The Farmer's Home.

The Hon. D. W. Adams, Master of the National Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry, in closing his Fourth of July oration at Ottumwa, Iowa, gave the following as his idea of what the farmer's home should be:

Select the handsomest spot of all, and erect a house of neat and tasteful proportions and convenient arrangements. The size, finish, and expense will of course be governed by the means at command. Plant trees, both forest and fruit, in such a way as to break the sweep of the winter winds. Donate a reasonable patch of ground to small fruits and vegetables, sufficient to supply your table with abundance of all desirable kinds all the year round. Make all none or more of lawn in front and around the dwelling, interspersed here and there with some ornamental shade trees, evergreens, and flowering shrubs. Train an ivy over the porch, a honeysuckle on the window. Hide the sheds and outbuildings with a clump of trees or climbing vines.

Your wife and daughters will have some artistic flower beds cut in the lawn, and a rose bush by the door, while singing birds will build nests in the trees. Make the inside of the house attractive—a pleasant place to sit, with inducements sufficient to keep your sons from saloons and your daughters from the streets. Among the absolute necessaries of life, I most decidedly and emphatically place amusements, sport, fun. A good ringing laugh is worth more to stir the liver, and promote digestion than a dose of calomel, and a deal pleasanter to take. If you ever come across a person, old or young, who cannot, on proper provocation, give out a good, ringing, noble, and hearty laugh, watch him! He is either after your pocketbook or the undertaker. Joy, fun, laughter, sterling, good, healthy, wide-awake happiness, is among the most desirable of human attributes. Nothing but men can laugh. Do not smother but cultivate this distinctive feature of humanity.

Especially youth must have amusements. It is no matter of convenience it is a dire necessity. The love of fun is born with their birth, and must have vent in some form or other. If it cannot be gratified at home—surrounded by its hallowed influences—it will seek for it abroad, among dangerous pitfalls and corrupting examples. You may evade the truth as much as you please, and feed the youth who is starving for fun, on good wholesome, moral precept, it will not satisfy the craving, and at some unlooked for moment nature will assert its rights and seize the delightful morsel, even though sodden and corrupted with bitterest sin. We must yield to the inevitable, especially when, as in this case, it is synonymous with the delightful, and provide amusements, healthful and mirthful, and if at the same time you can include instruction, all the better; but amusements for amusements' sake we must have. On the lawn have croquet, ball, leap-frog, hi-spy, dances, chase-the squirrel, and other sports, in which boys, girls, parents and visitors can join. In doors, checkers, cards, backgammon, jackstraws, thumbs-up, dominoes, and other innocent games, should be always at command that the youth may not be compelled to seek them in the purlieus of vice, debauchery and drunkenness. Vice is not attractive; amusements are, and thousands of youth have been compelled to encounter the one to enable them to attain the other, which, with the best but mistaken motives, was denied them at home. Maps, books, agricultural and literary papers should be supplied in abundance, and this can annually be done with the money now spent for tobacco in its various forms.

In short, a farmers' home should equal or excel in beauty, attractiveness and comfort that of any other calling, and then, and not till then can we expect the talent, the energy, the ambition of our youth to seek a farmer's home. When this becomes a fixed fact, our girls, in both city and country, will not look with aversion upon the position of a farmer's wife, and seek alliance with a dainty youth who is engaged in the "manly and intellectual" business of measuring out molasses and tape.

A Negro Wedding.

The bride and groom, answering to the names of Andrew and Susy, were field hands of unspeakably pure Guinea blood, and both had passed the first half century of life. Their dress, however, showed that they had not entirely eschewed the follies of their youth, for though rude and cheap, as became their condition, it was nevertheless not unembellished with those bits of gewgaws and glaring finery of bright colored ribbons and ties in which the negro delights.

With the most decorous gravity the preacher began:

"Andrew, duz you lub dis yer woman?"

"I duz so," was the emphatic reply.

"Will you promise to stick close to her free time and 'tarnity, renouncing all oders an' cleabin' to her for eber an' eber an' amen?"

"I will dat."

"Will you lub, honor an' 'bey—"

"Hold on dar, Ole Jack!"—here interrupted the groom, with no little show of indignation—"'tain't no use talkin' to dis nigger 'bout 'beying de wimmin. Can't promise to 'bey no wimmin folks en'y cept ole mauls!"

"Silence dar! you owdumptious nigger!" roared the wrathful preacher, "what fur you go fur spile dis ceremony? You done spilt all de grabbity of de 'casion. Dis yere any matter of form, an' in'spensable to de 'casion. Now don't you go fur to open your black mout till the time for you to speak. Will you promise to lub, honor an' 'bey?"—Andrew still shaking his head ominously at the obnoxious word—"dis yere nigger Susy, furnishin' her with all tings needful for her comfort and happiness, cherishin' and pertectin' her from all 'fufferin' and sorrer' an' makin' smooye the path of all her preceding days to come?"

"I spose I must say yes to dat," said Andrew meekly.

"Den I pronounce dee yer two couples to be man-and-wife, an' whom de Lord had joined together let no man go for to put them asunder." Here an uproar arose among the blacks, betokening a dilemma entirely unforeseen by Old Jack. For inasmuch as he had forgotten to require the usual vows of Susy, they insisted that however firmly Andrew might be bound by the bonds of matrimony, Susy was still single, and the pair were but half married. The matter was at last adjusted by the preacher commencing the ceremony de novo, by which means the couple was finally united, to the satisfaction of all.

—The mortality among married men in Trenton, Indiana, is reported to be on the increase in consequence of a wealthy philanthropist's offer to give a barrel of flour to every widow in the town.

—The Paris True Kentuckian says: A telegram telling of the killing of a Mr. Fisher at Salt Lake City, the other day, has caused some alarm in the minds of friends in Paris, who fear that it may prove to be our correspondent Fisher, from whom letters have been expected for some days, but have not been received.
