

DR. LIVINGSTONE.

PARTICULARS OF THE SEARCHING EXPEDITION—LIVINGSTONE SAFE.

From the Cape Argus.

Yesterday evening Capt. Faulkner, who, it will be remembered, proceeded with Capt. Young as a volunteer on the Livingstone searching expedition, arrived in Cape Town, and has obligingly furnished us with the following interesting particulars of the successful search after the traces of the distinguished explorer. It will be in the recollection of our readers that the expedition left Simon's Town in the middle of July, and that in Dr. Kirk's account of the circumstances connected with the reported death of Dr. Livingstone, it was said that the latter had crossed the north lake, named Makarta, and subsequently Matarka, Maponda, Marenga and Matsowa. The searching party having reached Nyassa, where driven by a gale into a small bay, were they found a native who reported to them that a white man, about eight or ten months previously, had been there. Capt. Faulkner and the rest of the expedition feared at first that the news was too good to be true, and it was resolved to endeavor to reach a point higher up, at which there was an Arab crossing place, near Mount Momba, a point about twenty miles from the spot at which the boat was anchored. In carrying this intention into effect, they fell in with a large party of native fishermen, and on communication with them, received a similar account to that which had been previously given them. These people described the dress of the "white man," which tallied pretty closely with that of Dr. Livingstone. These men, having been shown some surveying instruments appeared to recognize and to understand the use of them. One of them produced a spoon, and a second a knife, which they had received as presents from Dr. Livingstone. As a further test Captain Faulkner exhibited a case of photographs, and without any hesitation, that of Dr. Livingstone was recognized as the picture of the white man. This gave the searching party more confidence, and they proceeded on to the crossing place.

On arriving there the same story was repeated, with the addition that the white man had endeavored to cross the lake, but finding all the boats were on the opposite side he went toward the south, and passed through the villages already named. The searching party then sailed across the lake, but obtaining no information, made for the south. They shortly afterwards came across a large village, and here the same story was repeated. It is known that Marenga, the chief of the village of that name, was extremely civil to Livingstone and so he was found to be to those in search of him. It appears he had ferried Dr. Livingstone across a lake forming an indentation in the banks of the Nyassa, which he might have circled on foot at the cost of a detour. Marenga gave the searching party every information in his possession and presented them with a very acceptable supply of fresh provisions. It will be remembered that it was at this point that the Johanna men abandoned Livingstone. While Livingstone went across the marsh, the natives skirted the margin, and on returning to the village, reported they were being led into a hostile country, and at once made their way for the seaboard. The last place named by Dr. Kirk, Matsowa, was two days journey from Marenga. The chief of this village had been driven away, but a number of his men were collected who had been employed to convey the baggage of Dr. Livingstone 20 miles further in a north-westerly direction. Both Captain Faulkner and Mr. Young regarded the information as conclusive, but, with a view of discovering the position of Maponda's settlement, they proceeded on a little further.

The village was found about a mile from the mouth of the Shire. Maponda was away from the village on a trading expedition, but his mother, who was home, informed the party that Dr. Livingstone had passed through there, and that some of the party subsequently returned. The mother of the chief further produced a prayer book, containing the name of one of the doctor's followers, who had been left behind on account of lameness. The Johanna men had represented this boy, who was named Walkatane, as having deserted. It appears that at this time the boy was absent with the chief, so that the exploring party had no opportunity of a personal interview with him. The evidence which had been obtained at so many different points, and from such a number of witnesses, satisfied Mr. Young that the object they had in view had been obtained, and, acting upon the instructions issued to them, they resolved to return. There appeared not the slightest reason to doubt the substantial correctness of the information they had obtained, that Dr. Livingstone had passed safely through the most dangerous portion of his journey, and had made good his advance into the interior with the apparent intention of descending the Nile into Egypt. They accordingly descended the Shire, and in due time met with the Petrel, and returned to Simon's Town. Mr. Young and Capt. Faulkner return to England by this day's steamer, and we are certain will there meet with a reception which the nature of their report and their own enterprise and courage entitle them to.
