GENEALOGICAL.

To Latter-day Saints who Contemplate Emigrating to Utah.

By and with the consent of the proper authorities I have concluded to go to the Eastern States during the present winter, for which the accommodation of such Saints as may wish to avail themselves of my services in their search for genealogical data, I have provided myself with facilities that will enable me to secure genealogical data with a fair degree of correctness, and in procuring items of a number of families at the same time, which will be much cheaper than to employ a person to devote his whole time to one family. The principal portion of what I shall do will be in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, where the ancestors were natives of those States, to procure which I have found a good port. A circular containing terms, will be sent on application.

EVENING NEWS.

Thursday, February 24, 1876.

Wouldn't Take Twenty Dollars.

Some waggish students of Yale College, a few years since, were regaling themselves one evening at the "Tontine," when an old farmer from the country entered the room and inquired if he could obtain lodging there. The young chaps immediately answered in the affirmative, inviting him to take a glass of punch. The old man who was a shrewd Yankee, saw at once that he was to be made the butt of their jests, but taking off his hat and telling a worthless little dog he had with him to lie under a chair, sat quietly down. The students inquired after the health of the old man's wife and children, and the farmer, with affected simplicity, gave the whole pedigree, with numerous anecdotes about his farm, stock, etc.

"Do you belong to the church?" asked one of the wags.

"Yes, the Lord be praised, and so did my father before me."

"Well, I suppose you will not tell a lie?" asked the student.

"Not for the world," added the farmer.

"Now, what will you take for that dog?" pointing to the farmer's cur, who was not worth his weight in Jersey mud.

"I wouldn't take twenty dollars for that dog."

"Twenty dollars! why, he is not worth twenty cents."

"Well, I assure you I would not take twenty dollars for him."

"Come, my friend," said the student, who, with his companions, was bent on having some capital fun with the old man; "now, you say you won't tell a lie for the world; let me see if you won't do it for twenty dollars. I'll give you twenty dollars for your dog."

"I'll not take it," replied the farmer.

"You will not? Here, let's see if this won't tempt you to tell a lie," added the student, producing a small bag of half-dollars, from which he counted small piles on the table, where the farmer sat with his hat in his hand, apparently unconcerned.

"There," added the student, "there are twenty dollars, all in silver. I will give you that for your dog."

The old farmer raised his hat to the edge of the table, and then quick as thought scraped all the money into it except one half dollar, at the same time exclaiming:

"I won't take twenty dollars. Nineteen and a half is as much as the dog is worth. He is your property."

A tremendous laugh from his fellow students showed the would-be wag that he was completely "done up," and that he need not look for help in that quarter; so he good naturedly acknowledged himself beat, shook hands pleasantly with the farmer, and they parted in great glee, the student retaining the dog, which he keeps to this day, as a lesson to him never to attempt to play tricks on men older than himself, and especially to be careful how he tries to wheedle a Yankee farmer.

The Bright Side.

Look on the bright side. It is the right side. The times may be hard, but it will make them no easier to wear a gloomy and sad countenance. It is the sunshine and not the cloud that gives beauty to the flower. There is always before or around us that which should cheer and fill the heart with warmth and gladness. The sky is blue ten times where it is black once. You have troubles, it may be. So have others; none are free from them, and perhaps it is as well that none should be. They give sinew and tone to life, fortitude and courage to man. That would be a dull sea, and the sailor would never acquire skill, where there is nothing to disturb its surface. It is the duty of every one to extract all the happiness and enjoyment he can within and without him; and above all, he should look on the bright side. What though things do look a little dark? The lane will turn, and the night will end in broad day. In the long run the great balance rights itself. What appears ill becomes well—that which appears wrong, right. Men are not made to hang down their heads or lips, and those who do only show that they are departing from the paths of true common sense and right. There is more virtue in one sunbeam than in a whole hemisphere of clouds and gloom. Therefore we repeat, look on the bright side. Cultivate all that is warm and genial—not the cold and repulsive, the dark and morose.—Inlerior.
