A Railway Company's Appeal.

In the Supreme Court yesterday afternoon was heard an appeal from the First District Court in the case of Wm. V. Hoffrich, administrator of the estate of Patrick O'Hare, respondent, vs. Ogden City Railway Company, appellant. The administrator sued the defendant company for $20,000 arising out of the death of Patrick O'Hare who, it is claimed, lost his life while in the employ of the appellant corporation through its negligence. The deceased was an engineer on a motor and while looking out of the cab window toward the rear of the train struck his head against an electric light pole which was only twelve inches distant from the track, killing him instantly. Plaintiff and respondent alleged that defendant and appellant were negligent in allowing this pole to remain where it was and proved in the lower court that it was part of the duty of an engineer to watch his train and engine and that he could not do it properly without putting his head outside. Defendants and appellants set up that O'Hare was aware of the pole being near the track and was alone responsible. The jury before whom the case was tried awarded Mrs. O'Hare $5000 and from this the company now appeals.

After arguments had been made by Messrs. Smith & Smith and Judge Powers, for the respective parties, the case was submitted.

An Injunction Modified.

In the matter of the injunction obtained by the Old Jordan Mining Company against the Niagara Mining and Smelting Company, of Bingham, Judge Zane yesterday afternoon modified the order so to permit the Niagara Co. to continue operations.

The facts of the case are these: In the suit—brought some time since—the plaintiff set forth that it owned lot 64 in West Mountain mining district, and that the defendant company, disregarding the prior right of plaintiff, wrongfully began working the plaintiff's property by taking therefrom 10,000 tons of ore, valued at $5 per ton. Plaintiff asked for a restraining order and for judgment in the sum of $50,000 and costs.

Judge Zane, in the early stage of the proceedings, granted an order prohibiting defendants from working in the vein, but yesterday, upon a showing made by defendants, made the above modification.

The trial of the case will come up at the next term of the Third District Court.

KELLNER'S ANSWER

To the Suit Brought Against Him by Claflin & Co.

HIS CONFIDENCE IN LEDERER.

The Defendant Enters Into a Full Explanation.

S. Kellner, the dry goods merchant of Main street, whose failure occurred a few weeks ago, yesterday afternoon, in the Third District Court, filed his answer to the suit of H. B. Claflin & Company. The document is a very lengthy one, but its salient points are these: Mr. Kellner asserts that none of the four notes given by him to the plaintiff prior to his failure are now due, and that plaintiff has no legal claim or demand against him for any sum whatever. The answer then denies that the life insurance policy of Kellner, which was assigned, was of little value, but had a cash value of $400, also denies that the stock of goods at the time were worth what it came to $40,000 and alleges that they were worth $25,000. Taxes, together with real estate, accounts and cash on hand at the time of the assignment were worth $29,000.24. Defendant admits that Lederer took real into possession of the property so assigned, and was disposing of the goods at retail, but he was preparing to sell the goods in job lots and by auction as soon as it could be done to the best advantage. The answer denies that Lederer is wholly impecunious, that at the time of the assignment Kellner knew him to be from Deseret, or that he came to Salt Lake from Wyoming at the instance of Kellner for the purpose of accepting said assignment, or that Kellner selected him to act as assignee, when he knew that Lederer was without means, with intent to hinder and delay or defraud his creditors, or that he fraudulently intended to place his property in the hands of Lederer to compel the plaintiff and the unpreferred creditors to settle their claims for less than they were justly entitled to, or upon such terms as he might dictate. The answer goes on to state that Kellner sent to Denver for Lederer to come on and accept a position in his store. Kellner knew Lederer had been engaged in the mercantile business and believed he had considerable means of his own. He honestly believed that the selection of Lederer was for the best interests of all parties, and his poverty—if he was poor—was no disgrace to him nor any valid objection to his acting as assignee.

On the eve of making the assignment Kellner learned that Lederer was still a poor, but responsible man, and was informed by his attorneys that poverty alone was not a bar, as he was appointed. The defendant admits that on January 9 Lederer was requested to give a bond of $10,000 for the production of the property by the assignee was informed by the attorneys that he was not under any obligation to do so, and not desiring to burden his friends unless there was necessity, he refused to give the bond, but not to shirk any responsibility, if it could be retained. Defendant alleges that he was approached by a man named Shelly, who claimed to represent the plaintiffs, and that the conversation in regard to a settlement was with him. He denies that he attempted to exercise a right that would jeopardize the interests of the creditors by placing his property in the hands of an irresponsible person, or that by placing his property in the hands of Lederer he has perverted a fraud upon his creditors. Wherefore defendant asks for a dismissal, with costs, that the order appointing a receiver be rescinded and that the possession of the property be again given to Mr. Lederer.

