PROVO.

PROVO, UTAH, AUG. 28, 1896.

David Rockwell Sirk.

David Rockwell, one of the men who was wounded in the shooting affray which took place about June 11th, when the Rockwell boys and Wm. Hurst had an encounter, is said to be very sick at his home in Vernon. He was to have appeared for a preliminary examination before Justice DeMoisy on the 21st of this month, being model boys up to date. Now he is very sick and only physically but his mind is affected, and a continuance will be asked for. It will be remembered that the bullet, which entered below the right eye, scattered and lodged in the back of his head and it seems to have affected his brain.

Notes.

The following number of teachers passed successfully the county examination conducted Tuesday: Twenty-four, primary grade; nineteen, grammar grade; five, limited primary grade; one set of examination papers were rejected, and nineteen failed to pass. The highest average, 95, was secured by Miss Irene Blackhurst of Springville.

Miss Nellie, a talented young lady from New York who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Gedwin, for some time, and basking sunshine, will give a recital in the Opera house next Tuesday evening, to conclude with a play entitled My Uncle's Will. A number of Provo people will appear with her.

Mrs. Sarah Goodman, president of the Primary association of the second ward, gave the little tots a very nice tea social party yesterday in the ward meeting house.

Green and Lyons, like two young men accused of stealing horses in Spanish Fork canyon, will have their preliminary hearing before Justice DeMoisy, Tuesday.

Tom, Osborne, Walter Bulpp, C. W. Lasher and John Knight, have gone to Chicago with a train load of cattle for A. D. Hatwell.

The claims filed against Shelton & Co., so far, amount to about $1,400. The firm think they can pay out and right it given a show.

A marriage license has been issued to Robert Reid of Lehi, aged 19, and Sarah M. Kimmerer of American Fork, aged 20.

Miss Edna Corden and Miss Eva Smith, two young ladies from Logan, have been visiting Mrs. W. A. Bassett late week.

Notices have been posted announcing the sale of the mercantile stock of Harry Dixon on September 1st.

Another Nickel in the Slot.

The writer saw, through the great plate glass windows of a certain city the other day, a young man sitting at his desk and woman, evidently assuming that tone so something unlike the tabbing. Curiosity was so aroused as to what could attract such an amusing look that the writer was crowded and another added to the eager group of spectators outside the windows. Then it was seen that all these people were delighted and patiently waiting for their turn to see a trimpe taken by one of the old automatons. A sailor, now comparatively speaking, was still perfectly absorbed and so of British folks it would have been impossible to find.—Philadelphia Press.

The Women Art Students' Clubhouse.

Far up in the Catskills, in a beautiful spot known as Twilight Park, the United Students' association (women students) contemplate with pride their clubhouse in process of erection. By the latter part of the hot months it will be ready for occupancy, and it will be similar to the summer rallying ground for art students of all descriptions. Miss Gannon and Miss Hand were the designers of the structure, which will be commodious and picturesque.—New York World.

Who Were the Basques?

The dialect of the Spanish Basque provinces, such as we have it in the songs and proverbs which have acquired for this people quite a European reputation, is really a Schoolmaster of Spanish parentage, with some of the amalgamated with Finnish—and Moorish or Arabic. Many of their words have a curious resemblance to corresponding English words—just as we find in our English slang a good many gypsy words. In Basque, the Basque word gorry (which signifies red, ruby, bloody, gory), the word gose (gorse), escara (school), irina (farina, flour), eurrutsea (course, courier), ile (ilex, from the verb to kill), ilhunbe (twilight), ilhabe (roof, tile), entina (song, cantata), bona (bonnet), etc.

The names of the regular Basque verbs is in general plaintive and melodious in the Spanish keys. The verbs, like the language, are a thoroughness to composers' names have come down to us—and this, again, is a singular component of Spanish and oriental melody. In the common opinion of the origin of the Basque people, as Ibarretxe I have the language and the name both dating to upholstery theory.—Scottsman's Magazine.

A Suggestion.

It was suggested by some one at the late Lowell conventions that women residing in market towns should open their chatterous on market days for the benefit of the women who come into town. But they might have a pleasant and comfortable place in which to rest and lunch. If practicable, the idea is a good one, and women in surrounding places might be that means be interested in getting up and inquiring for something most needed to their own especially.

Jungles of Guinea.

The vegetation of the Guinea is a descending mass of grass, which usually encumbers and is kept down only by the constant warfare of one plant upon another. A tree springs up and finds its way to the top by its energy. It is by manner established then a parasite begins to climb its trunk and lies the ground the tree, until finally the grip of the parasite kills the tree, and with fall in rain and decay, leaving a space which is immediately occupied by new forms.

To penetrate such a jungle is impossible without the use of a machete and ax. To keep a path open requires constant cutting. If you shoot a bird or an animal, it falls perhaps not more than 100 feet away, but it may require a half hour or an hour to reach it, and unless you can shoot from a stand and can keep the bird, kill the game or a dead one cannot find your game after it is killed. Words cannot describe the beauty of this mass of green, vigorous vegetation, and one can comprehend the difficulty of conquering such a wilderness unless one has actually grappled with it.—W. Sapiere King in Century.

SUMMONS.

In the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the State of Utah, County of Salt Lake.

Ray E. Hudson, Plaintiff, vs.
Hugh McIntyre, Defendant.

The State of Utah, greeting to Hugh McIntyre, defendant:
