PROVO.

PROVO, UTAH, - Dec. 18, 1894.

Court Notes.

The following business was transacted in the First district court this morning:

The People vs George Hughes; defendant given to Dec. 28th to serve statement on appeal.

Bank of Montreal vs Ed. Newton et al; demurrer sustained, plaintiff given ten days to amend.

J. D. Kilpatrick vs George C. Whittemore; demurrer sustained; plaintiff given twenty days to amend.

G. H. Haight has commenced suit against the Home Insurance Co. of New York, to collect $500, alleged to be due by reason of the destruction of plaintiff's place of business by fire on the 6th of May, 1894, in Vernal, Utah, the property being insured by the defendant corporation.

The same plaintiff has brought a suit against the Winchester Fire Insurance company of New York to collect $1,000 claimed on the same grounds as the claim against the Home company.

R. A. Deal et al have brought suit against E. J. Eldredge and L. L. Dalton to collect $250 on a promissory note and for foreclosure of mortgage, given to secure payment of the note.

James Thompson has commenced an action against Nephi Hansen. The parties were in the agricultural implement business in this city from December 1, 1890, to February 15, 1891, when they dissolved partnership. Thompson asks that an accounting of the business be had, claiming that Hansen has appropriated partnership money, amounting to about $1,800.

Notes and Personals.

Lars Jacobsen, of Lake View, has been arrested on a charge of unlawful cohabitation. He gave bonds in the sum of $150 before Commissioner Dalley to await the action of the grand jury.

The funeral of little Irene, the four-year-old daughter of Albert and Olive Brown, took place today from the family residence. The child died on the 18th, after an illness of about a month, caused by a rupture of a blood vessel in the brain. The mother of the little girl died a short time ago.

Hyrum Hand, aged 19, of Benjamin, and Maggie Wright, aged 23, of Payson; Martin Dixon, aged 21, of Mercur, and Tillie Lamb, aged 22, of Payson, have received marriage licenses.

Deputy Marshal Ben has arrested Argile Donaldson, in Stockton, on a charge of fornication, charged to have been committed with a girl at Richfield. Mr. Donaldson gave a $500 bond before Commissioner Smith, at Tooele, to await the action of the grand jury.

Elisha Jones, the man who shot and killed a discharged negro soldier on the "strip," near Duchesne, some time ago, has given bonds in the sum of $1,000 to await the action of the grand jury. The shooting is said to be accidental, and the result of Jones "showing off" with a pistol while he was drunk.

Mrs. W. E. Davis, wife of Captain Davis, now serving out an eight months' sentence in Grand county jail for the killing of Rivers, at Westwater, in August, 1893, is obtaining signers to a petition to have her husband pardoned. He has served about four months of his sentence.

Deputy Marshal Fowler, Sheriff Brown and several other officers have again gone after Redford and Mickel, expecting to be more successful this time than on their previous trip.

The Sanpete Valley railroad surveyors are now at work in the central portion of the valley, going north.

The Lolita club, comprising a number of society people, has been organized for the purpose of giving parties and social entertainments this winter. The club will give its initial ball in the opera house Christmas night.

The Third ward choir will give a musical entertainment in the Third ward assembly rooms Saturday evening. An operetta entitled "Holly Berries" will be presented.

WASHINGTON IRVING TO POE.

A Letter Full of Genial Criticism and Friendly Counsel.

Poe had through life the habit of sending his better tales and poems to distinguished literary men and soliciting thereby their attention, writes Professor George E. Woodberry in The Century in presenting some of Poe's unpublished correspondence relating to his residence in Philadelphia.

He kept the replies and was then enabled to appeal to Hirst's biography of him in the Philadelphia Saturday Museum a long list of encomiums in addition to such as had been publicly made. The following letter from Washington Irving was written in acknowledgment of "William Wilson," which had followed the "Houses of Usher," as a means of introduction, and the substance of it, much altered and somewhat partial, appeared in the list referred to and offered a striking instance of how Poe dealt with such correspondents:

WASHING., Nov. 4, 1835.

DEAR SIR—The magazine you were so kind as to send me, being directed to New York, instead of Tarrytown, did not reach me for some time. This together with an unfortunate habit of procrastination, must plead my apology for the tardiness of my reply. I have read your little tale of "William Wilson" with much pleasure. It is managed in a highly impressive style, and the singular and mysterious interest is well sustained throughout. I regret that I have not to expect the pleasure of reading which you did me the favor to send me; but I cannot but think a series of articles of the style and merit which it so evidently will exercise by the public.

I could wish for your private ear that I think the profits too small for the labor it requires of style. It is singular, in your field you have been the earliest to present your genius strongly to the eye as a candidate for popular favor, and have had to tilt against crowding. It is owing to the best writers the side of literature. That fate might be improved by entering the path from which you are so capable of leading others, instead of disputing its principal effects, which is powerful. With such wishes for your success, I am, my dear sir, yours respectfully,

WASHINGTON IRVING.

The Small Things.

"I don't think any nation pays more attention to military affairs than Germany," said a German citizen. "Things of seeming little importance connected with the army are investigated with the greatest pains. Many years ago the matter of boot heels was taken up. What height of heel was best for the infantry? A commission was appointed. One heel after another was tried, and a record of how far the soldiers could march a day in each was kept. Years piled on years, the commission carrying on the investigation with the care and exactitude of a chemical analysis. Constant improvements were made, and the distance an army could march in a day was thereby increased. At length the suggestion of a heel partly made of rubber was put forth. It was tried—instantaneous success! It was found that a regiment using such heels could march one-third further a day and with less fatigue than when the investigation was begun. A small thing that to begin with, but what was important part the experiment had would play in a war!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The King of Trees.

The largest place in the world perhaps is owned by Richard Gird of San Bernardino county, Cal. This immense tot tower stands 18 feet high and weighs 16,000 pounds. Hyrams by steam, is provided with 12 Dobson plowshares and is capable of plowing 60 acres of land per day. It consumes from 1 to 1½ tons of coal per day and usually travels at the rate of four miles an hour.—St. Louis Republic.

A Lost Fortune.

He—That fellow over there cheated me out of a neat $20,000.

She—How could he?

He—He wouldn't let me marry his daughter.—Boston Saturday Evening Gazette.

In Jewish marriages the woman is always placed to the right of her mate. With every other nation of the world her place in the ceremony is to the left.
