SUNDAY SERVICES.

Elder A. H. Cannon and President George Q. Cannon Address the Saints Yesterday.

The services at the Tabernacle yesterday afternoon were presided over by President of the Stake Angus M. Cannon.

The choir sang:

Fully bound the sacred covenant
Of the great millennial work.

Prayer was offered by Elder George C. Lambert.

Choir further sang:

Author of faith, Eternal Word,
Whose spirit breathes the entire Face.

Elder Abraham H. Cannon first addressed the congregation. The speaker suggested that in corroboration of the words of the hymn which had been previously sung, if the people who now inhabited these mountain vales were to ask themselves what prompted them to gather to these valleys, they would invariably answer that it was because of the faith which they had in God. Years ago the Bible was as a sealed book to the inhabitants of the earth. They could read it but could not understand it. They had not the Spirit of the Lord with them to interpret those things which were therein written. Today, however, the Latter-day Saints are blessed with the spirit of God in such a great extent as to enable them to understand that which the Bible contains and to be able to see God's purposes in His dealings to those who lived anciently. Faith is the very foundation of the latter-day work. Without it very little could have been accomplished. By faith, men and women have embraced the Gospel. They have believed the utterances of the Gospel messengers, and through praying to Almighty God for a testimony of the truthfulness and divinity of the work, they have had their petitions answered and have gained a thorough knowledge of its divinity. The Saints of God do not exercise faith to the extent that they should. They lay too much confidence in human help. This is to an extent necessary, but coupled with it should be faith in God, the Ruler of the universe, that he might send the blessings to the efforts of their hands.

The principle of repentance should not be forgotten by the people of God. It is not enough to repent, only when we become members of the Church, but we should repent often; for there is not a member of the Church who does not commit a certain degree of sin almost daily. By continual repentance, we show humility and learn to acknowledge to God that we are weak and imperfect. The continuance of baptism should be held sacred by the Saints that it might bring that which follows after it—the reception of the Holy Ghost.

The Latter-day Saints should strive to remain humble and meek before the Lord. The possession of such a spirit will bring with it blessings to those who remain in such a condition. Too many of the Saints become proud, because of the gifts which have been bestowed upon them. This should not be manifest amongst the members of this Church. Pride goeth before a fall, and unless God's servants make use of those gifts which have been bestowed upon them in humility and meekness, they will surely be brought to a realization of the fact that they, without God's Spirit, are indeed weak, frail creatures. If the Latter-day Saints would yield greater obedience to the principle of tithing than they at present do, their conditions both temporally and spiritually would be enhanced. One-tenth of the earnings of Saints belongs to the Lord, and unless that tenth is paid into His storehouse, the blessings predicted upon obedience to that principle will be withheld. The good of the Church should be remembered. The fast day has been especially set apart, that the Saints might fast and pray and give liberally to the poor. They should not think their condition is that which is saved by fasting. No, they should exercise more liberality and as freely as they give just so freely will God pour out his blessings upon them.

President George Q. Cannon was the next speaker. He bore testimony to the truthfulness of the words which had been previously spoken, and in tracing the history and operations of the Church since its organization, showed that God was working with the nations of the earth, and would bring His people out victorious in the end.

Choir sang the anthem:

Song of the Redeemed.

Benediction was pronounced by Elder Rudger Clawson.

Home From England.

SKEPTI, Feb. 20, 1896.

To the Editor:

Elder J. W. Ord returned on the 18th inst. from a mission to Great Britain, having spent two years in the Nottingham conference as a messenger of life and salvation. He made many friends while away and enjoyed his mission, although converts to the truth in Britain at present are scarce. The Elders and Saints keep preaching by precept and example, and occasionally an honest soul is added to the Church of Christ. There seems to be little desire for pure religion; the majority of church-goers seem satisfied as long as they have a minister who can preach nicely. Elder Ord met many who seemed disgusted with all religion, but they class our Elders with the rest, not discerning the difference.

