
HOME.

No other word brings to our minds more pleasing reflections than the little word HOME. Forest Dale is intended to consist only of homes. It has surpassions that no other addition in Salt Lake City possesses.

In times like the present people look for homes where their taxes are likely to be as low as possible, and their other expenses in proportion. Forest Dale, a subdivision of the old farm of the late President Young, is just far enough from Salt Lake City to be free from city taxes. Vegetables and fruit are cheaper, and for building purposes brick can be bought for at least one dollar per thousand less than in Salt Lake City. While it is wise to consider the question of economy, other matters are of even greater importance. Forest Dale has its own water system; the springs from which the supply is obtained producing over 1,300,000 gallons of pure, clear water in 24 hours. The pipes are laid all through the addition and those who purchase a home own the water piped to their door as well as the land their house stands on. One electric car system passes right through the addition; while another runs within a short distance of it and will also eventually pass through. Good school facilities exist; two teachers being employed in the Forest Dale School; with a high school for more advanced pupils near by. The social enjoyment of the neighborhood is also attended to; the Forest Dale Pleasant Hour Club being formed for the especial purpose of furnishing at home plenty of harmless yet pleasant recreation. The old farm house furnishes quarters for concerts, dances and sociables. These, with the Sunday Schools and kindred meetings giving the young a field for the development of their talents, without which no people can progress. For those who desire a home whether large or small we have property unexcelled anywhere. We desire to sell only to home makers. If you want a home, my agents will be pleased to take you to the property, and let you select that which suits you best. Lots of any size can be obtained. Call at room 312 Constitution Building; see plat of the ground and obtain any particulars you wish. No trouble to show property.

DESERET EVENING NEWS.

MONDAY, - - OCTOBER 16, 1893.

FRAGMENTS.

HIGH COUNCIL Wednesday at [illegible] o'clock p. m.

U. S. MARSHAL PRATT [illegible] has gone East for a few weeks' holiday.

ONLY two weeks longer in which to settle city, county, territorial and school taxes.

JUDGE ZANE will probably make another setting of cases next Wednesday or Thursday.

THERE has been a slight change of program in the two divisions of the Third district court today.

NO County court until November, two of the county selectmen having gone to the World's Fair.

THE Powers-Walton $[illegible] damage suit, as was anticipated, has been withdrawn by the plaintiff. The claim was made for a damaged lily.

THERE will be a number of bicycle races run on Wednesday next at an after meeting of the regular wheel tournament which left several championship points unsettled.

THE chief feature of the two branches of the Third district court today has been the trial of a couple of damage suits, one against the city and the other against the Rapid Transit company.

BURGLARS attempted to break into George M. Scott & Co.'s hardware store on East Temple, between First and Second South streets, last night but were frightened off before accomplishing their purpose.

THE Primary association of the Fifteenth ward will give a free entertainment in the ward hall Monday evening, October 16, 1893. Parents, friends and all primary workers are cordially invited to attend. Doors open at 6:30, entertainment to commence at 7 o'clock.

PRIVATE [illegible], whom the grand jury of the Third district court recently indicted for murder in the second degree at Fort Douglas, has been surrendered by his bondsmen and taken to the penitentiary. The surrender was made at the request of [illegible] against the wishes of the bondsmen.

THE body of Edwin Kimball, the well-known and respected Salt Lake mining man who died suddenly a few days ago on a railway train near Warren, Mass., of heart failure, arrived in this city this morning and was taken to the family residence, No. 124 south Sixth East street, where the funeral services will be held tomorrow forenoon at 11 o'clock. Mr. Kimball was 58 years of age and leaves a wife, one daughter and three sons to mourn his departure.

UNHAPPY APPONYI.

The Architect of Salt Lake's City Hall that was to Be, Again in Trouble.

C. E. Apponyi, the architect who drew up plans and specifications for the city hall that was to be erected on the corner of First South and State streets, but which was abandoned for the Eighth ward square has had an exceedingly bad time of it of late. A Los Angeles dispatch to the San Francisco Chronicle of the 13th inst. says:

C. E. Apponyi, an architect, was arrested this afternoon and lodged in the county jail on a charge of embezzling money from Mrs. Mary E. Gibson. She had entrusted it to him for the erection of a building.

