding.

Petition of William B. Burton, of the 13th Ward, representing that his property was damaged by the passing through his lot of a water ditch, and asking the removal of that portion of the ditch. Referred to the water master.

The committee to whom were referred the petition of James Dwyer and others, asking for the planting of a row of shade trees and the erection of a fence on each side of the City Creek culvert, on North Jordan Street, recommended, for certain specified reasons, that the matter be deferred for the season; adopted.

The committee on claims reported adversely on the bill of A. H. Raleigh, for services as inspector of buildings during the fourteen months beginning January 15th, 1877, and ending March 15th, 1878, amounting to $137.50; adopted.

The special committee on locating for an artesian well reported that, in conjunction with the Mayor, they had selected a spot 45 rods north of the north fence of the new cemetery. The report was adopted and the committee discharged. Further action in the matter was placed in the hands of the superintendent of public works, who was also instructed to advertise and receive bids for boring for the proposed well.

An ordinance licensing and regulating the manufacture of spirituous and fermented liquors was read the first time and ordered printed.

An ordinance in relation to the inspection of buildings and to ordinance in relation to awnings and signs was also ordered to be printed.

The Council adjourned till next Tuesday evening, at 7 o'clock.

Scandinavian Mission.—We have been permitted to peruse a letter from Elder A. W. Carlson, written at Copenhagen, March 16th, to a friend in this city.

He is getting along well with the translation of the Book of Mormon into the Swedish language, being nearly half through with it. As the printing of it has, however, just been commenced, the work will occupy the whole of the coming summer.

The Copenhagen branch of the Church is quite large, and the meetings are numerously attended and quite interesting. A goodly number is being added to the Church in various parts of the country. The Saints are sometimes annoyed by bigoted people who are prejudiced against them. Lately, several traveling Elders have been arrested and fined for disposing of tracts, and one was lodged in jail for a few days. Still prejudice and its exhibitions are not so prevalent now as formerly. The people generally, of late years, have become more liberal in their views.

The health of Elder Soren P. Neve, who labors in the Copenhagen Conference, has, of late not been quite as good as usual.

A New Branch.—A new and somewhat important branch of home industry is likely to be soon started in this city. We refer to the manufacture of "Scagliona," or imitation marble. It can be made equal in beauty and nearly so in point of durability to the real article. From it tops for various kinds of furniture, shelving, mantle pieces, brackets, and many other things can be made. Plaster, with the requisite coloring, hardened by certain ingredients until susceptible of a fine polish, are the materials used in its production. The large fish slabs in use in the City of London, generally supposed to be real marble, are of this composite.

A man who resides at present in Kaysville, is a practical workman in the manufacture of "Scagliona." Messrs. Morris and Evans are endeavoring to secure his services. If successful they will erect a suitable shop at their yard in this city and set him to work. They have the raw material, principally gypsum, in abundance.

Utah Western Railroad. — In another part of the paper will be found a notice to the effect that possession of the Utah Western Railroad has been handed over to the holders of its mortgage bonds. Yesterday Royal M. Bassett, Esq., one of the trustees for the bondholders, visited the depot of the line, took formal possession of the road and notified the employes of his action.

The turning over of the property was amicable on both sides, the board of directors voting unanimously for the measure as the best course to take under existing circumstances.

The new owners of the road have done a prudent thing in securing the services of Mr. W. W. Riter, as agent in charge, he being a reliable gentleman of excellent business ability.

School Matters.—We learn, from the Junction that, on Monday evening, a meeting was held in the Ogden Tabernacle, in accordance with a call of the board of trustees for the school district. It was decided by unanimous vote of the meeting, that the levy for school purposes be one-fourth of one per cent. There were formerly three school districts in Ogden City, but, some time since, they were merged into one.

P. E. Fund.—There will be a meeting of the President and his assistants of the Perpetual Emigrating Fund, on Thursday evening, the 25th inst., at 7 o'clock, at the Council House.

More Snow.—Last night and in the fore part of to-day several inches of snow fell in this valley, and appearances indicate more of it before long. It did not long remain on the ground.

Shawl Found. — A shawl was found in the Second Ward, during the time of Conference. The owner can get it at this office.

Partial Muscular Development.

Any careful observer, passing along our busier thoroughfares, or happening into any country town on market day, or any where else where men congregate, can hardly have failed to notice that while there are many strong ones and many hearty ones, there are very few who are either thoroughly erect or well-proportioned throughout. And when it is remembered that the large majority of men in this country, are sons of farmers, merchants, mechanics, or laborers, it is not difficult to account for this one-sidedness of build and indifferent carriage. For, while the farmer's work is vigorous and in the open air, far the greater part of it, constantly uses his back, and does but little for his front, and particularly for the front of his chest. Mowing stoops him over and rounds his back, so do spading, and hoeing, and weeding, and lifting of every sort. His back grows thick and strong, perhaps massive, so do some of the muscles of his arms, of his abdomen, and of his legs, until they soon outstrip the others that his spine, getting once crooked from being so long and so firmly held in one position, never gets out of it, day or night. While his whole work strengthens, it also stiffens him. He is seldom a good walker, the habit of always hitching up, though the errand is to a place hardly a mile away, contributing to his stiffness, found, as it usually is, with an insecure position as he rides, so unlike, by the way, that which is so common among English stage-drivers, who elicited praise from Emerson for their dignified, grandfatherly air.

Few of the mechanic arts are any more favorable to symmetrical development and uprightness of carriage. The blacksmith, like the farmer, works some muscles tremendously; those of his hands, of one of his shoulders, and of one of his arms, for instance; but his legs are often indifferent, and his loins nothing great, while, in common with hosts of mechanics, his work is not done in the open air. Painters and plasterers have good wrists; carpenters plane and saw and drive nails well with their right hands; masons, with backs bent, lift heavy stones, which, with one of their hands, they have chiselled into shape for their purpose; shoe-makers hoop their backs rather more successfully than any other trade; and the jewellers, compositors, designers, and all who do the finer, lighter work, would never, merely by their daily toil, develop into well built, erect men, if they kept at it for a thousand years. Men in mercantile life sit or stand many hours each day, are frequently burdened with important and trying work, have so many irons in the fire as to get no rest, and at the end of the day find themselves thoroughly exhausted, and in humor for anything but vigorous muscular exertion. If their work calls them out much, it uses their legs only, leaving the arms idle, and so keeping the development but partial. The spade, the pick, and the bar of the laboring man keep him stooped over in spite of all he can do, and he lives and dies, as Charles Reade described him in his admirable sketch of the brave, blind swimmer of the Scottish firth, James Lambert—a man with a stoach in his gait.—WILLIAM BLAIKIE, in Harper's Magazine for May.