The company with which he returned left Glasgow on the 21st of January on the steamship Kensington and a rather rough voyage but landed safely on the 14th inst at New York. The winter has been a mild one in England, and the island looked green and pleasant when they left, yet he thinks it seems good to breathe the mountain air and enjoy the invigorating effect of our lovely climate. The many blessings that he finds our people enjoying strew those of our fellows over the sea strengthen his determination to continue to labor for the consummation of God's purpose in the earth. COR.

Shad Heard From.

Fish Commissioner Musser writes that in the spring of 1891 500,000 shad fry were planted in Weber river, 500,000 in Bear river near Montpelier; and 1,501,000 in Bear Lake, also three large tubs of marine plants filed with microscopic life (upon which shad feed), near the mouths of the Jordan, Weber and Bear rivers. Some time ago "tracers" were sent out to a number of parties living on Bear river and on the shores of Bear lake, asking if they had seen or heard anything of the shad planted in 1891. No one could give any information about them until the receipt of a cheering letter from Joseph C. Rich; and Mr. Musser feels confident that the fish seen by Mr. Rich and others is no other than the delectable shad, introduced from the Delaware river, near Philadelphia, in the year first above noted. The news will be welcome to all lovers of that excellent fish.

SHOT IN THE BREAST.

Kittie Egan, a Sporting Woman, Fired Upon By Thomas Hends.

Kittie Egan alias Minnie Livingston and Pauline Slater was shot in the breast on Saturday afternoon last by Thomas Hends, as a result of a quarrel which arose after several hours' indulgence in intoxicating liquors.

The shooting occurred at the Avon house, corner of West Temple and Market streets, and, it is said, was caused through Kittie accusing Hends of having spent and appropriated to his own use a sum of money which belonged to her. This accusation seemed to be more than Hends, in his drunken stupor could stand and he immediately drew his revolver and fired, felling the woman to the floor.

At the time of the shooting the man seemed entirely unconscious of what he had done, but after a short time, when he became cognizant of the fact that the woman was dangerously wounded, he showed great agitation and quickly set to work rendering her all the aid possible, and lost no time in telephoning for a physician. A man by the name of Billy Freeman was also present when the shot was fired, and he left the house forthwith to secure the services of an officer.

But a short time elapsed until Dr. Maclean arrived and after him came Chief Pratt with Officers Gillespie, Pratt and others, who upon arriving at the house in the patrol wagon, went up stairs to the woman's room and found Dr. Maclean examining her wounds, while Hends stood at the foot of the bed watching his movements. Dr. Daily afterwards arrived and the woman was removed to St. Mark's hospital, while Hends was arrested and placed in the city jail.

Kittie Egan has occupied a place among the sporting fraternity of this city for the past five or six years. It is said, however, that lately she has been inclined to live a better life. The physicians express hopes of her recovery.

Hends is a stone mason by trade and came to this city from Colorado about five years ago. He has been very intimate with the Egan woman for some time past and expresses a dire regret at what has happened. He claims that it was an accident and that he never intended to shoot the woman, but drew his revolver to intimidate Freeman, when it was accidentally discharged. It is said by parties who knew him in Colorado, that his reputation as a peaceable, law-abiding man, is not of the best. Meanwhile he languishes in jail awaiting the outcome of the woman's injuries.

HINTS ON TANNING.

How the Mexicans Use Canaigre With the Best Results.

COLONIA DIAZ, Mexico, Feb. 11th, 1896.

To the Editor:

Not having noticed a satisfactory reply to the query of Brother C. I. Kemps, "How to use canaigre for tanning," although repeated in your editorial, "Will Some One Tell," the writer hastens to assure Brother Kemps and the public that the apparent indifference manifested is not due to lack of interest in the success of home manufacture, but to the difficulty always encountered in trying to teach a trade by precept alone where practical illustration is necessary. If Brother Kemps can get a practical tanner to assist him, the following hints from one who has lived here in the home of the canaigre for a number of years, and who though not a tanner is able to communicate in their own language with the Mexicans who have used canaigre from time immemorial, will probably be sufficient.

