CARNEGIE FAVORS TARIFF REVISION

Great Iron Master Says Our Infant Industries No Longer Require Portection.

New York, Nov. 22.—A notable article from Andrew Carnegie, dealing with the tariff, will appear in the forthcoming December number of the Century magazine. The iron master takes the position that "infant industries" no longer need protection; that the steel and other industries have now grown beyond the need of tariff protection; that duties on luxuries used by the rich should be maintained, but that those on manufactured articles should be reduced greatly or abolished entirely when no longer needed.

Mr. Carnegie's article is entitled "My Experience With and Views Upon the Tariff." He first reviews the tariff movements down to the present Dingley law, giving a number of anecdotes in which he figured with the leaders of the various periods. He adds:

"Much water has run under the bridges since then. Many changes have occurred, and hence many changes can be judiciously made in the tariff. There is no doubt about this; but, on the other hand, I have been led to the conclusion that conditions have changed so greatly in the interval that the tariff should now be viewed from a new standpoint."

The writer assumes that a decided majority of our voters are agreed:

"First, that it is advisable for new countries to encourage capital by protective duties, when seen to be necessary to develop new industries.

"Second, that after full and exhaustive trials, if success be not finally attained, such protection should cease, except as noted hereunder.

"Third, that should the experiment succeed, protection becomes unnecessar and should steadily but gradually be abolished, provided that the home supply of any article absolutely necessary for the national safety shall not thereby be endangered."

Further on Mr. Carnegie says:

"We have already become by far the greatest of all manufacturing nations. Our 'infant industries' of the past have reached maturity, and, speaking generally, are now quite able to protect themselves. The infant in the nurse's arms that Congress in 1871 nursed so tenderly will appear next year before its guardian as the stalwart champion who has conquered in many fields, thus proving himself worthy of the protection bestowed upon him in his youth and fully vindicating the protective policy pursued.

"While the tariff as a whole, even today, has ceased to be primarily beneficial as a measure of protection, it has become of vast importance from the standpoint of revenue and it is to this feature I bespeak the special attention of readers of all parties, for duties upon imports, not for protection, but for needed revenue, should not become a party question. Reasonable men of all parties may be expected to approve this plan of obtaining revenues.

After giving tables showing that the bulk of tariff duties are collected on luxuries used by the rich, Mr. Carnegie says:

"Thus does the American tariff, in happy contrast to others, also exempt the poor and heavily tax the rich, just as it should, for it is they who have the ability to pay as required by the highest economic authority."

Mr. Carnegie says of future tariff legislation:

"The next Congress dealing with the tariff will probably be inclined at first to reduce duties all around and perhaps to abolish some, but its first care should be to maintain present duties and even in some cases to increase them upon all articlse used almost exclusively by the rich, and this not for protection, but for revenue; not drawn from the workers, but from the rich. That is the first and prime duty of Congress. We should not forget that government expenditures have increased enormously in recent years and that additional revenue is required.

"Its second duty is to reduce duties greatly upon manufactured articles and to abolish entirely those no longer needed.

"The writer has co-operated in making several reductions as steel manufactures became able to bear reductions. Today they need no propection unless perhaps in some new specialties unknown to the writer, because steel is now produced cheaper here than anywhere else, notwithstanding the higher wages paid per man. Not a ton of steel is produced in the world at as small an outlay for labor as in our country. Our coke, coal and iron ores are much cheaper, because more easily obtained and transported, and output per man is much greater, owing chiefly to the larger standardized orders obtainable only upon our continent, the specilized roll mills, the machinery kept weeks upon uniform shapes without change of rolls, and several other advantages.

"The day has passed when any foreign country can seriously affect our steel manufastures, tariff or no tariff. The republic has become the home of steel and this is the age of steel. It may probably be found that there exists the small manufacture of some specialty in steel which still needs a measure of protection. The writer hopes, if such there be, the committee will give patient attention to such cases.

"Every enterprise of this kind should be forstered. The writer speaks only of the ordinary articles and forms of steel as being able to stand without protection. He hopes there are today pioneers in several new lines requiring protection which will be generously given temporarily. The committee should welcome such special cases."

Mr. Carnegie says that several other features of the tariff should be carefully looked into, more particularly illuminatng oils, thread and cutlery.

Further on Mr. Carnegie says:

"The infant we have nursed approaches the day when it should be weaned from tariff milk and fed upon the stronger food of free competition. It needs little, if any more nursing; but the change should not be made abruptly. It is better to err upon the safe side if we err at all; but he is the best of protectionists who corrects all faults as they are revealed and positively declines to subject the nation to protection in any branch where it is not clearly needed, affording protection always with the resolve that it shall be temporary.

"There is no occasion for haste or for any revolutionary step in coming tariff legislation. It is better to go a little too slow than a little too fast. In the writer's opinion, the revision of the tariff could today, safely and advantageously be made a radical one upon the lines suggested; but if congress, in deference to the timid manufacturer 'whom we have always with us,' thinks it prudent not to disturb his dreams unduly, and only halves present duties on some articles, and abolishes them entirely upon others—always provided it guards zealously the present duties upon the luxuries of the rich for revenue— the writer will be thankful and philosophic as usual, because one step in the right direction will have been taken, and he knows the final step must come before long, the sooner the better."
