WEATHER AND CROPS.

Snow in the Mountains, Frost in the Valleys, Threshing Stopped By Storm.

The weather and crop bulletin for the week ending Tuesday morning, September 18th, is as follows:

The weather last week was not generally favorable to agricultural pursuits, except at the close. The week began with general high winds on the 12th, followed by a heavy rain that evening, lasting all night. During the night it turned very much colder, so that there was snow far down on the mountain sides and in the higher valleys. Frosts, which were generally light but in some localities severe, resulted on the nights of the 15th, 14th and 15th.

The high winds of the 12th blew down much fruit and opened some stacks so that grain was wet by the succeeding rain. Some reports speak of wheat sprouting in the stack or shock.

The wet weather stopped threshing; it was renewed during the latter part of the week, when the weather grew dry again and somewhat warmer.

Where the frosts were light no damage was done to corn or fruit; in the colder valleys severe frosts cut down tomatoes, potatoes, squash, beans and cucumber vines, and greatly injured corn. In Weber county most of the corn has been already saved without damage.

The ripening of sugar beets has been delayed about two weeks, and the ground has been too wet to dig them. The drying of fruit has been much hindered.

Wheat has yielded in Salt Lake county about twenty to twenty-five bushels per acre. The sowing of fall wheat has begun in Davis and Salt Lake counties, the ground being in good condition.

Snowville—Threshing through; yield fair. Frost killed squashes and corn.

Plymouth — Alfalfa seed being threshed; yield from poor to good.

Hot Elder—Corn ripe, crop good; cutting begun. Frost 13th; no damage.

Yost—Grain all harvested and ready for threshing; crop A 1.

Newton—On the 12th a high wind tore up stacks and broke off shade trees.

Randolph—Snow on 15th, retarding heading of grain. Very stormy.

Croydon—Frost nearly potatoes down to ground, and also killed corn.

Peterson—Storms have delayed stacking, and very little threshing yet.

Pen—Snow on morning of 12th. Some grain is sprouting owing to the wet.

Hunterville—Frost on 13th, 14th, 17th. Threshing commenced a little.

Harrisville—Threshing finished this week. Corn mostly out; good yield.

Uintah—Ground in good order for plowing. No injury from frost so far.

Kaysville—High winds damaged fruit greatly. Some injury from frost. Wheat planting just commenced.

Gale—Beets have been thrown back two weeks in ripening on account of the storm.

Herriman—Good time for putting in fall grain, which two farmers are taking advantage of.

Cluster—Snow on the mountains on 13th. Severe frost on 14th; ice ¼ inch thick.

Lake Shore—Two nights of heavy frost have killed vines of potatoes, squash and beans. Beets look well, none dug yet. Some grain stacks wet through.

Payson—Tomatoes and tender vines were killed by frost of 13th. Too wet to dig beets and potatoes. Now hauling corn.

Levan—Frost on mornings of 13th and 14th killing cucumber, bean and tomato vines. Fine days, favorable for out-door work. Another week will finish threshing. Women and children now drying fruit.

Mona—Harvest over except a few acres where ground too soft. Heavy frost 13th killing potato vines and other tender plants.

Oak Creek—On 12th heavy wind damaged fruit considerably. Vines of tomatoes, squash and beans were frozen on the 12th and 13th.

Richfield—Frosts on 14th and 15th killed vegetables. Harvesting most nearly over.

Monroe—Cold, bleak wind from the north, freezing almost everything. Considerable ripe corn, but the most was killed before ripe.

Catmville—Looked for frost on 6th, but it turned off to rain. Corn and cane ripe; molasses making in full fast. Crops are good.

Kanosh—Killing frost on 14th; moon grain and lucern frozen. The drop in temperature was very sudden and unexpected.

Pinto—Rain on 6th and 7th. Some corn is ripening now; crop good. Late heavy rains will be a great benefit to the range. Small grain out; farmers busy stacking.

Leyton—Weather has turned warm again. There is a very good crop of everything this year. Cane is being made into molasses.

THE KANSAS SILK STATION.

ONLY ESTABLISHMENT OF THE KIND IN THE UNITED STATES.

(By Gray's Crescent, N. Y.)