Marshall & Hoyle are the defendant's attorneys.

During yesterday afternoon, in the office of the Third District Court, another suit was placed against Mr. Kellner. In this action John V. Farwell & Co., of Chicago, are the plaintiffs and Reilly & Kane are the attorneys. The complaint alleges that at various times prior to December 9th last the defendant purchased goods from plaintiff, the total amount being $12,941.39, of which only $4,959.85 has been paid, leaving a balance of $8,080.55 due on December 9th. Plaintiff prays judgment for that amount, with interest on the same.

M. I. A. Conference.

The semi-annual conference of the Mutual Improvement Association of the Millard Stake convened January 10th and 11th, at Fillmore. There were present on the stand President Matthew Thompson and first and second counselors Frank Hinckley and O. M. Hanson. Excellent instructions were given by President Hinckley, Brother W. E. Rydalch, S. S. Bishop and President William Thompson. A report of the Y. M. I. A. throughout the Stake was given by President Shannah Robson.

The second session convened at 2 p.m.

The reports of the various stations were then presented. Brothers Daniel Thompson and Frank Hinckley also addressed the congregation. There was a musical entertainment in the evening. A very interesting programme was rendered, in which the several associations took part.

The third session convened on Sunday, Jan. 11th, at 10 a.m. The remainder of the associations were then reported. The speakers were Professor Hickman, Brother Rydalch and Brother Stephenson, Bishop of Hinckley. The general topic was a warning to the young to realize their position in regard to the gospel of Christ, and to take advantage of the opportunities afforded.

The last session convened at 2 p.m. After the sacrament had been administered Brother M. H. Hardy gave some valuable instructions, and explained the "general intellectual reading course" for the young.

Brother Hardy held a council meeting in the evening, at which he instructed the various officers regarding their organizations, the kind of programmes to be introduced and generally, he also explained the officers to be present in the opening and closing. Many other points were dealt with which have the effect of reanimating and improving the Mutuals in this Stake.

SUPREME COURT.

A Railway Company's Appeal Against the Verdict of a Jury.

This was another quiet day in the Supreme Court. It had been thought very probable that the judges would this morning announce their decision in the Franklin Avenue Theatre case, and with this expectation a goodly number of persons were present when court was formally opened. It soon became evident, however, that there was no such intention on the part of the Bench, and upon the next case in order on the docket being called on by the Chief Justice, the spectators gradually filed out of the court room, leaving behind only two or three attorneys whose professional duties necessitated their remaining, and a corresponding number of onlookers.

DAMAGE AGAINST A RAILWAY CO.

Albert Rose (plaintiff and respondent for whom Hayden appeared) vs. the Pacific Pacific Railroad Co., defendants and appellants, who were represented by Marshall & Hoyle.

Plaintiff's allegation was that on November 14th, 1887, while in the service of the defendant company as a trainman, he was seriously injured at Hiles Junction station, Box Elder County, Utah, through the company "negligently and carelessly" running one of its locomotives, in charge of its employe Hyde, into a car which he was coupling to be transported, and in the absence of an engineer, to be hoisted upon the elevator, which was then employed and force that he was caught between the engine referred to and that attached to the train on which he was working. The plaintiff, who is 23 years of age—but one of his hands and sustained other bodily injuries, as a consequence of the accident and as compensation claimed damages in the sum of $25,000.

In their answer the defendants denied the allegations of plaintiff both as to negligence and incompetency of the man in charge of the engine at the time of the accident. Contributory negligence on plaintiff's part was also charged.

The case was tried in the winter of 1890, but the jury disagreed. It was re-tried on May 26th, in the following year, and a verdict returned for $12,000 in favor of the plaintiff. It was against this and the subsequent judgment in accordance therewith that the appeal now made to the Territorial Supreme Court.

The arguments were made by Attorney Marshall on the one side and Attorney Hawkins on the other, after which the case was submitted.

FIRE AT NEPHI.

Mayor Hague's Residence Narrowly Escapes Destruction by the Fire Fiend.

