OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH, SEPT. 5, 1895.

Public Schools.

Our public schools open on Monday, Sept. 9th. The school board has been thinking over the rules and has made some important changes, among which is one saying that "married women whose husbands are able to provide for them, will not be employed." Another is that "female teachers will not marry while in the employ of the board and are expected to resign at the close of the term." Still another, "Any teacher, who, by his or her conduct or by his or her words, is the cause of disturbing the harmony between teachers and pupils or impairing the efficiency of the school, shall be dismissed."

Notes.

Ogden is shipping a large quantity of fruit East. The Ogden Produce Co. ships two car loads of pears a week, the most of them being Bartletts.

Yesterday David Evans resigned as a Democratic state delegate. His reason are because the county convention adopted a rule that delegates will not be bound by any action that the state convention may take with regard to the naming of United States senators; that the Weber delegation are, by the same rule, instructed from voting upon the subject, and that individual delegates were unfitted to discuss the proposition in the state convention. Mr. Evans characterizes the action of the county convention as tyrannical and undemocratic. His resignation was not accepted.

LOGAN.

LOGAN, UTAH, SEPT. 4, 1895.

Political Work.

Mrs. Emmeline B. Wells and Mrs. Emma J. McVicar are labouring on the Republican party among the ladies of Cache county, and are organizing women's Republican clubs. They addressed a large audience of ladies in the Eccles Hall last evening, and organized a club which will be known as the "Wells Republican Club of Logan." Both ladies are pleasant speakers, and will be welcomed at their lectures.

Stung by a Scorpion.

John Perry, of Riverdale, was stung on the second finger of the right hand by a large scorpion, while in the act of picking up a bundle of straw which had been lying on the hot sand for some time. The morning the children were working in the grain at the time, and one of the men had a piece of twine tightly around his finger. Parson then took seven bales in Perry's team, where the finger was opened and the poison extracted.

Broke her Arm.

Robert Crozier, and family, of Salt Lake, are visiting Logan. On Monday afternoon Mr. Crozier's little daughter was out riding with Mr. C. H. Lewis and family, and by an unexpected jerk, while crossing a ditch, was thrown out of the carriage. She alighted on the elbow joint of her left arm with such force as to cause a compound fracture.

Notes and Personals.

HOLDER RUN INTO EXPENSIVE JOKE.

How he Secured the Company and Publication of an Elderly Prankster.

After Richard, prince of Wales, is perhaps the most popular man in England. This popularity is due to his love of sports and all made to his which are personal characteristics in the eyes of his average Britisher. As a youth he admiring and appreciative of a joke, whether it be perpetrated on royalty or commoner, and he has a propensity for playing it himself, more well known.

One of his earliest pranks is related in her memoirs by a queen having a bill for broken crockery and glassware brought to her by the proper officer of the house of court of the royal members of the household. A rather elderly woman whose quick temper and sharp tongue were as well known as her generosity was first selected for a victim. The prince, taking a certain bale of the merchandise of the old lady, had taken, modified to suit her circumstances, to conceal himself in disguise at her lodgings, and applied for the position of footman.

The woman had just secured her breakfast, and was pouring for herself a large cup, when the prince entered the apartment to bring letters for the mistress. The prince was dressed without the slightest attempt at disguise, and looked him over from top to bottom.

Apparently pleased with the appearance of the young man, she said, "Let me see you walk."

Accordingly, the prince did as commanded and walked backward and forward two or three times on the floor from one end of the room to the door, now walking lously at the request of the old lady and then posing stately, as she stood by the door to see his profile.

The performance over, the mistress ordered him to rest. The dining room and the remains of setting the prince seated around a second time. When the exercise was completed he made a bow and walked from the room of the room, where the mistress was seated. Her lordship seating himself and was just sitting down to a cup of tea when the door opened and the prince stood before her in a bow.

"Now, sir, be quick!"