Kansas boasts an unique institution in her state silk station at Peabody, Marion county. It is a veritable novelty, and Kansans are proud of its existence. This station has been established about eight years, and legislative enactment provides that it be maintained by biennial appropriations from the common wealth. Thus far nearly $40,000 have been expended upon it.

At the present time the treasury of this institution is in healthy condition, and indications point to a continued prosperous situation. Dr. Buck is the superintendent now in charge of the industry. He has filled this office during his past six years.

Regarding the modus operandi employed, he writes as follows:

"The station consists of ten acres of land, on which are raised mulberry trees and various other food-furnishing plants, and a two-story building about 40 x 80 feet, equipped with boiler, engine and ten reels. From four to five hands are employed in the station throughout so great a portion of the year as is necessary to work up all the cocoons that are purchased.

"The primary work of the station is to raise silkworm eggs for free distribution to such Kansas residents as will make an honest effort to grow worms. From 50 to 150 ounces of eggs are produced each year, which means two million of worms. Two years ago 125 ounces were sent out to forty-eight counties and a large quantity of cocoons were purchased. After the cocoons have been raised by those to whom the eggs are furnished, the station buys them at the rate of $1 per pound and reels them, selling the commercial silk.

"This reeling process is a very delicate one, and constitutes the bulk of the work done at the station. There has been absolutely no improvement in silk reeling devices during the past 200 years and the machines are crude to the extreme. The ineffiiency of these reels and the necessity of paying much higher wages for reelers than in other silk producing countries militates against the financial success of this branch of the station. Girls are paid from $5.50 to $4 per week, whereas in France, according to a statement made recently to me by the French silk commissioner, 50 cents a week is the common price. The consequence of this is that it costs $1.25 per pound to reel silk at Peabody, against only 20 cents in France.

"The silkworm eggs are turned out in applicants in April, and the work of hatching and raising the worms is done during the latter part of April and May. Only about six weeks are required to raise the worms, and that is the only portion of the year that can be employed in the business. Reeling the silk can be carried on throughout the season, as the cocoons are not perishable. A great amount of silk is required in the successful growth of the worms, but great care following easily understood instructions is essential. The work consists mainly in supplying the voracious worms with something to eat, and may be performed by women and children. I claim that an ordinary family of children can produce 100 pounds of cocoons during the six weeks' season. These cocoons are worth $100. Any rough building, provided it has a good roof, is adapted to the business of worm raising. To produce 100 pounds of cocoons requires fully as much room as is contained in your ordinary living rooms.

"Russian mulberry leaves are the food employed at the station, but outsiders who grow worms use osage orange leaves almost exclusively. The latter are as good as mulberry leaves.

"The silk produced at the Peabody station is of exceptionally fine quality. A prominent firm in New York, among the largest silk merchants of the United States, have just written me to the effect that Kansas silk was the best they ever had. The Peabody product always commands from 50 cents to $1 a pound more than ordinary commercial silk. The price varies widely, ranging from $3.25 to $4.50 per pound.

"An effort is being made to have the government take hold of the Peabody station, with some show of success. Requests for eggs and instructions are frequently received from neighboring states, and it is thought no more than just the scope of the experimental work be extended beyond the limits of Kansas by making it a government institution. As it is now, residents outside of Kansas have no easily available means of obtaining eggs and no market for their cocoons, so, there is no other silk filature than the one at Peabody in the country."

Court Items.

Suit was filed in the Fourth district court against Thomas Hartington et al for $1,000.55 due on a promissory note.

On each of the first two indictments against ex-Treasurer Hamilton bond was fixed at $1,500.

The Mercer divorce case still occupies the attention of the court.

On Monday morning the hop-drying kilns of Earl Casselman, which seven miles up the river, near Sarcoxie, on the Yale side, were destroyed by fire, containing from 15,000 to 20,000 pounds of hops. The blaze caught in all probability from the fire in the kilns. Mr. Casselman was away at the time, but Mrs. Casselman bravely saved their residence by pulling a rope and stretching a crosswalk connecting the two buildings. The hops were insured.

The Eagle mines, at Trinidad, Colo., are rushed with work. Six days and six hours was the time lost in by this mine last week. The output of the 11 Mors mine ores for August was the largest in the history of the plant for the same period of time, being 11,000 tons.
