SHOUT HALLELUJAH!

Monday, January 6, 1896, has been selected for Inauguration Day in the new State of Utah, following the Presidential proclamation that is to issue on Saturday, January 4, admitting this commonwealth into the Union of states. The recommendations of the executive committee of the inauguration program committee are given in this issue of the NEWS. By these the people of the State are called upon to join in a great "shout of joy" upon the receipt of information on Saturday, Jan. 4, of the signing of the proclamation, when for fifteen minutes there will be the booming of cannon, ringing of bells, and screaming of whistles, that shall make the hills resound with echoes of the voice of triumph; and that on Monday, Jan. 6, Inauguration Day, at 8 a. m., a similar evidence of jubilating be given.

There is "a time to shout and a time to sing;" and the NEWS believes that upon this occasion it will be in good taste for the dignified voice of the people to ring forth in a glad hurrah at the advance into Statehood; that it is a time to cause the mountains to shout for joy and to make the valleys ring; that it is fitting for the pæans of victory to peal forth in the voice of man and of all his creations. Not in tumult, not in disorder, not in irreverence; but in decorous, earnest, soulful, joyous Hallelujahs of praise and thanksgiving to the Most High God, the Ruler of our destiny, for the glorious blessings He has vouchsafed to our beloved Utah!

JOSEPH, THE PROPHET.

The 23rd of December, 1895, is the memorable day on which Joseph Smith, the great Prophet of the present century, the herald of the second coming of our Lord, entered on his earthly mission. The history and work of that remarkable man has exerted a powerful influence upon thousands of human beings in all parts of the earth, directing not only their mode of thought, but also their conduct of life, into new and better channels. It has been felt to some degree in every part of the whole field of Christian theology throughout the world, and its results have engaged the attention of statesmen at home and abroad. It is written in indelible characters on the annals of man, and its memory will live throughout eternity. Brief, comparatively, was his earthly career, but when in the course of time that which he, as the instrument in the hands of the Almighty, accomplished is fully comprehended among the children of men, the human race will unite in praise, and their songs of everlasting joy will be in accord with that song by the heavenly hosts on the entrance of the savior into this world: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Every special messenger of the Almighty to His children has been charged with a mission characteristic of his own time and circumstances. Moses's message to Israel was different from that of Noah in his generation. Elijah's mission was another than that of either, and so was Ezra's and John the Baptist's. Neither was a mere repetition in the predecessors. Each had his own message to deliver and had special gifts and equipments adequate for the purpose. All were influenced by the same Spirit, and proved the oneness of their divine authority, but the distinctions were marked. The same observation applies to Joseph the Prophet. He came clothed with the power that adorned the ancient messengers from heaven; still he had a mission of his own, different from that of all who have preceded him. He came to proclaim the second coming of the Lord and the necessity of repentance before that event. He came to prepare the way for Him who shall rule eternally. His whole mission may briefly be stated in the eloquent words of the Apostle John:

> And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth, lifted up his hand to heaven and swore by him that liveth for ever and ever, who created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the sea, and the things which are therein, that there should be time no longer: but in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God should be finished, as he hath declared to His servants the Prophets.—Rev. 10: 5-7.

In harmony of this mission, we, among other things, foreshadowed some of the events of the last times, and among the prophetic declarations are those which give as signs of the approaching termination of the present era commotions in nature and country nations. "Ye hear of wars," Christ says, "for nation shall rise against nation, and there will soon be great wars in far countries, but ye know not the hearts of men in your own lands." (Doc. and Cov. 87: 2.) "And in that day shall be heard of wars and rumors of wars, and the whole earth shall be in commotion, and men's hearts shall fail them, and they shall say that Christ delayeth His coming until the end of the earth." (Doc. and Cov. 45: 26.)

Predictions of this class both in the New Testament and in the inspired writings of this age are particularly significant this year, because as it commenced with reports of the conflict in eastern Asia still ringing in the ears of mankind, as it is about to close with the world in breathless suspense as to what the next moment will bring. The whole year has a history the pages of which are stained with bloodshed instead of war and riots. Every continent has had its share, and as the end of the century is nearing the horizon in last rays are falling on massacres in Armenia, war in Abyssinia, rebellion in Cuba and in other places, and the greatest powers in the world ready for a work of destruction.

That this condition exists in the world, notwithstanding the efforts of peace societies and the phenomenal progress of civilization, and that it was predicted as one of the signs of the last times is a testimony to the inspiration of the Prophet who told it over half a century ago.

