EASTERN.

Another Terrible Fire in Chicago.

CHICAGO, 14.—A great fire is raging in South Chicago, about the vicinity of Michigan Avenue and Twelfth Streets. Half a mile of buildings are in flames, and all the efforts of the firemen are thus far futile to check its progress. Buildings are being blown up and the whole force of the city fire department is on the spot with every means available for fighting the fire. The streets are jammed with teams moving goods from the place.

9.15 p.m. The fire started this evening at about 4.30 on Fourth Avenue, near Twelfth Street, in South Chicago. It ran north and north-east, through Fourth Avenue, Third Avenue, State and two blocks of Wabash Avenue, and a large number of houses on the eastern portion of the Street. At the corner of Harrison street it took the post office, several churches and a large number of blocks, the number not obtained at present.

10.30 p.m.—The fight with the fire is now between Michigan Avenue and State street, and Harrison and Van Buren. The merchants continue moving far down in the business centre. The last building to succumb is St. James' hotel, which has just commenced to burn. Many of the finest buildings in that past of the city have been burned, though the majority are poor and shabby. The people are exhausted, it being excessively warm to-night.

As predicted in a previous dispatch, the fire swept into and over the elegant first Baptist church on Wabash Avenue, and what was, this evening before sundown, one of the most elegant and costly church edifices of our city, is now but a smouldering heap of ruins. As it was very evident, from the course of the fire and the direction of the wind at about half-past six o'clock, that the postoffice building was in all probability doomed, General McArthur, our postmaster, made an arrangement at once, to remove the mails to a place of safety, and all the needed teams were at once pressed into the service by him, and by eight o'clock the last loaded wagon left the building, and the place that had been the depository of the United States mail centering here was deserted for ever, for at ten minutes past eight the building first caught, and by half past eight o'clock it was a mass of flames.

The wind, by eight o'clock, had almost died away, which assisted our fire department greatly in becoming masters of the situation, and at the corner where the post office was situated, at Wabash Avenue and Harrison Street, the very point where our previous great fire was stopped, our firemen seemed to be inspired with superhuman efforts to prevent its spread into the rebuilt district, and here it was that all their engines were concentrated to bar its further progress. The building on the south-east corner was a large brick dwelling house, and by making a bulwark of this against the ever on-coming sheets of flame, the prospects of holding this building and saving it, and thereby preventing the progress of the fire through to Michigan Avenue was quite promising at half past eight o'clock, whereas the north east corner of the streets, occupied by our P. O., was then a mass of flames. However as a very high and heavy brick building adjoined the post office on the north, there is no doubt that the spread of the fire north on Wabash Avenue, from this point, has been checked. Among the buildings destroyed on the east side of Wabash avenue was the church building formerly occupied by the congregation of Robert Laird Collier.

It seems somewhat singular that this conflagration should be checked at the same place where our previous big fire was checked, and that the very building spared by the previous fire should be one of the last to succumb this time.

The mails were all removed to the sub-station on the corner of West Washington and Halsted Street, between Eldridge court and Harrison Street. On the east side of Wabash avenue some dozen handsome buildings were destroyed, while on the west side of the street between these limits every building was levelled with the ground. Looking westwardly the same dead level of ruins was presented so vividly engraved on the memory of our inhabitants in 1871. The losses entailed by this fire, in the destruction and removal of goods and furniture is in all probability as great as the actual loss of buildings and property destroyed, up to half past eight, for it takes but a moderate fire nowadays to set Chicago people to clearing out their goods and chattels, and about every store along Wabash avenue and State street, as far north as Monroe street, was removing its goods, or the most valuable part thereof, to a place of safety, and the dwelling houses in the apparent line of the fire were not slow in following the same instinct of self-preservation, by the removal of everything portable from cellar to garret. The destruction entailed by this speedy and hurried exodus will never figure among the losses sustained by insurance companies. It is very probable that should the fire be stayed where it is at half past eight o'clock, considering the area burnt over, the losses to insurance companies are very light, although hundreds of families have lost their all, and been rendered houseless and homeless. As the good suffer with the bad on many occasions, so in this instance, the bad have suffered with the good, and probably that section of the city would not have been purified of its slums so effectually and thoroughly in the next fifty years to come as it has this evening in the space of three hours, so on the whole Chicago has not only had another big conflagration, but a great purification as well, and will in the end be much the better for it by securing, in the district burnt, wider streets and substantial buildings, compared with those lost.

