THE OHIO CONVENTION.

Senator Sherman Eulogizes the Republican Party.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 17.—Immediately after the close of McKinley's stirring speech there was loud cries of "Sherman, Sherman." The familiar figure of the senior Senator of Ohio finally emerged from the crowd in the rear of the hall, and again the enthusiastic scenes of the convention were re-enacted. In his speech Senator Sherman eulogized the Republican party, reviewing its work from the time of its inception. Continuing, Sherman said:

"We therefore can honestly claim that our party has been the faithful servant of the people, and is fairly entitled to their confidence and support, but we do not rest our claims upon this fact alone. We invite the strictest scrutiny into the conduct of the present Republican administration of Benjamin Harrison.

The recent Republican Congress, in connection with President Harrison, dealt with all the leading domestic questions of the time and with the most important questions with foreign nations. Every one of these has either been settled or is in the way of settlement. The administration of Cleveland settled nothing but the nomination of Cleveland, his opposition to a protection policy, his want of sympathy for Union soldiers, and his narrow notions of finance and public credit. He devised nothing and accomplished nothing. The Democratic House passed the Mills tariff bill, but it was rejected by the Senate and by the people in the election of 1888. In market contrast with this are the Republican administration of Harrison and the recent Republican Congress.

EVERY IN IMPORTANCE

was the entire revision of our revenue laws. This bill was subjected to the most careful scrutiny in both houses, and passed as a Republican measure, and was approved by the President. It is in my judgment a wise law and will test the most careful scrutiny. It is a fair law for it extends its benefits not only to the states but to the farmer and producer in every field of employment. By my long experience in passing upon the tariff bill, I believe the McKinley bill most carefully and beneficially protects the farmer in its production than any previous measure of the kind and its inevitable effect in encouraging manufactures will give to the farmer the best possible market for his crops. The bill has been received and will bear discussion, and will improve on acquaintance. The new bounties of the bill relating to sugar and its plate will soon demonstrate the most satisfactory results. The increased duty soon to be put upon its plate will develop and has already developed its fruitage in several States and territories, so that our country may hope in a short period that we will be awakened by unlaced home sugar and protected by unlaced tin plate.

THE ARM OF THE DEMAGOGUE

which were at the last election played upon the credulous to deceive them as to the effects of the McKinley bill, will soon return to plague the inventors, and this Republican measure with its blasted measures—reciprocity and tin plate—may be American objects will be among the boasted triumphs of our party to which our Democratic friends will, as usual, heartily acquiesce. The state of Ohio is an important factor in this great Union of States and the people of Ohio are Republican. The State is one that has taken a conspicuous part in the great drama of the past. In an evil hour and under will delusions Ohio elected the recent Democratic legislature. Which this winding lesson to let us not be backward or laggard in the civic contest in November, but with a ticket worthy of our choice let us appeal to our fellow citizens to place again our honored State at the head of the Republican column. [Cheers.]

Senator Sherman, referring to the currency question, spoke at some length, saying, "People want

GOOD MONEY AND PLENTY OF IT.

They want all their money of equal value, so that a dollar will be the same whether made of gold, silver or paper. The demand for free coinage of silver without a limit is a demand that the people of the United States shall pay for silver bullion more than its market price, so that the silver cost not to be made by a producer of any commodity. There is no justice or equity in it. If granted by the United States alone it will demonetize gold and derange all the business transactions of our people. There is no power strong enough to establish a fixed ratio of value except by the concurrence of the commercial nations of the world. What we ought to do, and what we do now under the silver law of the last Congress, is compelled by the necessity of the commercial world. We have a right to buy the entire product of silver mined in the United States at its market value, and upon the security of that silver deposited in the treasury issue treasury notes to the full amount of most of the bullion. In this way we aid mentally to our national currency circulation notes of undoubted value, equal to gold, to an amount equal to or greater than the increase of our population and increasing business of our growing country."

The committee on resolutions then reported which was adopted. For lieutenant-governor, Andrew L. Harris of Preble county was nominated on the first ballot.

The platform reaffirms adhesion to the principles which have guided the Republican party heretofore, to the doctrine of protection and recognizes the McKinley bill as the most explicit expression of that principle; such legislation by Congress as will encourage and protect the interests of agriculture and the protection of labor and the right of laborers is favored, protection for the wool industry is demanded, the amended coinage act of the last Republican Congress by which the entire production of the silver mines of the United States is coined into the currency is endorsed; the free and unfettered exercise of the ballot is demanded as is also the enactment of laws to protect the country and people against the influx of the vicious and criminal classes of foreign nations and imported laborers, so long other things favored an economy in the administration of the Nation and State; restraint of combinations of capitalists for unlawful purposes or at variance with sound public policy; ample educational facilities, the reservation of the public lands for homesteads for American citizens, and the reclamation to the public domain of all unearned railroad grants, liberal pension for sailors and soldiers of the late war and a generous care of their widows and children.