What might have been a very serious and damaging fire broke out at the residence of Mayor Hague the other evening while the members of the family were engaged in their usual occupations in different parts of the house. The smell of smoke happening to attract the attention of Mrs Hague, wife in the sitting room, she immediately proceeded to investigate the matter and soon located the fire—for such it proved to be—in the library, the south central room in the building. She found the room full of smoke, and immediately gave the alarm, which soon brought the other members of the household to the scene, armed with buckets of water, by the aid of which they soon succeeded in extinguishing the flames. This was not accomplished, however, until considerable loss had been sustained through injury to many valuable books which happened to be lying on the centre table where fire first originated. Even the large family Bible came in for a share of injury, although the damage to it was but slight compared to other valuable volumes. The damage in dollars and cents was but trifling, covering in all probably fifty or sixty dollars, which amount will be paid by the Hartford Connecticut Fire Insurance Company, and the Royal of Liverpool, England, with whom the dwelling and furnishings are fully insured.

The fire is supposed to have originated from the charred end of a match which was found in the depths of a big Mrs. Hague was in the room, a half hour before, looking for a book which she believed could be found in a moment. Mrs. Hague says she is always so careful about fire that she is almost at a loss to know if it could possibly have been started from the match which she carried, as that was taken from the room after it had been extinguished. Not finding the book which she expected to, Mrs. Hague returned to the sitting room and procured a lamp which was returned to its place after her second visit to the library, and this fact makes the origin of the fire all the more doubtful, as she noticed nothing unusual in the room when leaving it lamp in hand.

Scarcely a week or even a day passes by which does not furnish with it some new and convincing proof that no pains should be spared in completing the work of the fire department and training the brigade for active service. We fear that this matter has been treated too carelessly in the past, and that few, if not all, of us ever give it the serious reflection than a passing thought which forces itself upon us in the very moment of peril when we gaze speechless terror upon the burning dwelling of a neighbor, being anxious yet powerless to save it from the ravages of the flames.—Juvenile.

He is Coming.

"The Private Secretary" is one of those plays that may be seen and enjoyed many times. A good story will bear repetition, and the humorous phase of Mr. Gillette's comedy is of that refreshing nature that its piquancy never seems to wane. "The Private Secretary" will be given at the Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday evenings next.

A Property Dispute.

In the office of the Third District Court yesterday afternoon, C. L. Hanamann lodged a suit against the Best-Terry Mercantile Company and L. C. Karrick. Plaintiff alleges that on September 27, 1886, Henry Dinwoodey leased to himself and L. C. Karrick the premises occupied by the Best-Terry Mercantile Company for a term of five years, from March, 1887, to March, 1892, at a rental of $100 per month; that the plaintiff and Karrick held possession of said premises until January 1, 1889, when the latter assigned his half interest in the premises under the lease to the Best-Terry Mercantile Company; that this company immediately entered into possession of the premises, with the exception of the upper rooms in the front of the building, and continued to hold the same for the purposes of trade, and enjoyed the rents, issues and profits of the said premises to the exclusion of the plaintiff; that the company has denied to plaintiff the use and any participation in the possession of the premises, that the value of the rents, issues and profits of the property exclusively occupied by the company are $300 per month since January 1, 1889, and no part of which has been paid to the plaintiff. Wherefore plaintiff prays for a portion of the premises, or for a sale of the property, and that the defendant company be required to account and pay over to plaintiff one half of the value of the use and occupation of that part of the premises used exclusively by the company, and for the costs collected.

Mr. J. L. Rawlins is attorney for the plaintiff.

FOR UTAH LAKE.

An Excursion Steamer And a Number Of Steam Tugs To Be Built Immediately.

For several months Mr. Geo. W. Taussen, a well-known business man of Grand Junction, Colo., has been making investigations to see what could be done, from a business standpoint, by navigating the lake with steam tugs and barges built with a view of doing a general freight business between this city and other points on the lake. He made a trip to San Francisco for the express purpose of studying the models of steam tugs, one or two of which on the lake to carry what kinds of loads were best suited for the lake. This week he again visited this city to purchase land on the shores of the lake where he could build docks and erect a residence. He informed us that he had contracted for a steamer now drawing about two feet of water which would be driven by twin screws, two engines of thirteen horse power each, of little over the whole. He will build a barge sixty feet long and twenty-feet beam which will be used during the bathing season as a pleasure boat. It will have a covered platform and will make daily trips to the different resorts. He also intends to build a steam launch to be used during the shooting season. These will have cabins and will be equipped with tables, decks, lamps, etc. He also expects to run a line of barges between American Fork, Provo and Tintic, and if the business will warrant it, a passenger line on the lake.

