SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE For CATARRH

A purely vegetable distillation entirely unlike all other remedies.

IN the preparation of this remarkable remedy every herb, plant, and bark is subjected to distillation, whereby the essential medicinal principle is obtained in vapor, condensed and bottled. What remains in the still is inert, valueless, and totally unfit for use in an organism so delicate as the nasal passages. Yet all snuffs are insoluble compounds of woody fibre; all tinctures, saturated solutions, [illegible] is a local and constitutional remedy, and is applied to the nasal passages by insufflation, thus allowing [illegible] for the purpose of [illegible] and cleansing, and purifying the secretions. Internally administered, it acts upon the organs of circulation, keeps the skin moist, and neutralizes the acid poison that has found its way into the stomach and thence into the blood. Thus a cure progresses in both directions, and it does not seem possible for human ingenuity to devise a more rational treatment.

SURPRISING CURE.

Gentlemen.—About twelve years ago, while travelling with Father Kemp's Old Folks Concert Troupe as a tenor singer, I took a severe cold and was laid up at Newark, N. J. This cold brought on a severe attack of Catarrh, which I battled with every known remedy for four weeks without avail, and was finally obliged to give up a most desirable position and return home, unable to sing a note. For three years afterwards I was unable to sing at all. The first attack of Catarrh had left my nasal organs and throat so sensitive that the slightest cold would bring on a fresh attack, leaving me prostrated. In this way I continued to suffer. [illegible] would have rendered me an easy victim. When in this distressing condition, I commenced the use of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE FOR CATARRH, very reluctantly, I confess, as I had tried all the advertised remedies without benefit. [illegible] wonderful medicine gave me the greatest relief. It is hardly possible for one who has not suffered, [illegible] ache, who can scarcely articulate distinctly on account of the choking accumulations in his throat, to realize how much relief I obtained from the first application of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE. Under its influence, both internal and external, I rapidly recovered, and by an occasional use of the remedy since, have been entirely free from Catarrh, for the first time in twelve years.

Respectfully yours,
GEO. W. HOLBROOK.

These Plasters have now been before the public for two years, and, notwithstanding the immense number of remedies in the form of liniments, lotions, pain-curers, and ordinary plasters, they have steadily increased in sale and met with universal approval, as evidenced by over one thousand unsolicited testimonials in our possession. Many remarkable cures have been certified to by well-known citizens in all parts of the United States, copies of which will be sent free of charge to any one desiring them. Improvements, in many ways, have been made, as suggested by experience and use, until it is believed that they are now perfect in every respect, and the best plaster in the world of every description. All we ask from every sufferer is the land is a single trial. The price is 25 cents, although the cost is double that of any other plaster. But, notwithstanding the efforts of the proprietors to make the best plaster in the world for the least money, any similar remedy can be bought, numbers of unscrupulous dealers will be found ready to offer representations for similar notices and endeavor to substitute others. CORRESPONDENCE.

Important to Bee Owners.

To the Bee Owners of Salt Lake City:

The undersigned, a committee on foul brood, appointed by the Territorial Bee Association for Salt Lake City, call your special attention to a few facts connected with this destructive disease among the bees of this city. First, if you do not thoroughly understand the bees and should notice anything about the brood or young bees that does not look natural, you should see some one who understands it, as it often happens that the destroying of one affected stock or stand will save the rest of the apiary, and on the other hand, one stock affected and neglected will finally contaminate every hive around it. The only way of thoroughly curing it is to destroy it, root and branch. Some of our most experienced apiarists can testify that if they had destroyed the first fruits of this disease they would have saved to themselves thousands of dollars, but yet they are found tampering with it to-day, and jeopardizing all the bees in the Territory, till finally we shall have no pure honey in the country.

In cutting out old combs on account of finding dead brood in them, they should not be thrown about the bee yard or left where bees can settle upon them; for, should they happen to contain foul brood and a bee alight thereon, the hive to which the bee returns will become affected in a very short time if the weather be warm; and even during cold weather it only awaits the warm sun of June or July to develop the disease.

While on this weather question, it may be as well to note here that it is during cold weather that this disease is spread by the bees themselves, and in this way a stock of bees that is affected, if they stay in the hive, which they often do not, become gradually weaker by the fall of the year, and are not able to withstand the attacks of stronger stocks which invariably will attack weak swarms, and rob them of what honey they may have. Thus the attacking stock becomes affected in their turn likewise to become diseased and depopulated.

Another item on old hives is to be very careful how and from whom you get them. A beekeeper should never be prevailed upon to take a hive wherein bees have died with the foul brood, at any price, as it is of no use whatever. Now some may object to destroying hives, yet that is the only safe mode. That they may be cleansed is a fact, but by only one process, and that is not available to the people, since to thoroughly cleanse would cost more than the hives would be worth. We will here give the process, as it is no secret with us, neither did it originate with us. First, thoroughly scrape the hives and frames and burn the scrapings, and then procure a cauldron large enough to take in a bee hive and leave at least six inches of space all around it, fill it up with strong lye water and boil thoroughly for 20 minutes, and the hive will be clean. Do not delude yourself by thinking that you can take it to pieces and plane it, or that you can bury it in the soil and cleanse it, as these different modes have been tried, and failed every time.

In conclusion, we respectfully urge you, when you know that you have this dreaded distemper in your hives, to put away and destroy everything pertaining to them, for the sake of the community. We do not here make the assertion that it is so, but it can, and has been proven to some extent by analogy, that when foul brood has been rampant in a neighborhood, that diphtheria has made its appearance among the children, and in some countries the supposition is that the honey eaten by the children contains foul brood matter which causes the disease.

Never Forget Anything.

Charge your mind with your duty. That is largely the true definition of faithfulness. Bad memory and mistakes are used as apologies a great deal oftener than necessary. A boy beginning business life will generally lose his place who pleads such an excuse more than once or twice.

A successful business man says there were two things which he learned when he was eighteen, which were afterwards of great use to him, namely, "never to lose anything, and never to forget anything." An old lawyer sent him with an important paper, with certain instructions what to do with it.

"But," enquired the young man, "suppose I lose it; what shall I do then?"

The answer was, with the utmost emphasis, "You must not lose it."

"I don't mean to," said the young man, "but suppose I should happen to?"

"But I say you must not happen to! I shall make no provision for any such occurrence. You must not lose it!"

This put a new train of thought into the young man's mind, and he found that if he was determined to do a thing he could do it. He made such provision against every contingency that he never lost anything. He found this equally true about forgetting. If a certain matter of importance was to be remembered he pinned it down on his mind, fastened it there and made it stay.—Youth's Companion.

SHORT AND SHARP.

A transaction that suits everybody—taking down the parlor stove for the season.

The young man who boasted that he could marry any girl he pleased found that he could not please any.

A good boy may not become a handsome man, but a nice bonnet surely becomes a pretty woman.

How melancholy the moon must feel when it has enjoyed the fullness of prosperity, and got reduced to its last quarter.

A correspondent sends us a poem, "Night's Silver Moon," and asks what we will pay for it. We can only say that we know nothing about the night rate of silver.

"Have you ever read 'The tale of a Bumble Bee?'" asked George of Sarah Jane. "No, said she, as she turned the color of red paint; 'but I've felt 'em."

"Your dog, what does he want here?" inquired a dry goods dealer of a customer whose big Newfoundland was upsetting things generally. "Muzzlin," was the answer.

"Mamie," said a mother to a little six year old, "If I were a little girl like you, I would pick up all these chips." "Well, mamma," said the little one, "ain't you glad you are not a little girl?"
