THE EVENING NEWS.

Monday - - August 21, 1871.

[From Tinsley's Magazine.]

MY FIRST DINNER PARTY.

"Can't anything be done, aunt?" I asked in despair, as I finished my miserable narration.

"I at least shall not move in the affair," said my aunt, "and submit myself to the taunts of the haughty Mrs. Dalton. You may go and eat humble pie if you will."

I had never known my aunt so unfeeling before. The fact was this affair touched her to the quick, affecting as it did her weak point, her love of popularity, and her deference to the opinions of society. What miserable days those were that followed! I can smile at the remembrance now, but it was no smiling matter at the time. I dared not go out, lest I might meet any one who had been present on that fatal evening. And yet I dared not sit with my aunt, for every ring made me quake; and, besides, I could not face even any of her friends. So I shut myself up in my room, trying to engross my thoughts with the embroidering of a little frock I was doing for the baby, and longing intensely for the time when I might return to my own dear country home. As days passed away without our hearing anything further of the affair, I began to grow a little calmer, and was sitting sewing at my bedroom window with some degree of comfort one afternoon, about a week after my unlucky debut, when it was all dispelled by a resounding knock, which somehow made my heart jump with a presentiment of evil, and which was quickly followed by a message sent me from my aunt, saying Sir Harry Dalton had called and asked for me, and that she desired I would come into the drawing-room.

"Tell her I can't, Jane," I answered.

The servant departed, but returned with a still more urgent message.

"Mrs. Neville particularly wishes you to come in, miss."

"Say I am sorry to disoblige her, but I don't feel equal to it," I answered.

Jane looked astonished at my unwonted resistance to my aunt's authority, but, seeing I was determined, went her way. A long time I listened in breathless suspense, till at last I heard the hall door shut, and breathed freely once more. My aunt was very angry, as I expected, but I was resolved that no power on earth should induce me to face Sir Harry again. She was full of his praises—he was so handsome, so courteous, so full of sorrow for my distress, and so anxious to assure me that he fully understood the mistake.

"In fact, Mabel, I consider you are most fortunate in having fallen into such good hands. Of course I had to explain matters, and he indulged in a hearty laugh when he heard that you looked upon him as rather wrong in his head, but said that fully explained everything; and he is now only anxious to assure you how completely he is satisfied with my explanation. It seems too that your father is an old college friend of his; and on that account also he is desirous to renew your acquaintance. He will call again to-morrow, and then I really hope you will no longer act like a shy missish schoolgirl."

So spoke my aunt; but it was no good—even her stinging taunt failed to move me. I could not face Sir Harry. The more kind and considerate he was, the more hateful my conduct appeared to me. How I wished I had not given my adress till safe out of the precincts of Cumberland street! That officious footman must have remembered and reported my whereabouts to his master.

Sir Harry came again next day, and repeated his visits several times during the ensuing fortnight, and I remained a closer prisoner than ever to my room; till at last the unwonted confinement, and the continual worry from my aunt's scoldings and my own torturing reflections, began to tell upon my health. I had nervous headaches, lost my appetite, and began to look very wo-begone. Then my aunt grew frightened, and sent for Dr. Venn, and he, to my intense delight, ordered me home for rest and change of air.

O, how gladly I welcomed the dear old muddy roads and bare hedgerows, as Willie drove me along them from the station in our old-fashioned car. How safe I felt in my father's arms, how cheerful and content sitting with mother over the fire, with baby on my lap, and four or five other small urchins sitting down on the hearth-rug around us; while Kitty made the tea as gravely as though she were forty instead of fourteen, and the boys fought over the honor of carrying my baggage up stairs. There was no lack of appetite that night; we made the brown loaf and pats of butter disappear with startling rapidity. There were no worrying dreams as I laid my head on my pillow, and fell asleep between the lavender-scented sheets.

Why is it we cannot keep content with such simple pleasures? On that first night they seemed all-sufficing; but as days and weeks flew by, and I settled into the routine of the old life, teaching the little ones, mending their clothes, living, in short, the life of the eldest of a quiverfull, my thoughts began to turn back to the past; I often caught myself wondering whether the "marriage in high life" had yet taken place, and feeling it rather sad, as I reflected on Sir Harry's kind consideration for me, and especially on the words he had spoken to me in the boudoir, that I had not been born a rich heiress like my namesake. I tried to recall the glimpse I had had of the face of the lady in whose fly I had escaped; doubtless she was the intended bride.

It was a bright morning in February. The crocuses were peeping above the ground, the snowdrops were hanging their modest heads. Winter seemed gone for a while, as it often does in the valentine month, to return again with fiercer blast than ever in blustering March.

My father had been very much absorbed all breakfast time in a long epistle which seemed of grave and interesting import, and ever and anon as he read, I thought he glanced at me. At last he folded it and put it in his pocket, saying: "Mamma, I am expecting an old friend of mine here today on business, and I shall ask him to dine with us; see there is a tidy dinner. And you, Mabel, dress yourself and the little ones in your Sunday best. I want my old friend to see us at our bravest."

