HARD TACK.

BY REBECCA HARDING DAVIS.

CHAPTER I.

It was after the battle.

But what did Polly know about battles, or the war, or the cause of it? She only knew that long since her father had gone away to fight the Yankees, and one day they told her that he never would come back again.

But Polly was a little girl, and forgot the sad news in a few moments. The battle to-day was something more real and terrible. There had been a noise like that of thunder behind the hills all day, dense black clouds rising perpetually up into the clear air, and flashes of fire more frightful to poor little Polly than lightning.

Early in the morning the negroes had left the house, leaving her alone with her mother and the baby, Tom. Now Polly's mother had been sick a long time, and she had grown almost used to see her lie weak and helpless in bed, but to-day she was so white and cold that the little girl was frightened. She crept up and lay down on the quilt at her feet.

"What can I do for you mamma?" she said, again and again.

But her mamma only feebly stroked her head.

"Don't leave me," she whispered. "Let me see both you and Tom till the last—till the last."

She grew so still, after a while, and her breath came so heavily, that Polly clung, sobbing, to her breast.

"I wish Uncle David was here! What shall I do?" she cried.

Her mamma opened her eyes quickly and looked around.

Is David come? Take care of them, David—of Polly and poor little Tom!"

"There's nobody here," said Polly, holding tight about her neck.

Tom, who was a fat, white little fellow, only two or three months old, lay munching his fist in his cradle. The mother seemed to come back, as if from a deep sleep, into which she had been sinking, as Polly cried, "There's nobody here." Again she looked at her little girl, and then at the window, past which the black smoke drifted in dreadful swirlies. From the field near at hand came the approaching sound of shouts, yells, and the cries of wounded men.

"Polly," the sick woman said, "I am going to leave you."

"Oh, mamma! there's nobody here," cried Polly. "Don't go, mamma! There's no body to take care of Tom and me."

The poor lady held the little girl close to her breast with both hands.

"God—is here, Polly," she tried to say, but she could not. She could only hold her close, and presently her hands fell apart, and Polly could not feel her heart beat under her cold breast. She had gone home to the beautiful country beyond the grave. She knew there, as she could never know here, that He would take care of her little girl and of Tom, too.

But Polly did not know it. She pulled at her mother's night-dress, kissed her cold lips, cried for her to awaken, until she grew tired, and then she crept down and played with Tom awhile. Presently she heard steps coming nearer the house, and, standing on tip-toe, looked out of the window.

Armed men were coming out of the woods—black and grimy, in groups of twos or threes. A dreadful, bloody figure flitted by, tossing its arms wildly. Then a horse without a rider stood without the gate.

It was not night, yet the sun had gone out in a heavy sulphurous fog. Polly looked out a moment and then back at her mother lying still and cold.

"I guess I'll go for Uncle David," she said, and taking her sun-bonnet from the nail she went out, leaving the door open behind her.

Now, Uncle David's house was half a mile down the road, but Polly was a slow traveler. It was an hour before she reached it.

A few minutes after she started, two or three men came shouting into the yard and up on the porch. They wore jackets and trowsers of light blue.

"House ahoy!" they cried.

Nobody here, Jem," said the foremost.

"Well, we'll find something to eat, anyhow," said Jem.

They burst open the door, laughing and joking,—for, you understand, the Union troops had won the battle, and Jem and his friends were in good humor, if they were hungry.

Jem went into the chamber. The others stopped in the kitchen. The next moment he came out again.

"What ails you?" they cried. "Have you seen a ghost?"

"You look like one," said another.

But Jem only held up his hand to make them hush. "Be still, boys," he whispered. "There's nothing there but a dead woman and a baby."

Jem's looks quieted them. They followed him, without noise, to the inner room, and stood looking at little Tom kicking in the cradle, and his dead mother. They had left hundreds of corpses out on the battle field without a thought, but as they looked at this poor baby, the tears stood in some of their eyes.

"War's a bad business," said Jem at, last. "I'm tired of it."

They waited a few minutes, and then two of them went to forage in the cellar for something to eat. For, with all their pity, they did not forget how hungry they were. The others covered up the bed of poor Polly's mamma and gently placed a white sheet over her.

It was growing dark. They heard the drum-call.

"Hello! Look at this youngster. What'll we do about it?" said one of them.

Jem's face grew very red under his black whiskers,—"I'll take it with me," he said.

The men laughed, thinking he was in joke. But Jem rolled the baby up in his blanket and tucked it under his arm.

"The little villian will freeze if he is left here all night. I'll take him to camp, and by to-morrow we'll find out his owner."

"All right."

Now camp lay just on the other side of the hills. There was a good deal of joking in his mess that night with his baby as you may suppose. They called Jem a wet-nurse, and an orphan asylum, and some of the men brought the Lieutenant in to see it, and found Jem and one or two others trying to make Tom chew a bit of bacon, while half-a-dozen grizzled fellows were stooping over them, anxiously watching the operation.

"He won't chew," Jem said, "and he's half-starved. Blamed if I know what to do with him."

Lieut. Hay had a baby at home. "Try hard tack softened in water," he said.

"Poor little fellow! poor little fellow! Know any of his people, Jem?"

"No. But they'll be alive in the morning, of course."

But they did not come after Tom in the morning. Of all the places in which Uncle David and his wife, Aunt Lois, would search for the lost baby, the cellar was the most unlikely, and just to be thought of. By ten o'clock that morning orders came.