In order to extract the virtues of canaigre for tanning, the nearer it can be reduced to a pulp the better. The best cheap plan to accomplish this, if the root can be obtained fresh, before it has time to dry, is to run it through a common cider mill, after which the pulp may be spread out and dried and stored for future use. If the root is allowed to dry first, then something stronger must be used, as for instance, the old-fashioned bark mill, or a patent grinder. The Mexicans use two flat stones for the purpose, literally pounding it into pulp.

In order to make the "liquor," where the root is plentiful, the Mexicans merely leach the pulp something after the manner of the old-fashioned leach for leaching lye from wood ashes. By others, such waste of the precious root is considered sacrilege, and care is taken to extract all of its strength possible by boiling, which must be done in a copper or galvanized caldron, otherwise the "liquor" will turn your leather a bluish color by excelling the iron in an iron vessel. Success has been obtained by steeping the pulp in a wooden vat heated by galvanized steam pipes running through it.

After the "liquor" is made many have failed to produce first class leather through not taking into account the wonderful strength of the canaigre, and putting their hides into a solution altogether too strong to begin with, thereby "tanning" the leather. "Feeding" the hide, or in common English transferring the hide at the proper time from a weak to a stronger solution, can only be learned by experimenting if no teacher is to be had. For making sole leather the Mexicans are not very particular to extract all the lime, by which the hide is impregnated in the process of removing the hair, but in making upper leather they use a "bath" of lime-mixture to extract all the lime, alleging that lime and canaigre together will ruin upper leather.

Perhaps these few lines will open the way for discussion as to the best way to proceed on these points, as the writer does not pretend to any practical knowledge of tanning, his only experience having been acquired by failing into a tan vat of "liquor" when a small boy, in which he narrowly escaped drowning; thereby having thoroughly tested its strength. Yours for home manufacture,

EDMUND RICHARDSON.

The entering wedge of a fatal complaint is often a slight cold, which a dose or two of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral might have cured at the commencement. Therefore, it is advisable to have this prompt and sure remedy always at hand to meet an emergency.

That the blood should perform its vital functions, it is absolutely necessary it should not only be pure but rich in life-giving elements. These results are best effected by the use of that well-known standard blood-purifier, Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Rev. John Reid, Jr., of Great Falls, Mon., recommended Ely's Cream Balm to me. I can emphasize his statement. "It is a positive cure for catarrh if used as directed."—Rev. Francis W. Poole, Pastor Central Free Church, Helena, Mont.

It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and is worth its weight in gold. I can use Ely's Cream Balm with safety and it does all that is claimed for it.—H. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

In a recent editorial the Salem, Oregon Independent says: "Time and again have we seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy tried and never without the most satisfactory results. Whenever we see a person afflicted with hoarseness, with a cough or cold, we invariably advise them to get Chamberlain's Cough Remedy; and when they do, they never regret it. It always does the work, and does it well." For sale by druggists.

The exposure to all sorts and conditions of weather that a lumberman is called upon to endure in the camps often produces severe colds which, if not promptly checked, result in congestion or pneumonia. Mr. J. O. Davenport, ex-manager of the Fort Bragg Redwood Co., an immense institution at Fort Bragg, Cal., says they sell large quantities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy at the company's store and that he has himself used this remedy for a severe cold and obtained immediate relief. This medicine prevents any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia and insures a prompt recovery. For sale by druggists.

ANOTHER RAMBLER DAY.

The Rambler boys made a great showing in the Ogden races. The first event of the day was the ten mile road race, in which McConnehey finished third, taking third prize and third time prize. Then came the track race, Joe Beck taking second in the novice, Fowler first, Weiler second, and Thatcher third in the mile scratch, class B, all "Ramblers" you will note. In the half mile class A, Hay took second, Carter third. Half mile, class B, Thatcher second, Fowler third. Five mile, class B, Fowler second. In this race a man in a yellow suit lost his head and fell. Cornelisse and Weiler being immediately behind him, the result was a spill for those parties and the race left to Strang. The five mile, class A, was another Rambler event, May taking first, Joe Beck second and McConnehey third. Fourteen prizes in one day is glory enough for any race.

People may laugh and people may cry,
And days may come if they please,
But Rambler's win races wherever they go,
Regardless of how others feel.

Moral—Buy a Rambler! Ride a winner and you'll be a spinner.