The coming of a visitor was a great event, so very retired was the life we led; so we all were high busy to obey our father's behest. I sent the little ones to forage for moss, and arranged a pretty centre vase with snowdrops and crocuses. My mother brought out her best china and plate; and with our rosy-cheeked apples and tall pears, we made a nice little dessert, to the great delight of the small fry. They were already decked in Sunday suits, and the whole thirteen were assembled awaiting the honored guest. Punctually as the clock struck one, we heard the swing of the garden gate, and the hearty tones of father's voice, as he said:

"So you like my church and surroundings! Now I am going to introduce you to the quiverfull which so excites your pity for your old friend."

Over Half a Million sold and in use!

SINGER'S

New Improved Silent

FAMILY SEWING MACHINES

ARE

The Best in the World,

Because all of them are in constant use, while a very large proportion of other makes are not used, owing to their being partially or utterly impracticable.

THE SINGER

NEW FAMILY MACHINE

Has been brought to perfection, regardless of time, labor or expense, and is now incomparably the best Sewing Machine in existence.

It is simple, compact, durable, beautiful, quiet, light-running, and capable of performing a range and variety of work never before attempted upon a single machine; using either Silk, Twist, Linen or Cotton Thread, and sewing with equal facility the very finest and coarsest materials, or anything between the two extremes, in the most beautiful and substantial manner.

The New Improved Attachments for Hemming, (any width) Braiding, Embroidering Magic Ruffling, Gathering and sewing on (at the same time) Self-Sewing, Cording, Tucking Quilting, Felling, Trimming, Binding, etc., are novel and practicable, and have been invented and adjusted especially for this Machine.

Folding Tops and Cabinet Cases.

New designs of the unique, useful and popular Folding Tops and Cabinet Cases, peculiar to the Singer Machine, are in every variety of Wood, such as black Walnut, Mahogany, Rosewood, Satinwood, and from the plainest to the most elaborate pattern and finish. The Machines themselves are plain or highly ornamented with pearl and gold to correspond with their tables or cabinets.

In the Singer the work is fed or passed through the Machine in the natural direction, namely, from the operator, permitting her to sit in a natural and healthy position. In many other Machines the work passes from right to left, or the reverse, compelling the operator to sit in a bent and unhealthy position, and thus causing weakness of the back, etc.

The Singer uses a SHORT STRAIGHT NEEDLE, which is not liable to break or miss the stitch. Many other Machines use a long crooked needle, which is liable to break and to miss the stitch.

In the Singer Machine the Shuttle is carried, thus avoiding nearly all wear. It requires no oil, and does not soil the thread or goods. Other Machines drive their Shuttles, in a race, thus causing great wear, and requiring oil, soiling the thread and goods.

On the Singer, the Tension on both the upper and lower threads is absolutely under the ready control of the operator, thus rendering the Machine always available for good sewing, which is not the case with any other. Many so-called cheap Machines are really worthless, and so are many of their new peculiarities and supposed advantages.

The SINGER is the Oldest Practical Sewing Machine,

Being about twenty years in the market. Having been constantly improved by the employment of the most skilled ingenuity of the age and unlimited capital, it is now divested of all unnecessary parts and possesses All the Very Latest Inventions and Improvements. It is the only Machine sold on Honest Claims, as all its parts are Practical and will do all that is claimed for them. Some other Machines are Greatly Complicated, to do Useless and Silly things, and thus are rendered Liable to Constant Derangement. The Singer Seldom or Never gives trouble, but is readily and easily managed by those who utterly fail on other Machines.

SINGER'S

New Manufacturing Machines

Claim the same advantages over others of their class as the new Family Machines. These old and well-tried Sewing Machines are applicable to all kinds of heavy and light manufacturing in Cloths, Leather, etc., and run in the most perfect and reliable manner without trouble to the operator.

HAVE ARRIVED!

A Full Assortment of those

Beautiful and Unrivaled MACHINES.

(The numbers on which show a manufacture of between Five and Six Hundred Thousand.) Consisting of the Different Varieties made by the Singer Manufacturing Company and we shall sell at Eastern Prices, with addition of Freight only. To accommodate parties who cannot pay all down, we will sell on

EASY MONTHLY INSTALMENTS

So that all may possess one of these Blessings.

For the convenience of our Patrons we have engaged the services of a gentleman who has had twenty years experience and is one of the most skillful experts in the world in repairing and adjusting Sewing Machines. He will put each Machine in complete and practical running order before it leaves the Institution and will also impart to purchasers all needful instruction, so that they can at once commence work.

We resort to no trickery whatever to sell Sewing Machines, but allow their Great Merits to recommend them. We can do this, as the demand for them is so great that although the Singer Company make more than all other first-class companies combined, they cannot nearly fill their orders, and are compelled to still extend their Gigantic Works.

We having been so fortunate as to secure the

General Central Agency,

For this Territory, we extend a cordial invitation to all to come and see the Machines, whether they wish to buy or not. See all others, but do not buy without you examine the Singer.

We Guarantee every Machine we sell to give entire satisfaction.