The patriotism, wisdom and ability of the administration of President Harrison, and especially the policy of reciprocity and a vigorous foreign policy, is commended, and President Harrison is congratulated upon the selection of Charles Foster as Secretary of the Treasury.

The administration of Governor Campbell was denounced, and the Ohio Legislature, and that of Governor Foraker held up in comparison as one to be proud of.

The state nominations are as follows: Attorney-General, J. K. Richards; auditor, W. T. Coe; supreme judge, Marshall J. Williams; sailor, E. W. Poe; member board of public works, Charles F. Groce; State school commissioner, O. T. Corson.

WASHINGTON ITEMS.

The Governor of Ohio Goes to Europe in the Interest of the World's Fair.

WHY THE VESSELS WERE DETAINED.

The "Thetis" Leaves for Alaska.—The "Corwin" on Her Way to Behring Sea.

By Telegraph to the News.

THE NAVAL VESSELS

Detained to Receive Some Additional Instructions.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The governor of Ohio has been appointed agent of the treasury department to visit Europe in the interest of the World's Columbian exposition.

It is learned at the navy department that the naval vessels which were hold dispatched yesterday in Behring sea were detained over night to receive some supplemental instructions. These, it is said, concern matters of detail, and are intended to insure uniform and harmonious action between the State, treasury and navy departments officials. These charges relate more particularly to the treatment of poachers after seizure. The vessels were all underway yesterday afternoon, to sail at once, and it is supposed that they have started before now. The "Thetis" will proceed at once to Sand Point to notify all sealing vessels found at that rendezvous to keep out of Behring sea under penalty of seizure and prosecution. The reverse order "Corwin" and other naval vessels will proceed direct to Behring sea and assist the revenue cutters "Bear" and "Rush" in the establishment of an effective patrol of that territory.

In compliance with orders from Washington, the warship "Thetis" left San Francisco this morning for Alaska.

The "Mohican" this afternoon went to Mare Island to take on coal. Revenue cutter "Corwin" left about noon for Behring sea. It will be ten or twelve days before the United States vessels will be well north, and as the sealing season opens June 1st, the poachers will have had nearly a month's time before receiving the proclamation.

The fire swept over an area containing thirty acres of buildings, and the people are still contracted with terror and cannot tell the amount of their losses. The summer cottagers have responded quickly to their needs for aid. They already have subscribed about $5000. All the wires are down and the streets are filled with half burned furniture and other debris. The relief committee telegraphed to Governor Abbot and Quartermaster General Donnelly asking them to have the tents made for the temporary shelter of the sufferers. Eugene Kelley's statesman has been arrested on a charge of starting the fire. People threaten to lynch him.

BALLOONING IN ASIA.

AERONAUT BALDWIN'S QUEER EXPERIENCE.

T. S. Baldwin, the aeronaut who has just come back from various Oriental countries, succeeded in thoroughly astonishing the Mongolian race by his balloon ascents. Mr. Baldwin has traveled extensively in Asia. He has looked down from mister on the temples of Delhi, the wharves of Calcutta and the jungles of Burmah and other Oriental regions rarely trained to the ascendement of balloon ascensions. It was not until a few months ago that the daring San Francisco aeronaut resolved to explore China as far as it is possible to do so, and with his brother and wife, he began to gather in the small change of the Mongolian sightseers.

The aeronaut's experiences were generally of the most pleasant character for the pig-tailed patrons responded enthusiastically and the novel entertainment set all China agog. The attendance at some of the exhibitions in the large seaport cities was enormous. The aeronaut found some difficulty in obtaining suitable places for corralling the cash of the native populace, for bound grounds are not to be had, and in most places the customs was made by a rope and the assistance of the native police. The Mongolian dealt hard low a mere wholesome dread of the official guardian of the peace than his American confrere, and few persons ventured inside the rope circle without paying the admission fee. The usual price charged was 20 cents for the inner circle, 20 cents for the intermediate and $2 for the inner ring. The aeronaut found the world Chinese perfectly willing to pay this stiff tax. The only trouble was that every pig-tailed swell brought a retinue of servants with him, and the Mongolian aristocrats strutted in to see the show the army of retainers, from his august master to his grand high chamberlain, took up most of the direct circle.

