REGULAR DELEGATE ELECTION

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1882.

PEOPLE'S TICKET.

For Delegate to Congress,

JOHN T. CAINE.

RELIGION AND POLITICS.

THE public opponents of the People's Party are very disingenuous when they are not actually mendacious. Some of their accusations are utterly untrue; others have enough of the elements of untruth to be misleading and are the same in effect as though they were positive falsehoods. Among the latter is the attempt to show a union between Church and State in Utah.

When the impossibility of such a condition of affairs is pointed out, and facts are adduced to prove beyond question that the ecclesiastical and the political machinery in Utah are entirely separate and distinct, the ground is shifted and arguments are used to show that the "Mormon" Church exercises influence in the politics of its members, or that some leading Elders have given advice to their followers on political movements. They then purposely confuse two different ideas; the influence of religion in politics they interpret as a union of Church and State.

Now, while we deny that the Church and State are made one in Utah, we do not dispute the fact that religion has some bearing upon its politics, nor that men who figure as religious teachers exercise an influence in the political affairs of the Territory. But we claim that there is nothing in this antagonistic to American institutions. Ministers of religion have as much right to talk in public about politics as lawyers, or doctors, or generals, or civil officials. But their influence in that direction does not constitute a union of Church and State, any more than than the political influence of physicians makes a union of politics and physic.

In Utah, Methodist priests have taken the lead in political meetings and they preach more on the subject of local political affairs than "Mormon" Elders do. But their action is endorsed by the howlers about Church and State, while anything said or done by a "Mormon" preacher is denounced as a mingling of religion and politics. Now we affirm that it is the right and the duty of every American citizen to take an active interest in the affairs of the country, and particularly in those of his own State or Territory. And a public minister should be something more than a mere sentimentalist. He should take part in the discussion of every measure affecting the public welfare. And so long as he uses no undue means, it is his right to exercise his influence in favor of the best measures and the best men, according to the light that is in him; and this as much if he is a "Mormon" as if he were a Methodist, a Catholic, a Jew or an Infidel.

The New York Herald has the following on this subject in a recent issue:

"It is a healthful sign of the times to see the pulpit take up and discuss in a manly, earnest way the political questions and issues of the day. While great crimes in the body politic are being committed the Church should not be silent."

At another date the Herald says:

"A reference to another page will show that what are called political sermons were vigorously preached in many of the churches yesterday. We welcome this as a healthful sign of the times. Religion and politics have often before gone hand in hand. It is impossible to divorce them in this political canvass."

The annexed are from the Providence (R. I.) Star concerning the preaching of politics by several clergymen:

"This valuable accession to the ranks of competent critics is everywhere regarded as a hopeful sign of good to come. * * *
The teachings of christianity can as well be illustrated by contemporary politics as by the statesmanship of Moses. When with the dignity, the sedateness, the candor, and the authority with which it is endowed the pulpit speaks on the daily topics of human life, and the stirring issues of national struggles, it speaks with a weight and carries a conviction to its listeners that is equalled by no other agency. * * *
In fact, rightly used, and especially when employed on the great question of human present interest, the power of the pulpit has been second alone to the power of the press, and then second only because of necessity confined to a smaller circle. Evidences of the recognition and employment of this power are cheering indications of the growth of a broad, progressive liberality. * * *
The clergeman who confines himself solely to the spiritual motives governing a man's life will fail to understand that life as a whole, and his neglect to attempt such an understanding is an obvious failure of his duty.

The way it works is this: It is all right with the Democrats if the preacher favors democracy; all right with the Republicans if he enunciates republican dogmas; all right with the "Liberals" if he fiercely attacks the "Mormons;" all wrong if he speaks in favor of the People's Party. That is the way with the anti-"Mormons." But the "Mormon" way is to accord perfect liberty to any preacher or layman to support just such politics as he chooses, so long as he does not lie and abuse his opponents nor seek to injure them in life, liberty or the pursuit of happiness; and even then the "Mormons" do not propose to retaliate, but only to hold him up to the contempt of the thoughtful and the despising of the just

NON-"MORMON" ENDORSEMENT OF THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE.

THE Silver Reef Miner in an editorial on the political situation in Utah has the following, which commends itself to all thinking people of every creed and party in this Territory who are not blinded by the fogs of prejudice and the dust of misrepresentation raised by "Liberal" stump orators:

A few things we can refer to with pride in behalf of the People's Party in the past. Under their administration the Territory and every county and city is to-day free from debt; taxes are very low compared with other Territories and States, the custody and care of public funds have been wisely and judiciously managed, and if there has been any embezzlements of officers, so far, we have not heard of it.

