The Beds of Great People.

Oh, the beds of great people that they show us on this side of the water, some so big and so pompous, some so small, and all so in character! There is that belonging to Louis XIV at Versailles, as difficult to mount as many a monarch has found his throne. What a lofty, magnificent affair it is, with its ostrich plumes at the four corners of its canopy, its carvings and splendid hangings! But never a bed for repose nor for one forgetful moment, but a bed for great affairs of state, a bed to do homage to, to cringe and crawl before, but not to touch with tender hand.

Then there is the bed of the great Napoleon. No pomp, no magnificence—the emperor who slept there went to bed a soldier. Then there is the bed of that comfortable, kindly king at Versailles, whose own side of the couch was made upon a hard, flat board, while the side where his wife slept was made upon down, and smooth coverlids concealed all discrepancy of taste.

But the bed that one loves best is the little single bed in the Petit Trianon belonging to Marie Antoinette, the one where she went sometimes to sleep when tired of all the stilted splendors of the big palace beyond. Something of its sanctity the most indifferent must feel, even when one looks on all the dainty loveliness. The prie dieu of the queen stands by the head. I saw Mrs. Van Twiller go up to it and draw her hand gently over the place where the beautiful woman's face had so often been pressed.—Paris Cor. Harper's Bazar.

Rheumatism and Prayer.

There had been a long, long spell of dry weather; for two months scarcely a drop of rain had fallen and every growing thing was parched and withered. One morning as I went along in the broiling sun I saw Uncle Eben on the roof of his cabin with his old umbrella, tacking on some clapboards.

"What are you doing, uncle?" I inquired.

"Fixin dish yer roof," he replied. "Hit's a gwinter rain 'fo' long."

"Get out!" I protested, incredulously. "Didn't you tell me yesterday that all the preachers in town had been praying for rain for weeks, and you hadn't made a move toward patching up your roof?"

"Yes, sah, I done done dat, sah, but I'se had a sign, sah, dat am sho."

"What's that, uncle, more grace to believe?"

"No, sah; hit's dish yer rheumatis in my knee jint, sah. Prar's all right, sah, an I has great hopes in it, sah, in sperrichul matters, but when you come right down to fetchin rain, sah, I'se got mo' confidence in fo' er five twitches ob dish yer rheumatis dan I has in a string ob prar's es long es a clo'esline. I'se tried 'em bofe, sah, an dish yer rheumatis hain't nebber missed yit, sah. Please, sah, won't you throw me up one ob dem clapboa'ds?" and Uncle Eben hammered away.—Detroit Free Press.

Earthquakes and Vegetation.

The effects of earthquakes on vegetation have been investigated by Signor A. Gioran, in the case of the seismic disturbances which occurred throughout northern Italy. He found in this instance the uniform result to be to induce a more rapid germination of seeds, and a more rapid growth of the young plants, giving rise to a more luxuriant vegetation in the pastures, arable lands, vineyards and shrubberies, accompanied by an unusually deep green color of the leaves. These results he believes to be due, not to the direct influence of the tremor, but to three secondary causes—viz., an increased production of carbon dioxide, a diffusion of nutrient fluids through the soil acting as a kind of natural manuring, an increased production of electricity. In other instances earthquakes have apparently had an unfavorable influence on vegetation, but this Signor Gorian believes to be due to their having been associated with a long period of drought.—London Nature.

How Much will you Risk for One Cent?

THE difference in price between the PUTNAM NAIL and cheaper brands amounts to one cent on each horse shod.

Are you willing to use the cheap cold-rolled and sheared nails, with all their possible disadvantages, in order to save that one cent?

The process of their manufacture is against them. The cold process disintegrates the iron and causes it to form in layers, so that after the point is clinched and the nail is driven into the hoof, it is extremely liable to split, and ruin a valuable horse. But you have saved your cent!

Now this is how you can save the two or three hundred dollars you would have to pay for a dead horse, but you would not save your nail.

Use the Putnam Nail.

It is Hot-Forged from the best Swedish iron rods, while at a welding heat, by the action of Hammers alone, and then Hammer Pointed.

Thus, the old hand process is followed, which was hot-forging nails under hammers, and hammer pointing them by the shoer, cold, without any clipping or shearing whatever,

AND THE NAIL CANNOT SPLIT.

But it will cost you one cent more for each horse shod!

The shoe will stay on longer and your reputation will be thereby increased.

ALL FOR ONE CENT.