During the boom Apponyi cut quite a wide swath in Los Angeles, having a large office down town and doing a good business. As the excitement waned he lost many patrons and was unable to keep up his pace.

Among the contracts he secured here was the building of the Simpson tabernacle, the leading Methodist church of Los Angeles. Several disagreements arose between him and the trustees at times.

While the church was being built he became acquainted with Mrs. Gibson, a member of the congregation. Several months ago that lady planned to build some flats, to cost $[illegible], and employed Apponyi, who called on the lady at frequent intervals for money with which to pay the men. Suspicion was aroused, and an investigation showed that while Apponyi had drawn nearly $[illegible], almost that amount was still owing. Apponyi called at the house several times and created scenes. A detective was employed, and he was arrested.

Years ago Apponyi owned a large place at Washington Corners in Alameda county and was considered quite well-to-do. He is an Austrian and claims to be a brother of the well-known Count Apponyi, owner of race horses and one time Austrian ambassador to London. He was married early in life. His wife is now divorced and lives with her sixteen-year-old daughter in Ventura.

Another Death in Pachero.

COLONIA PACHECO, Chihuahua,
Mexico, Sep. 25th, 1893.

Editor Deseret News:

By my previous letter your readers have been informed of the late severe affliction that has overtaken our little settlement in the sudden death of Brother Sellers, also Sister Anna Naegle and afterwards her little daughter Georgiana. I now have the painful task of chronicling the death of John H., the only son of George C. and Sebra Naegle, his spirit passing peacefully and quietly into the unseen world about four a. m. on the 18th inst. Death was caused by typhoid fever. The boy was eleven years old and was a remarkable child of his age, full of faith, thanksgiving and prayer, especially at the time of Anna's death. The prayers he offered up at that time were a source of great consolation and comfort to his sorrowing and afflicted father—indeed, they were more like the prayers of an experienced Elder. He bore his own sickness with much fortitude and patience.

Brief services were held at 4 p.m. the same day at the family residence, [illegible] addresses were made by the following Elders: H. Lunt, Alonzo Farnsworth and Bishop Smith. Brother George now feels very lonely, but bears up well under so great an affliction. A few days after the death of his little son he started for Utah to meet his wife Sebra, who has been visiting her friends in that region since the dedication of the Salt Lake Temple, thinking his presence might help to sustain her in the loss of her only child. The sympathy and blessings of the whole community accompany him.

We are having very beautiful weather with several light thunder showers since I last wrote and as frost up to date. Last year we had a severe frost on the 12th of this month which killed our late corn. Your brother,

HENRY LUNT.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Kentucky Conference.

The fond anticipations of the Elders in the Kentucky conference were fully realized on the 7th and 8th of October, when they assembled in the New Hope church, a good frame building [illegible] feet in size, situated in Ohio county, Ky. There they had the opportunity of bearing their humble testimony to the truth of the Gospel and of testifying to the goodness of God to them in their labors.

There were present Elder J. G. Kimball, president of the Southern States mission, and traveling Elders L. R. Wells, president of the conference; J. W. Sayes, W. W. Houtz, Alma Andrus, Z. Butterfield, F. C. Johnson, G. T. Hyde, M. S. Perry and A. Bevans.

Through the kindness of the Christian (Campbellite) denomination of this locality, to whom the church belongs, we were enabled to hold three council and four public meetings with an attendance on Sunday of about 150 intelligent people. The following subjects were clearly defined, each of the Elders taking part in the exercises: The Gospel, Faith, Repentance, Baptism, Holy Ghost and the Kingdom of God. The history of our people and their persecutions was also dwelt upon.

We have no members in this county but have many good friends whose hospitality is praiseworthy and more than appreciated by the Elders. Our labors are in entirely new fields and we go from house to house, village to village, until we have completed our labors in the county assigned us, when that field is closed and a record made thereof.

