UTAH'S HARD COAL.

That From Utah Mines Near Provo Preferred to Colorado Anthracite.

WILL ALSO REDUCE IRON ORE.

Similar to the "Main Hard" Used in English Iron and Steel Blast Furnaces—A Great Prospect.

PROVO, Nov. 23, 1895.—There is every indication that the discovery of coal east of Provo, last spring, and the subsequent development work done on several claims will result in opening up an inexhaustible field of hard coal, which will take the place of anthracite, heretofore imported from Pennsylvania and Colorado, and possibly supplant coke for smelting iron and other ores. At any rate it promises to furnish what Utah has not yet had developed—suitable fuel for iron works. Croppings have been found for a distance of twelve to fifteen miles, from Hobble Creek canyon on the south to a point north of Provo canyon, and several parties are developing prospects.

The discovery was, properly speaking, not a discovery of coal, but rather that the black material which has been known to exist in the mountains east of Provo from its first settlement was coal. Of this there is now no doubt, as analyses and practical tests in stoves and blacksmith shops have settled the question beyond any controversy.

The mine upon which the most work is being done at present is owned by Judge M. M. Kellogg, of this city, and Mr. B. A. Barton, a prominent citizen of Salisbury, Texas. Mr. Barton is a brother-in-law of Judge Kellogg and while on a visit here this summer became interested with him in the coal mine, and also was so favorably impressed with the country that he intends to bring his family here in a short time and make Utah his home. To show that Messrs. Kellogg and Barton believe their property is valuable, it is only necessary to say that they paid to the original locator, who had done but little work on the claim, $1,000 for the property.

The mine is about seven miles northeast of Provo, in Rock canyon, and a road about a mile in length has been built from the canyon road to the mine. There are several tons of coal in the dump ready to be hauled to town as soon as the freezing weather sets in. The late storms have made the new road almost impassable and put a stop to hauling coal for a time; but a coal yard had been started and a small lot of coal brought down before the storm had been disposed of and has created a demand which will employ all the men that can work to advantage all winter. The coal is being sold at $7 a ton and several people who have tried it prefer it to the Colorado anthracite. An analysis shows 65 per cent fixed carbon, 20 per cent volatile matter and moisture and 15 per cent ash. It burns to a white ash leaving no clinkers and produces no smoke. It will burn in an ordinary stove, providing there is a good draft, but the most satisfactory results are obtained with a base burner, such as is used for anthracite. A Mr. Ware who has worked for years in the coal mines in Wales says it is similar to a variety of coal mined in Wales known as "main hard." This is used, without coking, in the iron and steel blast furnaces in England and is also used on the English men-of-war for the reason that it produces no smoke.

The vein is in a carboniferous limestone formation and dips at an angle about 40 degrees, varying in thickness from 4 to 7 feet. One tunnel has been run 75 feet and an iron track laid on which to bring the coal to the surface. Another tunnel is now being run which connects with the 75 foot tunnel. This will increase the facilities for handling the coal and is also necessary in order to furnish air. Ten men are now at work, and the quality of the coal improves as the work progresses.

Harmon Martin, Rodney Swasey, W. R. Pike, R. J. Kroupa, S. K. King and John Marwick are working in Provo canyon, about three miles north of the Kellogg and Barton mine. They have tunneled about 200 feet in a similar formation, but are not taking out any coal, believing that they will strike a larger vein and a superior quality by continuing their tunnel further under the mountain, and they are testing their theory.

Postmaster Roberts and two partners, Mr. Court and Mr. Ellison, have let contracts for development work on their claims joining the Kellogg and Barton mine, and men are now pushing the tunnel; they have already done considerable work and are well satisfied with their prospects for a good mine.

S. K. King, Benj. Bachman, George W. Craig and T. E. Fleming own a claim south and east of Kellogg and Barton about eight miles from Provo. They have been at work all summer with very satisfactory results, and are building a cabin with the intention of keeping men at work all winter.

John W. Hoover, and others interested with him, are opening a claim near Deer Creek ten to twelve miles from the mouth of Provo canyon, and have brought some very fine samples down from their mine.

