Court Jottings.

In the case of the Colorado Midland Railway Company vs. T. C. Collins, defendant, and Andrew C. Bruce, intervenor, the defendant Collins admits that he received the sum of $200, from certain mineral patents that he has no right or interest in the money and is willing to pay it over to any person the court may compel, and asks, when that is done, that he be discharged from all liability to either the plaintiff or the intervenor.

Jacob Moserie and wife, Annie M. Moserie, were before Commissioner Norrell yesterday afternoon on a charge of assault, preferred by Mrs. Sig J. Keith. The parties are neighbors and live near Fifth East and Eleventh South streets, and it seems had some misunderstanding with regard to chickens that were allowed to run at large. The defendants, an elderly couple, were discharged after a brief lecture by his Honor.

Justice Hall has rendered judgment in favor of the defendant in the claim and delivery action brought by William Langton against Lon's Knills.

In the case of S. H. Pickerton vs. O. F. Culmer, the defendant answering in the Third District court, denies that he is indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of $500 for medical attention given his wife, or in any sum above $150.

Answer of the defendants has been filed in the case of the Hudson Creamery Company vs. H. B. Whitmore et al., under the firm name of Whitmore & Company. Decendant C. O. Whitmore denies that he was ever a partner in the firm, and asks that the case be dismissed as to him. The other defendants deny the material allegations of the complaint, and set up a cross-complaint in which they demand $1,624.05 damages from the plaintiffs for alleged breach of contract. The plaintiff's demand is $993.70.

The case of Emma Hoel vs. J. Stewart Sharp has been taken to the Third District court on appeal from Commissioner Moyer's court. The suit was brought in the lower court by the plaintiff to recover the possession of a horse which had been sold to the defendant in satisfaction of a feed bill, which had been contracted for by a third party to whom the horse had been loaned.

Commissioner Moyer found for the plaintiff, and from this judgment the defendant appeals.

In the case of the Pioneer Savings & Loan Co. vs. H. P. Mason et al., the defendants have filed an answer and cross-complaint.

The case of Martha Williams vs. the Salt Lake Building and Loan Association, involving the sum of $187 has been decided in the defendant's favor by Commissioner Norrell.

Another letter has been received from Mrs. Cannon, the wife of the ex-Detective, who awaiting his trial on a charge of conspiring with a man named Brannigan for the killing of Barney, at Smithfield, Ill., is addressed to Chief of Police Paul and runs thus:

BLOOMFIELD, Aug. 16, 1892.

Chief of Police:

Dear Sir—I wish to write in behalf of my husband that I have done him no harm and I do hereby swear that I have never had that he is innocent of the charge I preferred against him. I therefore ask you to release him that he be restored to his former position as city detective. Hoping you will heed my pleadings, I remain yours respectfully,

MRS. H. E. CANNON.

The chief says that as the matter is in the hands of the grand jury he can take no action whatever.

WHALING IN THE ARCTIC.

GRANDEUR AND BEAUTY OF JOURNEYS IN THE FROZEN NORTH.

(A Crack Flight in the Arctic.)

When a dale, as the whalers will persist call it, is taken, the shipmate alongside and the line creature is fast here and fall in a restless and ancient manner, so that, by slackening or tightening the ropes, each part of the vast body can be brought uppermost. A whale boat may be seen inside the creature's mouth, the men backing with oars to allow away the boat from screws of teeth, while others with sharp spades upon the back are cutting off the fragment of fat in which kindly nature has wrapped up this most overgrown of her children.

In a few hours all is shoved away in the tanks, and a red mist, with white projecting bones, lies alongside, and sticks like a shoe when the ropes are loosed. Some years ago a man, still lingering upon the beach, had the misfortune to have his foot caught between the creature's ribs at the instant when the tackles were undone. Some days hence those two skeletons, the one hanging up the foot from the other, may grace the museum of a metropolis of Greenland, or astonish the students of the Spitzbergen Institute of Anatomy.

Apart from sport, there is a glamor about these circumpolar regions which must affect everyone who has penetrated to them. My heart goes out to that old, grayheaded whaling captain who, having been left for an instant when at south's door, staggered off in his eight gear, and was found by his mates far from his house and still, as he mumbled, "pushing to the northward." So an Arctic fox which a friend of mine endeavored to tame escaped and was caught many months afterwards in a gamekeeper's trap in Caithness. It also was pushing northward, though who can say by what strange compass it took its bearings? It is a region of purity, of white ice and of blue water, with no human dwelling within a thousand miles to rally the frenzied of the breeze which blows across the ice fields. And then it is a region of romance also. You stand on the very brink of the unknown, and every dark tint you meet leads pebbles to the glass which comes from a land which no man knew not.

These whaling captains profess to see no great difficulty in reaching the Pole. Some little strength must be allowed, no doubt, for expansive talk over a pipe and a glass, but still there is a striking unanimity in their views. Briefly, they say these: "What hinders the passage of the explorer so far towards between Greenland and Spitzbergen in that huge floating island which scientific explorers have called 'the palaeocrystic sea,'" and the whalers, with more expressive Anglo Saxon, "the corner?" The ship which has placed its way among the great floe-fast floes finds itself where about the end begins, confronted by a single mighty wall extending right across from side to side, which, clink or crack up floes as she may, her bows. It is not low, grained and rugged, and of an excessive thickness, impossible to pass and nearly impossible to travel over, so cut into shapes is its surface. Over this it was that the girl [illegible] struggled with its cracks in [illegible] making a bridge [illegible] days [illegible] it may [illegible] be cut well, which for a long time was the record. As far as we could see, this girl has extended right away to the Pole.

Such is the obstacle. Now for the whaler's view of how it may be surmounted. This one, long ago, in a dale, looks, is really a floating berg, made of the mass of the winter upon which it floats. There is, in the season, a peculiar southerly drift, which sweeps the collection of old floes down and where, in addition to this, the prevailing winds happen to be from the north, the carrier is all dissolved and great bays and pools appear in the surface. A brisk northerly wind, so it and southerly, might as any time clear a road, and nothing is more usual than, coming leisurely abeam a floe of which a ship might sail through it to the pole. Whalers falling so far out as the 82nd degree have, in an ugly season, seen no ice, and, their imperfect still, as to Greenland, or be in Behring's Straits, or be in the north of them. But they are in the service of a company, they are there to catch whales, and to be in a adequate inducement to make them risk themselves, their vessels and their cargoes in a cask for the north.

There are about 50,000 tons of such ice carried from the Sahara of Lonlon every year, which would an annual revenue of nearly $100,000.
