A Washoe Indian Fatally Poisoned By Wild Parsnips.

TO WELCOME GENERAL PALMER.

An Italian Mangled Beneath the Wheels of a Railway Train.

City Marshal Robinson of Walla Walla, Washington, has ordered all the gambling establishments to be closed, and Mayor Dial ok has issued a proclamation that saloons can no longer keep open on Sundays. This is the result of the recent tragedy at that town.

S. J. Andrews has discovered a marble mine in the hills east of Winnemucca mountain and says he will soon be prepared to furnish dealers with marble at reasonable rates. A good quality of soap was also found near by, but he says he has no use for it.—Silver State.

The other morning a Washoe Indian was discovered in Reno suffering the most intense agony from what was subsequently learned to have been a self-administered dose of wild parsnips. A strong emetic was prescribed, but the Indian died after any relief, for he died half an hour later.—Reno Gazette.

Private Thomas Pollock of company D, Seventeenth infantry, has been found guilty by a court-martial of the theft of jewelry worth $100 from James Cheary and has been sentenced to be confined at hard labor for one year and be dishonorably discharged.—Dagoman Leader.

Five miles from Prescott John Pai, an Italian, lost his life. Pai was a member of a floating gang that was engaged in gathering worn out steel rails and ties along the Short Line, and as the train was in motion, at a switch, he was thrown between the cars and ran over, the wheels passing across his abdomen, and severing one leg between the knee and the ankle.—Idaho Herald.

A BRUTAL MAN.

In one of the private dining rooms of Campi's restaurant on O'Farrell street a rather remarkable occurrence took place Friday evening about 8:30 o'clock. A fashionably dressed couple entered the restaurant and occupied one of the side rooms. The man was about 27 years of age and the woman 22. They seemed apparently on the very best of terms and were husband and wife. After partaking of several dishes a dispute arose between them. The woman was heard remonstrating with her husband in a low, sweet voice, but the more she talked the more excited he became, until the sound of several blows and a pitiful cry of "Please don't strike me! Please don't!" came from the curtained table.

The proprietor of the restaurant appeared and found the man in the act of striking his wife in the face.

"Stop that, sir," he yelled, but the heartless brutal paid no attention to the remonstrance.

Again the fist of the violent and brutal husband was driven with unerring force against the pretty but resistless face of his wife.

In the room opposite sat William Heathcote, a well known man-about-town. A man beating a woman was more than his blood could stand. With a bound he crossed the hall, and leveling his fist in front of the wife-beater's face exclaimed:

"Just dare to strike that woman again and I'll break every bone in your body, you cowardly scoundrel!"

As Heathcote is a large, finely proportioned man, the wife-beater cooled his hankering on his defenseless companion in response to the imperative order, and a few minutes later left the restaurant with the woman he had so grossly mistreated.—Chronicle.

The citizens of Rock Springs and particularly the residents Democratic have resolved to extend a courteous reception to General John R. A REJUVENATIVE RAILROAD.

The Rio Grande Western line is enjoying the greatest boom in the history of the road. It is the natural feeder of the Denver and Rio Grande and Colorado Midland roads, both of which have enormous feeders in the trans-Missouri lines, and the Central Pacific from the coast makes a fair divvy on transcontinental business. Ever since the line was broad gauged receipts have steadily increased that the stock was given an impetus and has been on the jump ever since. The net earnings for the month of March were made public a few days since and it had the effect of sending the stock up at a tolerable rate. The net earnings for March were $36,211, or $17,940 in excess of the earnings for the same period last year. The story of the road has increased almost 50 per cent within four months.—Denver News.

A New Entopsne Sporting Resort.

For the gentleman in search of "new worlds to conquer" some interesting and trustworthy statistics are to hand from a country hitherto little visited, and yet not difficult of access—to wit, Bosnia. The name of this precious land has been associated with the name of political problems included in the eastern question, but from official reports published by the local authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina, we gather that these territories have some special claims to the attention, not only of statesmen, but of those who love the pursuit of big game.

It appears that the abundance of bears in the highlands and of wolves in the lowlands of Bosnia is such that the government offers capitation grants for their destruction, and it is reported that in consequence of these offers during the ten years ending in 1889 441 bears and 8,420 wolves were destroyed. In the one year—1885—as many as 129 bears and 1,057 wolves were killed, and about the same number for 1887. The central highlands of Bosnia are said to be the principal haunt of the bears, especially to the north and west of Travnik and Sarajevo, while northern Bosnia is overrun by wolves and harbors few bears. There must be many sportsmen to whom it would be worth while to try their luck in a country so well stocked with bears.—Land and Water.

Apple Farms.

A farmer in Winthrop, Me., had a rocky hillside farm of the type exactly that so many thousands of the New England agriculturists have been abandoning of late years because they did not pay for tillage. Much of the sound old blood in this country has been thus lost to New England in the last twenty years.

But the Winthrop farmer was one of the few who understood that with changed methods to meet the changed conditions the agriculturist could still make a living, even off his rocky hillsides. He had observed that Roxbury russets of peculiarly fine growth and flavor grew to perfection in that neighborhood. So he began setting out an acre or so of first class young Roxbury russet grafts each year. As the trees came into bearing and produced edible fruit he was exceedingly careful with the picking, packing and marketing of this fruit. He looked carefully about, too, till he got a good market, and then ended his Roxbury russets in on their merits. Soon his particular brand of apples got a fine reputation in market, so that he was always able to dispose of them at good prices. Now that farmer who used his brains as well as his hands gets $2,000 off his farm in good years. He has a first class living and splendid independence with little labor. The apples grow when he is asleep.

Was not that better than selling off the old farm and drifting into some factory town to work in a stifling atmosphere ten or twelve hours a day and the of consumption finally, leaving children to follow the same way?

Apples are always in demand. They are never very cheap in the large cities; there are never enough of them to supply the retail demand at reasonable rates. They are the most healthful food man can eat, and we ought to consume ten times as many of them as we do. The rocky New England farms are especially well adapted to producing the best quality of winter fruit. Among our best apples are those from Canada, and the New England climate is not so very unlike that of the Dominion. Again, the American people are becoming a race of mutton eaters, and New England will produce mutton of excellent quality. With such possibilities, sheep farming and fruit, particularly apples and pears, New England farms might not to go begging as they do. Even the question of cheaper transportation for farm products can be satisfactorily settled in time.

Balance of Political Power.

The next congress will contain 356 members. Of these 145, slightly less than two-fifths of the whole, will come from the west and northwest. For census purposes the section usually called the northwest has been divided into northwestern and western states. The latter division might more properly be called far western states, since it includes Washington, Oregon, Colorado and California. The northwestern group comprises Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas.

Under the apportionment of the census of 1890 the total increase in new members of congress will be twenty-four. Of this number the states included in the above division of northwest get eleven, the states classed as far western gain four, the two sections together gaining fifteen out of the twenty-four new congressmen, while all the rest of the country has an increase of only nine. Of this nine New England and the middle states receive four, the southwestern group, including Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas, four. The remaining additional representative goes to Georgia.

This venue and congressional apportionment put the balance of power in the hands of the northwest.
