TRANSVAAL RAID.

More Light on the Conspiracy to Overthrow the Republic.

CHAMBERLAIN'S BAD DILEMMA.

England Advised to Extend a Hand of Friendship to Kruger and His People.

LONDON, May 7.—The Daily Telegraph has a dispatch from Capetown which indicates that the conspiracy to overthrow the Transvaal had a still wider ramification. This dispatch says: "It is stated that all the telegrams from the Chartered South Africa company in Capetown bore the stamp of the company's service. From copies of letters which the Transvaal officials obtained from Dr. Jameson on his capture, it seems that orders had been given to prepare everything in Matabeleland for any invasion of the Transvaal."

A dispatch from Pretoria says: President Kruger keenly sympathizes with Chamberlain's dilemma and is also convinced he was quite unaware of the intrigues going on.

The executive council's decision in regard to the sentences of the prisoners is delayed by the stubborn objections of Gen. Joubert (commander-in-chief of the Transvaal forces, and a member of the executive council) that there should be unanimous opinion upon the sentences.

The Pretoria correspondent telegraphs to the Times: The calm and generous attitude of the South African media, after the injury and the provocation it has received, merits recognition. England might well extend the hand of friendship and endeavor to meet such of the wishes of the Transvaal as are not inconsistent with British interests.

The Daily mail asserts that Rutherford Harris, the secretary in Cape Colony of the Chartered South Africa company, has tendered his resignation. He was one of those implicated in the Jameson raid by the "Transvaal cipher telegram."

A Paris dispatch to the Standard says that the Temps's Pretoria correspondent reports that papers are about to be submitted to the Transvaal Volksraad which contain an extract from the English instructions to Jameson's troopers. "Pounds exist," says the Temps correspondent, "that the Bloemfontein home was ordered to be in readiness for the raid."

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—At 2 o'clock the bond resolution was taken up, Hill taking the floor to continue his speech. Peffer attempted to have a time fixed for a vote, but Hill again declined to consent.

"Then," said Peffer, "I give notice that objection will be made to every other proceeding of the Senate until a vote is reached on this resolution, and also that senators will be asked to remain until a vote is had."

"The course mapped out by the senator from Kansas," answered Hill, smilingly, will not insure attendance; it will only insure absence on the part of those who desire to transact public business."

Hill, taking up the threat of his speech, said he welcomed into the debate Pettigrew, who spoke yesterday. As Pettigrew had read with approval extracts from New York newspapers, Hill read, amid great laughter, the response Pettigrew had made to a toast to "The Press."

Hill also read a speech made recently at Black Falls, S. D., by Pettigrew