Sheriff John A. Brown, Joseph Brown and J. E. Snow, have some good claims to the north of Hoover's claim on which they are at work. Joseph Brown and Mr. Snow are the owners of the Kellogg and Barton mine and believe that their new discovery is at least equally as good.

There are a number of others at work developing claims, and if the coal proves to be suitable for smelting purposes with the unlimited deposits of iron ore in Iron, Provo may reasonably expect to become the Pittsburg of the west before many years have rolled around.

A perfect jewel for the housekeeper is Dr. Price's Baking powder.

JUDGE SMITH DEAD.

Passed Peacefully Away at Ogden Last Night After a Long and Severe Siege of Sickness.

Judge Harvey W. (Kentucky) Smith, died at Ogden last night at 9:45 o'clock, after a long and hard fought battle for a further lease on his life. More than three weeks ago it was announced that he was dying, but being possessed of unusual will power and determination he rallied somewhat and friends hoped that recovery would be complete and permanent. Those, however, who were familiar with his case knew that it was hopeless and that it was only a question of time when the end would come.

The fatal relapse began at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and from that time until his spirit was summoned from its earthly tabernacle he sank rapidly, surrounded by his sorrowing wife and child and other relatives. His closing hours of life were peaceful and painless.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

Hon. Harvey Walker Smith was born in Hickman county, Ky., thirty-eight years ago. He was educated at the Milburn Kentucky academy, where he remained until his sixteenth year, when he taught school, continuing for three years in the arduous field of usefulness, meanwhile studying law. He was admitted to practice as an attorney in all the courts of Kentucky before reaching his majority, and began his professional career at Blandeville, in his native state, as partner of the Hon. G. W. Bugg, of Ballard county, the firm being Bugg & Smith, and attaining to wide reputation both as counselors and advocates.

In December, 1879, he removed to Malad City, Idaho, where he met with abundant success. He remained there until 1881, and then moved to Blackfoot, also in that state, where he was retained as counsel in many important and difficult cases involving questions of great moment. One in particular was that involving the validity of the law disfranchising the Mormons in Idaho. The case extended over a long period and ultimately reached the United States Supreme Court, and the record establishes the fact that Judge Smith succeeded in maintaining the validity of the law on the point in question.

In April, 1883, he was admitted to practice in the United States Supreme Court. At that time he had charge of a very important case against the Utah & Northern Railway company, involving the question of taxing the railway on an Indian reservation. The case was important and complicated, and terminated in Judge Smith's favor.

Judge Smith came to Ogden in 1887 and at once associated himself with the late Rassford Smith, forming a law partnership under the firm name of Smith & Smith, which, after a duration of nearly four years, was dissolved. Judge Smith at that time taking into partnership with himself his brother-in-law, Mr. John S. Boreman, which partnership existed until he was appointed by President Cleveland Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of this Territory, May 8, 1893.

Butter is monarch of the table. Its right to first place, there's none to dispute, and in Utah none can dispute that our butter is always the best. Such a triumph of the dairy can at best be only equalled, never surpassed. The only butter hereabouts like ours is ours, and our price for it is only 25 cents a pound. Poor butter is never cheap, want it ever so much. "Eat the best of everything" is the first rule of good digestion. That means hereabouts out from our stock of groceries.

ANOTHER RAMBLER DAY.

The Rambler boys made a great showing in the Ogden races. The first event of the day was the ten mile road race, in which McConahey finished third, taking third prize and third time prize. Then came the track races, Joe Beck taking second in the novice, Fowler first, Walter second, and Thatcher third in the mile scratch, class B, all "Rambler" you will note. In the half mile class A, May took second, Carter third. Half mile, class B, Thatcher second, Fowler third. Five mile, class B, Fowler second. In this race a man in a yellow suit lost his head and fell, Cornelison and Walter being immediately behind him, the result was a spill for those parties and the race left to Evans. The five mile, class A, was another Rambler event, May taking first, Joe Beck second and McConahey third. Fourteen prizes in one day is glory enough for any one.

People may laugh and people may cry, And days may come if they please, But Rambler's win races whatever the go, Regardless of how others feel.

Moral—Buy a Rambler! Ride a winner and you'll be a spinner.
