TELEGRAPHERS AND TRAINMEN

Mention Made of Many Utah Men.

A correspondent of the Telegraph Age, published in New York, has written the following to that paper:

"What a pleasure it is to meet and shake the hand of successful friends and associates—men whom we have watched climbing the ladder, always struggling to grasp the round above. It has been a long, wearisome pull, many setbacks have been encountered since we were working side by side with them, but fortune smiled upon them at last, and the effect of their reward is conspicuous in their faces. The tired, careworn look has resigned its place to a smiling, kindly countenance.

"Many years ago, when Utah began to grow, it was necessary that telegraphic communication, other than those furnished by the Western Union Company, be obtained, and in consequence of the rapid growth and urgent demands, the Deseret Telegraph Company was formed and the construction of the lines throughout the Territory was begun and a through circuit was soon completed and business commenced.