Mr. Caine, if elected, we believe will represent the people, in the halls of Congress, regardless of party cliques or religious views, with credit and in an honorable, straightforward manner.

As to Judge Van Zile, he is strictly a party man, bitterly opposed, in fact an enemy to the People's Party, and would remain so if the practice of polygamy was stamped out entirely.

What we need is a man that will represent the people, the whole people, and nothing but the people, and leave sectional opinions and party quarrels entirely out of the question.

The interests of the commonwealth of our growing Territory demand impartial representation, and those who take an opposite view, are enemies to their own interests and future prosperity.

THE WYOMING DEMOCRACY.

THE Democrats of Wyoming, like their political friends in Montana, embody in their platform a declaration of the rights of local self-government, in which they are in accord with the People's Party of Utah. Here is the plank of the Wyoming platform relating to this subject:

"That we demand that the right of the people of Territories to self-government be recognized by the nation so that the executive and judicial officers of Territories be selected by the people thereof,"

The following also from the same platform has the right ring and will commend itself to the people of this Territory who are struggling for the rights of freemen:

"That the utmost personal liberty and the freeman's right to the ballot are sanctified by Democratic principles, and we are opposed to any proscription thereof whatsoever. And, believing that all persons who exercise the right of suffrage should be able to read and write, we unqualifiedly favor the extension of the public school system by the fostering aid of the National Government."

Serious Quarrel in Sonora.

SAN FRANCISCO, 27. — A Tucson dispatch from the editor of the Citizen just received from Sonora reports that a personal conflict exists between Governor Ortez and Gen. Reyes, commanding the federal forces in Sonora. Somora or Ortez had Reyes proclaimed a rebel by the legislature but being unable to raise a force to oppose him, left the capital for Hermasillo, taking refuge at Guaymas. Both claim to be supported by the federal government to which both have appealed. Those best informed apprehend no bloodshed or disturbance of property rights.

Commercial Report.

NEW YORK, 27.—The following is a report of the condition of trade here for the week ending to-day: While the disturbing elements in trade circles seem few there is a sense of disappointment as to the volume and profitableness of business. The general demand for merchandise is less active and prices are with difficulty sustained in many lines. The political uncertainties of the hour and the excitement incident to the elections may account in a measure for this state of things. The general prosperity of the country seems undoubted, though there appears to be less desire far speculation in view of the disappointment in general business. The dry goods business is moderate in amount. The warm weather, combined with the political excitement, having checked the demand for seasonable goods; with colder weather and after election, jobbers expect a marked improvement all along the line. Sales compare favorably with the corresponding month of last year, so there is not much cause for complaint under the circumstances. The grain market has been weak, especially wheat. Corn and oats have dropped less in value and there are elements of strength in corn as the supply of old is no doubt limited. Oats, though in good supply, is likely to be influenced by corn and follow its course. Pork and provisions are irregular and unsatisfactory with a tendency generally downward, and the indication of improvement in price, as shown in the openings occasionally, have proved fallacious. Operators appear to have been quite certain to be on the wrong side. Cotton is weak with a tendency generally downwards owing, no doubt to the large receipts, which are above those of last year. At this time the prospect is certainly in favor of lower prices with chances for able operators to manipulate the market. Wool is dull and unsatisfactory and the outlook for better prices not promising; desirable stock is held largely by strong holders. No material decline in prices. Petroleum has been somewhat irregular in its fluctuations, not many transactions, but a fair amount of business has been done. The tone of the market has not materially changed since last week. Freights are dull as a rule, but owing to the lack of some descriptions of desirable tonnage the rates are fairly well sustained. In butter there is still a scarcity of fine grades, and the market has advanced from one to two cents within the week, the best grade of creamery is now bringing 39 cents and the supply small. Cheese holds its own but no advance can be obtained. Arrivals are moderate quoted at 12½ cents. Sugar now is in greater demand, with prices rather weak and there are indications of a further downward tendency. Refined sugar is in fair demand and prices are a trifle firmer. In tea there is no change of consequence in the situation, prices being dependent upon sales at auction, there is no activity. In coffee the general appearance of trade is quiet, prices are barely sustained, and large buyers are out of market; in the milder grades, sales are light at steady prices. In boots and shoes only a small busines has been done; few or no orders coming in; manufacturers are getting their spring samples ready; these will be higher priced because of an advance in upper stock.

The leather trade remains quiet, with but small business being done. Iron is a new business in America; the demand for pig is not large, although quite large amounts are being delivered under old contracts.
