1897 CELEBRATION.

Senate Committee Cannot See the Way to a Semi-Centennial.

SENATE DEFERS ITS ACTION.

Education Committee of Legislature—No Bridge for Wagon—Insanity Commission and Other Bills.

On the opening of the Senate morning at 9:30 this morning, while they were spent in correction, the journal showing that just before adjourning the house passed the bill for a state prison, the last one the governor's note, while the last one the bill was passed in rule changing from 8 to 6 practically a new bill, subject to discussion by the house in its general form, if he legislated satisfactorily.

THE SCHOOL BILL.

A public meeting is on the House to-morrow for the passage of H. B. 183, the school bill.

Allison requested that the bill not go to the committee on education, as that committee had considered the bill, but had not acted on it in its previous.

Chidester wanted the committee to consider the bill, as there were some vital provisions not discussed by the committee.

Sutherland objected to the reference to the committee, saying it was unnecessary.

Chidester stated that the bill had not been considered by the committee. There had been but one meeting, which was given to listening to the views of educators. But there had been no other meeting of the committee called. There had not been proper notice shown to either Evans, chairman of the committee, or members of the committee, and it was not right to compel consideration of the bill without giving the members known a chance to consider the bill in a committee.

Allison moved a suspension of the rules to have the bill go to the Senate committee. Allison denied the charge of discourtesy to the members named.

Chidester and Allison further discussed their respective positions on the military proposition, but none answered to a recognition the chair of Sen. Chidester said he had been which is reach, but had not been invited to be satisfied of meetings of the committee on education, if any were held.

The Senate sustained Chidester's view, and the motion to suspend the rules was lost. The bill went to the committee which was instructed to report Thursday morning, April 2.
