PROVO.

PROVO, UTAH, - JAN. 12, 1894.

U. S. Commissioner's Court.

William Ashworth of Heberville was yesterday before Commissioner Dusenbury on the charge of unlawful cohabitation. He pleaded not guilty and waived preliminary examination. He was bound over to await the action of the grand jury in the sum of $500, and Emma Ashworth, the alleged plural wife, in a like sum.

Dr. Alfred L. Ely and Tonnie Wiggenland were arrested at Orem by Deputy Marshal Menor, on a warrant issued by Commissioner Greenman, charging adultery. They were brought to Provo and taken before Commissioner Dudley. They waived preliminary examination and were bound over in the sum of $500 each to appear before the grand jury.

Dr. Ely is an Oneida. He came to Utah last summer and married at Onida. At Deseret he met Mrs. Wegeland. She was a married woman, it is claimed, but had been deserted by her husband. Since that time, it is alleged, the two have lived together as man and wife.

Notes.

The Tabernacle choir on Wednesday evening gave a party and banquet in honor of a number of members who have lately joined the ranks of married people. Over 150 people participated.

Patti Rosa appears at the Opera House on Saturday evening in Dixie.

ELIZABETH DANIELS!

Your Brother in New Zealand Wants to Hear From You.—Biographical Notes.

OGDEN CITY, UTAH, Jan 12th, 1894.

Editor Deseret News:

I have just received a letter from Elder Thomas L. Cox, of the New Zealand mission. The letter is dated Owaka, Catlin River, Otago, New Zealand, November 23, 1893. He asks for information which he hopes can be obtained through the columns of the DESERET NEWS. He says: "In my travels lately I met with a man who said he had a sister, a Latter-day Saint, who left England for America about September, 1845. He had in his possession a few letters which his sister had written to the family since leaving her home. He has handed them to me to read, with a request that I would try to find out something of her or his family, as he has entirely lost track of them. The first letter was dated Liverpool, England, Sept. 11th, 1845; the second was dated St. Louis, Mo., April 12, 1846, in which she spoke of not understanding a man named Smith.

The next letter was dated at Council Bluffs, Iowa, on June 9, 1850. At that time she was preparing to move the Saints to Utah. It is supposed that Samuel Smith was at that time dead, for she had been married again to a man named Cutts—she signed herself Elizabeth Matthew Cutts (her maiden name was Elizabeth Daniels). The last letter received from her was dated Salt Lake City, April 1, 1856. She was then well and happy, though not rich. It appears the family address in England was: Mr. Daniels, No. 12, West Easton street, Clerkenwell, London. Her brother's name is James Dunlaig. he is in New Zealand, and is very anxious to learn, if possible, the whereabouts of his long lost sister.

Elder Cox is president of the Otago conference, and speaking of his labors in the ministry there, he says: "Elder Peterson and I have been about 1 last winter laboring in Balclutha, Milton, and the surrounding country. We have been very successful in getting the people to open their several homes and churches for us to preach in. In some other places where we were unable to obtain such places, we have had halls to hold services in, and in nearly all cases the people come out in large numbers to hear us. Since being in this vicinity we have, within the last few months, held from four to five meetings each week. These meetings are always held in the evening, and we have to walk all distances from six to twelve miles to attend them.

"After the services are over we return our steps homward, arriving there at all hours of the night. We feel happy in doing this because it is apparent that we are doing some good, and whereas the people had previously been filled with prejudice towards us on account of evil reports spread abroad concerning us, after they have heard us preach they become very much changed in their views, and we are now treated with great respect by the people in this vicinity. We anticipate good results from our labors in the near future. While the last three months we have held fifty meetings among those who do not belong to the Church. We live like Paul did—in our own rented house, and expect to do so for several months to come."

Elder Cox's health is good and he experiences much pleasure in his missionary labors.

Yours in the Gospel,
JOSEPH HALL.

Raising Calves.

The chief objection to calf rearing are proper housing and feeding. The first being indispensable to profitable rearing and comparatively easy to secure in all localities, the last condition still exists of but little modification, and is thought to be the greatest impediment. Young creatures are large, roomy boxes, well lighted, well ventilated, well drained, with a southern aspect and having in addition an inclosed yard for exercise on favorable occasions.

As to feeding, it is impossible to lay down any rules, which to suit calf petted are over-indulging. Taken from its dam at about a week old, the first duty is to teach it to drink milk, which requires to be fed several times a day at first in small quantities at a proper temperature, any deviation from which produces an immediate ill effect and is very frequently to be closely guarded against for a calf once started would prove to allowed to live on cold milk. A small shed of oats, a handfuled sweet hay and a small quantity of meal mixed with a little salt, all placed within easy reach of the calf, will serve to induce the taste of the calf, and when the calf has taken to the food, it may be advisable to increase the quantity of meal in proportion to the accompanied by a corresponding increase of the quantity of hay and bruised oats.

It will always be observed that a calf placed in company with older and more advanced ones will take to feeding much more quickly than those placed alone. Having so far alluded as to general management from my mother the milk will be gradually changed to other food until absolutely only is fed. In respect to the use of skimmed or separated milk, the dangers we have obtained by the use of such, especially antiseptics, for which all form of disease a decided preventative. In conjunction with the food and chaff a few roots and juicy stems are given for which they will quickly relish a cooling thing, and in proportion to the quantity of this consumed the milk thereand demand will be correspondingly increased.—James E. Spence in Country Gentleman.