Jem looked in to the chubby little baby, kicking up its legs on the oil-cloth blanket, in despair. "I can't leave him, and no more him I take him!"

The other men shook their heads. There was no laughing now. The little fellow had kept them awake half of the night, but they seemed to have grown fond of him for that very reason. Most of them had left babies at home.

"He misses his mother," they said, when he cried, looking at each other, and some of them fell the tears coming to their eyes.

KANSAS, ALASKA AND IMPROVED AMERICAN

For Coal.

Which for Neatness of Design, Thoroughness of Combustion, Capacity of Oven, Economy in the Use of Fuel and Uniformity of Operation, place them at the best stoves in the market.

They have been constructed specially for the use of our Western Bituminous Coal (for which all stoves of Eastern manufacture are so ill adapted). Enlarged Flues insure a perfect draft; the plates that line the fire chamber are unusually heavy, and combine certain peculiarities in their construction which give these Stoves superiority over all others in the consumption of its smoke, thus saving a large percentage of fuel.

SINGER'S

New Improved Silent

FAMILY SEWING MACHINES

ARE

The Best in the World,

Because all of them are in constant use, while a very large proportion of other makes are not used, owing to their being partially or utterly impracticable.

THE SINGER

NEW FAMILY MACHINE

Has been brought to perfection, regardless of time, labor or expense, and is now incomparably the best Sewing Machine in existence.

It is simple, compact, durable, beautiful, quiet, light-running, and capable of performing a range and variety of work never before attempted upon a single machine; using either Silk, Twist, Linen or Cotton Thread, and sewing with equal facility the very finest and coarsest materials, or anything between the two extremes, in the most beautiful and substantial manner.

The New Improved Attachments for Hemming, (any width) Braiding, Embroidering, Magic Ruffling, Gathering and sewing on (at the same time) Self-Sewing, Cording, Tucking Quilting, Felling, Trimming, Binding, etc., are novel and practicable, and have been invented and adjusted especially for this Machine.

Folding Tops and Cabinet Cases.

New designs of the unique, useful and popular Folding Tops and Cabinet Cases, peculiar to the Singer Machine, are in every variety of Wood, such as black Walnut, Mahogany, Rosewood, Satin wood, and from the plainest to the most elaborate pattern and finish. The Machines themselves are plain or highly ornamented with pearl and gold to correspond with their tables or cabinets.

In the Singer the work is fed or passed through the Machine in the natural direction, namely, from the operator, permitting her to sit in a natural and healthy position. In many other Machines the work passes from right to left, or the reverse, compelling the operator to sit in a bent and unhealthy position, and thus causing weakness of the back, etc.

The Singer uses a SHORT STRAIGHT NEEDLE, which is not liable to break or miss the stitch. Many other Machines use a long crooked needle, which is liable to break and to miss the stitch.

In the Singer Machine the Shuttle is carried, thus avoiding nearly all wear. It requires no oil, and does not soil the thread or goods. Other Machines drive their Shuttles, in a race, thus causing great wear, and requiring oil, soiling the thread and goods.

On the Singer, the Tension on both the upper and lower threads is absolutely under the ready control of the operator, thus rendering the Machine always available for good sewing, which is not the case with any other. Many so-called cheap Machines are really worthless, and so are many of their new peculiarities and supposed advantages.

The SINGER is the Oldest Practical Sewing Machine,

Being about twenty years in the market. Having been constantly improved by the employment of the most skilled ingenuity of the age and unlimited capital, it is now divested of all unnecessary parts and possesses All the Very Latest Inventions and Improvements. It is the only Machine sold on Honest Claims, as all its parts are Practical and will do all that is claimed for them. Some other Machines are Greatly Complicated, to do Useless and Silly things, and thus are rendered Liable to Constant Derangement. The Singer Seldom or Never gives trouble, but is readily and easily managed by those who utterly fail on other Machines.

SINGER'S

New Manufacturing Machines

Claim the same advantages over others of their class as the new Family Machines. These old and well-tried Sewing Machines are applicable to all kinds of heavy and light manufacturing in Cloths, Leather, etc., and run in the most perfect and reliable manner without trouble to the operator.

HAVE ARRIVED!

A Full Assortment of those

Beautiful and Unrivaled MACHINES.

(The numbers on which show a manufacture of between Five and Six Hundred Thousand.) Consisting of the Different Varieties made by the Singer Manufacturing Company, and we shall sell at Eastern Prices, with addition of Freight only. To accommodate parties who cannot pay all down, we will sell on

EASY MONTHLY INSTALMENTS

So that all may possess one of these Blessings.

For the convenience of our Patrons we have engaged the services of a gentleman who has had twenty years experience and is one of the most skillful experts in the world in repairing and adjusting Sewing Machines. He will put each Machine in complete and practical running order before it leaves the Institution and will also impart to purchasers all needful instruction, so that they can at once commence work.

We resort to no trickery whatever to sell Sewing Machines, but allow their Great Merits to recommend them. We can do this, as the demand for them is so great that although the Singer Company make more than all other first-class companies combined, they cannot nearly fill their orders, and are compelled to still extend their Gigantic Works.

We having been so fortunate as to secure the General Central Agency,

For this Territory, we extend a cordial invitation to all to come and see the Machines, whether they wish to buy or not. See all others, but do not buy without you examine the Singer.

We Guarantee every Machine we sell to give entire satisfaction.