Drawing a corner of the tablecloth firmly in one hand, the prince raised around the room, pulling the cloth off on the floor in a heap, breaking over the furniture and dishes, leaving the fragments and dirty wrapping for belonging to the folks of the child. He then joined for the door, leaving the mistress sputtering and shrieking and the servants astonished at a disturbance of any kind. Outside four soldiers and quickly lost sight of.

In the kitchen and outhouses the prince escaped. The men say a check from the anger of the party parts settled the amount of the damages and the prince was satisfied the lesson of the mischief maker.—New York Herald.

Some Everyday Mistakes.

Current natural history is sometimes very amusing. An observant country boy can give you more reliable information in half an hour than many of the writers who are accepted as authority. The examples of the Bluebird of the latter have been going the rounds. One was an article in the recent, which was described in the very strong terms with a delicate appetite. Anyone who is in reality has one that is more tender, and that is the orchard. The orchard has a robust taste for almost anything, especially fruit, some better, and it is very determined to satisfy. A Salt Lake lawyer had his best cherries eaten up, and the writer remembers one visiting in a large where the bells had been rolled and injured. The paper hung here and there, due to the pockets that pecked through to get at the pests that had been used for the paper hangers.

Another story was of the scarecrow well covered of a man who discovered that a black snake had concealed itself in the packed straw, which he had thrown aside in the fall, and dropped upon, very sensible without discovering the reptile. Then it could was surprising, as it generally does, for to live for in length and an angler, and not a snake, and the snake, the most common wildlife show is or harmless as the toad, and, moreover, is extremely sociable. Its greatest fault is its attractiveness of being loved—the lovely of its species which not in its vicinity or which it has made its home, and carry one in each pocket and come to see them. If the toads were large enough and if to dot and have the in the habit of sitting in the lap toward regards.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

AND A JOKE ON AN EARTHQUAKE.

The Surprise Produced by an Elephant Running Away.

Nothing but a joke on an earthquake could be compared to the sensation of being run down by an elephant. Nothing more his world rush, and he does not source for an obstacle, but goes straight at it. A few inches thing off crowding on his back, and the rider has lost a second or two in which to make up his mind which overhanging branch he will clinge to if he will end throwing himself off. A broken neck would be the certain consequence of remaining. As for stopping him, somebody has well said that you might as well try to stop a runaway locomotive by pulling with your walking stick on the funnel or to check an elephant on such a moment with the goad.

By striking an elephant's leg in a certain manner you can make it put him a large grandfather till the earth shakes beneath your feet. When it is afraid or angry, it squeals like an insulted hinge. But when it suddenly jumps aside like a flea you imagine for a moment that the ultimate terrestrial cataclysm has gone off.

The Malays never wholly trust their elephants and were anxious to try familiarities with mine, a sweet tempered old female to which I made introducts of bits, and Dorlie, the keeper, I used to call her up, and she would come and stand with one foot on each side of my chest so I lay on my back and fed her with bananas. I was never angry with her for once, when she tried to kill the cook.

On one occasion a little elephant of our party, running behind the anchor, teased her beyond endurance, and she turned and gave him a shove that landed him fast upon a pile of the bottom of a deep brook. For two hours he struggled like a steam winnie while we were all engaged in getting him out.

Every night when we reached camp and the beds were taken off each driver thought bubble his head by tying to front legs together with rattan so that it could only hop with both together. Then a large wooden bell was hung around its neck, and it was turned loose to wander in the jungle. All night long the faint tinkling of the bell would be heard, and full known around the camp. At daybreak each driver tracked his elephant by the sound, when going merry miles for him.

In wealth Pennsylvania ranks next to New York, having an assessed valuation of $1,033,458,016, owing largely to the enormous manufactures carried on within the limits of this commonwealth.

The total acreage of all the farms in the United States is 623,218,619, of which 357,615,715 are improved or under cultivation, and 265,601,904 acres remain uncultivated.