The health of the Elders generally is very good and they rejoice in the testimony of the Gospel.

The Elders received the following appointments: C. W. Houtz and J. W. Sykes to Breckenridge county, F. C. Johnson and J. A. Hill to Ohio county, A. Bevans and M. S. Perry to McLean county, Alma Andrus and Z. Butterfield to Henderson county, L. R. Wells and G. T. Hyde to Webster county.

A. BEVANS,
Clerk of Conference.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13, 1893.—President Cleveland may be surprised at the failure of the continuous session of the Senate, which began Wednesday and is still going on, to force a vote on the Voorhees bill; if so he is probably the only man in Washington who is. So far the much advertised and entirely needless contest of physical endurance has fulfilled public expectation to the dot. It has accomplished nothing, except to put a lot of ordinarily pleasant tempered, elderly gentlemen into a very bad humor, by causing them to lose their accustomed rest. It is now said that Mr. Cleveland insisted upon this test being made, not because he expected a vote to be reached on the Voorhees bill, but because of his belief that it would result in stirring up public indignation toward the senators because of their refusal to vote on the bill. How long the test is to be continued is, of course, problematical, but it will not surprise those who know how the more conservative senators on both sides feel about the matter to see it end any hour by their acceptance of a compromise. The proposition to adjourn or take a two weeks' recess as soon as the repealers became satisfied that a vote could not be reached met with little favor in any quarter, the majority of the senators seeming to be determined that neither recess nor adjournment shall be had until the matter is disposed of. To keep a quorum of senators on the floor constant calls of the Senate are required and the call may prove fruitless at any hour.

A ring of real estate speculators which has for some years been in control of the municipal affairs of the District of Columbia so far as they relate to the expenditure of money for street improvements and sewers is now being one of the most bold-faced jobs ever attempted to be put through Congress. This ring has large investments in suburban property, and not satisfied with getting a much larger share of the money annually appropriated for street improvements, etc., than it is entitled to, it now proposes that Congress shall authorize the commissioners of the District of Columbia to issue $[illegible] worth of bonds—practically United States bonds—the entire amount to be spent in sewers and street improvements, the lion's share of which would, of course, be spent upon the suburban property owned by the ring, which includes in its membership senators and representatives. The ring has secured the endorsement of the commissioners to the bond job, but that was not a difficult feat, as every civil commissioner the district has had for years has virtually been the creature of this ring, and those who have dared to object to obeying any of its decrees have never served more than one term. Nine-tenths of the people are opposed to increasing the already outrageously large debt of the District of Columbia by any further issue of bonds, even if the money were to be fairly spent, but the peculiar form of government here gives them no chance to make themselves heard or their influence felt, the commissioners always acting on the Vanderbilt system. When this matter gets before Congress some member with a good stiff backbone, which can neither be bent by money nor social influence—twin aids of crooked legislation—will have an opportunity to make reputation by a complete exposé of the objects of this ring.

A fair idea of the extent to which the building of office in the government departments at Washington has been made a family snap is given by one of the reports made by the joint congressional committee which is engaged in investigating the workings of the departmental service. The figures in this report are decidedly interesting. They show that very nearly one-fourth of the 17,000 United States employes at Washington have one or more relatives in office, and that a considerable proportion of them have from two to seven relatives in office while two individuals have nine relatives each upon Uncle Sam's pay rolls. This showing is made up from statements made by the office-holders and does not include distant relatives.

It seems that while some of the sensational newspapers were crediting the new Chinese minister with making threats of retaliation in case the Geary law was enforced that much-feared diplomat was engaged in a far more pacific task—that of assuring Secretary Gresham that if the law was amended so as to give the Chinese in the United States a reasonable time to register he would pledge his government to see that they registered. The McCreary bill which now has the right of way in the House until disposed of amends the Geary law so as to give the Chinese six months to register, and modifies it in several other ways.

It is thought that the bill for the repeal of the federal election laws, which was passed by the House this week, will be amended by the Senate before it passes that body. Many Democrats who voted for it in the House consider it entirely too sweeping and will be pleased to see it amended.