Mr. Taussen is very enthusiastic in this matter, and expects to commence building his barges as soon they will be ready for work, as soon as favorable waves in the spring.—Journal Fort Independence.

DISCHARGED FROM CUSTODY.

The Case Against Frank Baker, Charged with Rape, Dismissed.

The case of Frank Baker, charged with committing a criminal assault upon Allie Carleton in a Commercial Street bathhouse, on the evening of the 20th instant, was heard before Acting Police Magistrate Kesler today. Before proceeding with the examination the exclusion of the court room, which was thronged with spectators, was ordered cleared. Much of the evidence was unfit for publication, but the facts in the case are given below.

The defendant was represented by W. C. Reilly, Assistant City Attorney Ellerson prosecuting.

Dr. Meacham was the first witness for the prosecution, but knew nothing about the case, other than that he had been summoned to the complainant's side on the evening in question and that she was under the influence of liquor, but not totally unconscious.

Alice Carleton, the complaining lady, testified as follows in her own behalf—I live with my parents in the southeastern part of the city. I came to Salt Lake three months; have known the defendant for one week only. On the evening of the twelfth inst., in company with my mother, I went to the bath house on the Salvation Army meeting on Commercial Street. While there we met the defendant. At his solicitation I left the meeting with him for a walk. As we passed the Idaho saloon on East Temple street, he invited me into the saloon; I refused to accompany him, but being pressed further yielded to his request. About ten minutes after entering the saloon the defendant offered me a glass of blackberry wine; I drank it with a degree of hesitation. I immediately became unconscious. Do not not know that I visited the Palace bath house with the defendant. I did not realize anything from the time of drinking the wine in the Idaho saloon until I awoke at police headquarters.

The witness was here subjected to a severe cross-examination by Mr. Reilly, which elicited the fact that the complainant was a woman of loose and dissolute habits, and that she has frequently, of late, quite oftly wandered about the streets of the city without any lawful business, at late and unseasonable hours of the night.

Mr. Reilly here stated that he had been informed by the proprietor of the Idaho saloon that Miss Carleton had many times, within the last few weeks, visited his place with men of low character, and that she was a generally recognized prostitute.

In order to prove these allegations Mr. Reilly requested that the proprietor of the Idaho saloon be subpoenaed as a witness. The other was such granting the request.

In reply to further cross-examination by Mr. Reilly the witness testified that she was a married woman and that her husband's name was Frank Mack and that she left him in San Francisco, where he now lives. She stated also that she had been, but was not now, a member of the Salvation Army.

Olson, Ryale testified—I am proprietor of the Palace Bath House. On the evening in question the defendant came to my place with a young lady, giving with Miss Carleton. He stated that the woman was his wife and that she had taken suddenly ill, and that he wished to give her a warm water bath. Miss Carleton confirmed Hafer's statement by saying that she was the defendant's wife, and that she was perfectly conscious when she made the statement. I did not know but their statements were true, and therefore I gave them a room. The complainant subsequently showed signs of intoxication and vomited on the floor of the bathroom corridor.

Cross-examined—I did not believe that the complainant admitted that she was the defendant's wife.

Mr. Reilly—Is it interesting the Court.—The evidence is not sufficient to show that the defendant on the charge of rape, and as prosecutor for the People I ask that the defendant be discharged.

Mr. Reilly—On what ground was this case brought?

Mr. Ellerson—On the ground of general belief.

The Court—The defendant is discharged.

Mr. Reilly—Now it is our turn. The complainant should be punished, and severely.

Mr. Ellerson—I can go no further in the case, but will suggest that it is a good case for the United States Commissioner. The complainant is a married woman, and was also unconsciously a willing participant in the wrong committed by Baker, and is therefore guilty of adultery.

Mr. Reilly—She is only sixteen years of age and, in my opinion, should be sent to the Reform School.

Mr. Ellerson—She has had too much experience for the Reform School. The case should be investigated by the United States Commissioner.

The discussion continued in this strain for some time, when the Court finally adjourned.