The fire limits on the south are 35th Street, near Harrison Court; on Wabash Avenue 175, just south of Feldridge Court; on Third Avenue 200, between Peck Court and Twelfth. On the corner of Peck Court and Wabash Avenue is the only point at the southern portion where the firemen are operating.

The fire broke out in the paint manufactory shop, at the corner of Twelfth and Clark Streets, where the workmen were mixing materials, which exploded and caused a conflagration.

On the south the fire has reached nearly to Jackson, and is within one block of the Palmer House. St. James is the last burned on State Street.

One engine is reported burned. It belonged to the colored men. One man fell through a building and was killed. A policeman had his leg broken while rescuing a boy. The Exposition building is considered out of danger.

Contrary to the hopeful expectations expressed at half past eight o'clock, the fire from that time has gained upon our fire department, and, in spite of all efforts by the whole fire department, the fire at half past ten o'clock, had progressed northward and had taken in the block on the east side of State Street, which were low wooden buildings, and on Wabash Avenue north, from Harrison, one block and a half, taking in both sides of the street, and working over along on Michigan Avenue towards the north towards the Exposition building. The fire is at present between Van Buren and Jackson in its northern limit, and burning north with great fierceness. At present the fire is apparently beyond the control of our fire department, and engines are on the way from Bloomington, Milwaukee, Aurora, Elgin, Racine, Dixon and Amboy to assist. If the wind does not increase or change, there are great hopes now that the fire may be crowded into the lake.

Among the notable buildings which have been destroyed is the Gardiner House, St. James Hotel, Continental Hotel, and the Adelphi theatre. The fire is within two blocks of the Palmer House, and the consternation is very great among the guests. The roof of that hotel is being protected by their men with water appliances of their own, and every effort will be made by the proprietors to save the building.

At 12:10 o'clock, the wind being westerly, the fire was confined to very near Van Buren street on the north. Gilbert & Sampson's furniture warehouse on Wabash Avenue, and running through to State Street, was on fire, but with a fair prospect of subduing it; and the Gardiner House, before mentioned as being burned, should have been the Michigan Avenue Hotel, which is situated on the corner of Congress street. The Gardiner is safe, as also some half dozen large stores on the east side of Wabash Avenue and south of Van Buren Street. The building occupied by the Shureman and Hand Marble Company, at the corner of Michigan Avenue and Van Buren Street, occupied in the upper stories by the Art Gallery, is intact, although the buildings to the north and south of it have succumbed to the flames. Van Buren Street seems to be about the northerly line of the fire, although some buildings are destroyed north of that. There being only the lake to the east of the hottest fire, with the wind tending rather towards it, has done a large share towards making our losses lighter than would otherwise be the case. The fire appears now principally confined to the Michigan Avenue Hotel, and when that is finally burned down, there will be little else but ruins to mark the course of to-day's fire.

No More Help Needed.

NEW ORLEANS, 14.—The supplies from the U. S. government will render further contributions for the relief of the overflowed unnecessary; for the donations received the committee return cordial thanks.

The mother and baby died, but the little daughter was saved.

$1,500,000 Fire.

MILWAUKEE, 14.—A destructive fire occured at Oshkosh, this evening. It originated on Main Street, near the Beckwirth House, and proceeded northward on Main for half a mile, and westward to the lake and some buildings on East Main Street. The buildings destroyed are mostly dwellings, with some stores and factories. The loss is estimated at a million and a half.

Burnt by Indians.

GALVESTON, 14.—San Antonio special advices from Fort Sill, 8th, state that on the 4th, near Skeleton Creek, a train of forty wagons was attacked by Cheyennes and Kiowas and burnt, together with several men belonging to the trains; also that eleven of three hundred warriors, Cheyennes and Comanches, who recently attacked a settlement at Adobe Walls, on the Canadian river, near Antelope Hills, were killed, and many wounded by about twenty-five settlers.

WESTERN.

Robbers Captured—Done to Japan.

SAN FRANCISCO, 14.—A dispatch from Reno, Nev., gives the following particulars of a fight with robbers at that place: early this morning, Elliott, proprietor of the Capital Hotel, noticed four suspicious characters near his house, and arranged with deputy sheriff Hutton that he would go out and pretend to be drunk, and draw them into a trap. He did so and the men tried to rob him. Elliott drew a pistol, and a fight ensued; he was wounded in the head, but shot one of his assailants through the body and leg, and captured another, the other two ran, and Hutton followed and shot one through the body and captured the other. The robbers are severely wounded.

General Van Buren sailed on the Colima to-day, to assume the consular duties at Nagasaki, Japan.