The present condition of the world is to the Saints a reminder that they should be faithful in their mission. "I tell you of these things," are the Prophet's words, "because of your prayers; wherefore treasure up wisdom in your bosoms." His work was one of peace. He pointed out the road to a universal brotherhood, through faith in God the eternal Father and faithfulness to the Church of His beloved Son, Jesus Christ.

PROBATE JUDGES IN UTAH.

"One interested" submits the following inquiry to the NEWS:

Under the State government, when inaugurated, will probate judges continue to perform duties in probate courts, as at present?

If not, will the probate judges go out of office, and the three selectmen perform the duties of county courts without the probate judges?

Taking the apparent intention of the framers of the Constitution, it would seem that if Utah is admitted before January 12, 1896, the terms of probate judges, as such, will be prematurely ended on that date by the express language of the Constitution. If the proclamation is delayed after the second Monday in January, another condition of affairs would result. Assuming that the President's proclamation will come on January 4th, as now appears likely, the reply to the first question probably is that probate judges cease to perform duties in probate courts on and after January 13, 1896.

As to the other interrogation, if the terms of such judges expire on the date named, it does not seem reasonable that they shall continue, after that time, to preside at the sessions of the county court by virtue of holding an office which has ceased to exist. There is a question, however, as to this association, in its effect on membership in the county court, so far as present incumbents of the office are concerned. The law constitutes the probate judges such members; and while the Constitution ordains the probate jurisdiction in such officers, those who are in the office may be held to still occupy official place as members of county courts, for the transaction of county business. In effect, the law took persons who had been named as probate judges and installed them as members of county courts; and it may be that notwithstanding the abolition of the probate judgeship as an office, the individuals who held it can retain their standing as county court members till their term expires by law. Such interpretation would constitute present probate judges members of county courts, after their probate judgeship ceased, for an indefinite period—the term is two years and until the qualification of a successor—unless the Legislature provides otherwise, which it probably will do at its first session. Upon this statement of the situation, therefore, we will not venture any suggestion in reply to the second interrogation further than that while the judges cannot cease to act in all matters of probate, it is possible they will continue as county court members.

It has been urged that the Constitution provides in one section for a change—abolishing the office of probate judge—and negative it in another section—continuing in office those now in position under Territorial laws till the expiration of their terms; consequently the Constitution is imperative as to the particular point of conflict. But the higher courts are not in the habit of declaring imperative any instrument when its parts can be made to harmonize; and as there is a way to harmony in the various Constitutional sections it is quite probable the courts will follow it if the question reaches them.

The Constitution provides that all laws of the Territory now in force, not repugnant to the Constitution, shall remain until changed or due form; it also provides that all officers shall continue to hold such positions under constituted under the Constitution. It further directs that all matters in the probate courts shall pass into the jurisdiction of the district courts, "upon the expiration of the term of office of the probate judge, on the second Monday in January, 1896," and until the expiration of their term probate judges shall perform the duties required by Territorial laws. The two latter features are directed specially to elected probate judges, and seem to unmistakably end the term of probate judges as such on January 13, 1896, if the Constitution is then in force by reason of Utah being a State. As to the formation of county courts it is a different situation, and the higher courts may have to settle any question unless the Legislature deals with the issue at such an early date as to leave matters involved not worth while litigating over.

THE SENATOR FROM UTAH.

The Senator from Utah and Other Tales of the Wasatch, by Josephine Spencer, is a contribution to the home literature that will be read with interest. It deals with subjects of the day in the excellent style and depth of thought that already have given the author a reputation among those familiar with her writings in rhyme and prose.

In the introductory chapter she introduces a mysterious orator who addresses his audience on the qualities required in the Senator from Utah. There is in this chapter alone stored up a little treasure of thought and truth. Then follows a future view of Utah, "as it might be," were contention and strife to divide the interests of the State. This is vividly told in a little story in which the senator from Utah is one of the principal characters. In the second chapter, a Municipal Sensation, an effort of a member of the City Council to break the tyrannical power of a combine is described. This is followed by Finley Parker's Problem, a chapter devoted to a condition of things similar to those that produced the mutinying of the so-called industrial armies. In the next chapter the question of co-operation is thoughtfully illustrated. Lotitia is a novelette charmingly told and deeply interesting on account of the many familiar objects around which it is woven. In Mariposa Lilies the reader is taken over Antelope Island, and Irenier, the story of an Interposition, closes the little volume.

The Senator from Utah is one of those literary productions that can be read and re-read with profit. It should find its way to every home in Utah. It is published by George Q. Cannon & Sons company, Salt Lake City, Utah.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Callicoatte, Druggist, Beaverville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at Z. C. M. I. Drug Department.