Baldwin gave his first exhibition at Hongkong, and the native shouts and yells that greeted his ascent were only exceeded by the amazement of the man met his brother when he came flying back to earth with a parachute. In all the towns the balloon proved the greatest attraction ever brought to the celestial land by the bearded white devils from foreign parts.

Having soon dissipated their minds of any lurking belief that the white balloonists were possessed of supernatural powers, the Chinese set to work to imitate the aerial adventurers. Hundreds of Mongolians broke various portions of their anatomy from their necks to their legs by trying to descend from lofty temples and towers with the parachutes constructed out of native umbrellas. Toy balloons, constructed with great skill and attention to detail by natives, became parts of the game of the hours.

At Foo Chow a native genius constructed a monstrous hot-air balloon, with flaming head and great paper wings, and made an ascension which will be long remembered by his townsmen. Baldwin gave six his exhibitions with inflammable balloons, that style of imitation being cheap, quick out and otherwise most acceptable to a skilled aeronaut for such work as was there required. The simple method of expanding the balloon passed the native imitators, and the Foo Chow genius copied everything to a nicety, except the important point of how to cut loose at the proper moment without accident. The result was that the balloon, which was of enormous size, shot up with quite terrific speed, an expected velocity that it carried with it a score or so of the Mongolians who were studying it with the gay pipes while the aeronaut was getting ready to cut loose. The great bag of air kept scattering Mongolians over the suburbs of Foo Chow until it turned a regular fire balloon, being properly labeled, and fell into one of the large ponds in the outskirts of the city. This adventure had a very depressing effect on the native aspirants, but the means had taken too firm a hold to be eradicated by any ordinary incident of the mortality sort, and when Mr. Baldwin left China for Japan, pig-tailed accounts were regularly scattering through space in various sections of the celestial empire.

The Japanese took almost as enthusiastically to the sport as the Chinese and native institutions appeared in a short time. From Japan the American aeronaut traveled along the southern coast of Asia, through India, and to Madagascar. At Suicabie he heard of a Frenchman who had made the trip before him, the aeronaut, who stumbled through the hatchway of a ship and fractured his skull by the heavy fall.

The "Alvo" also brought news of the rumored shooting of President Hippolyte. This rumor was freely circulated in Jacmel and outlying towns on the 6th of June. Prince, when the "Alva" left the former port on June 9th. The rumor could not be confirmed by the people on the "Alva" before she left Jacmel, but it was discredited.

The populace of Jacmel was in a terrible excitement over what they termed an outrageous murder, which had occurred the day before. When news of the slaughter at Port-au-Prince reached Jacmel many citizens violently denounced Hippolyte. Six of them were arrested and went sent to Hippolyte. A squad of soldiers took the news to Jacmel, took out the six unfortunates and shot them to death in the public square in the presence of their friends and relatives. After leaving Jacmel, the "Alva" touched at Navassa island and there again heard rumors of Hippolyte's assassination. The steamer "Kearsage" was also met there, her commander having heard the news and being on his way to Port au Prince.

In New York this evening the Haytian minister, Price, and the officials of the steamship company denied there was any truth in the rumor.

Mate Bishop, of the steamship "Alva," which arrived from Hayti today, states that June 9, a vessel which had been at Port au Prince during the troubles, had reached Navassa and reported President Hippolyte shot and killed by one of the insurgents.

World's Fair Matters.

CHICAGO, June 17.—At today's meeting of the local World's fair directors executive commission the director general's recommendation for the appointment of Commissioner Forsythe as chief of the department of horticulture was read. The matter of salary was referred to the finance committee, and the personal selection was left to agriculture with instructions to report at the next meeting of the board of directors, Friday.

A memorial was presented to the local directory of the World's fair this evening signed by J. C. Vaughan, chairman, resulting a meeting of horticulturists held today, at which representatives of the Illinois State board of agriculture and several different horticultural societies of Illinois were represented. Resolutions were adopted protesting against the confirmation of Forsythe as chief of the horticultural bureau, saying he does not represent American horticulture. Also protesting against the present classification which has been formed by the national commission and saying, this classification, giving eight separate classes for wines and beverages, with but four to horticulture, is unfair, unjust and unsatisfactory to the horticulturists of the country. It was therefore resolved that in the event of the confirmation of Forsythe or of any other objective man, and especially one pledged to this unjust classification, "we are without hope of making in the main building a representative exhibit of American horticulture; and we will use our influence in every possible manner to confine our exhibits to our State buildings and will invite our sister States to do likewise, as we cannot and will not destroy the prospects for meritorious exhibition by endorsing a man and classification which concerts horticulture with, and makes subordinate to displays of wines and beverages. We are pledged to no candidate and simply ask that the competency of the chief be unquestioned."
