Sergeant Stewart of Battery B of the Utah Battery was the only young man who enlisted for the war from Plain City. He returned to his home in that city Tuesday and the reception which he received was one which he will not forget for some time to come.

ST. GEORGE.

Recent Rains Insure Crops—Fruit Interests Flourishing—Copper Boxing and Smelting.

Special Correspondence.

St. George, Aug. 20.—Since the fine rains that visited southern Utah every thing looks fine. In most sections of the country it has been the season for cutting a fourth crop of alfalfa and a crop of stubble cane that otherwise was impossible before the rain.

The fruit crop in Dixie is in excellent condition with probably not up to the average in quantity as about half the crop in quality. Note that the railroad is now running into Dixie, it will open a certain extent in northern markets, thus giving promises to find a outlet for the surplus of all sorts of produce, and it will be a source of considerable income to the small farmers in this section. Some small orchards of peaches have been made with fattening results and the hope of encouragement has been given the owners to persevere.

The apex copper mine and smelter is moving steadily and giving satisfactory results. Note that the railroad is expected to a large force of men and steady hands. It is connection with the "Copper Mountain company," is making the financial horizon of Dixie look somewhat brighter.

AN ENTERPRISING SOCIETY.

The Relief Society officers are getting their hall painted and prepared for dedication. This is a very commodious of a public nature that Thurber can point to to the credit and energies of Sister Moore and her associates. Thurber is enjoying the use of this commodious hall, and the Relief Society, of course, are very proud of it. Some time ago, the spirit of enterprise was in the air, and Thurber, a little more wide-awake than usual, thought we should have a meeting house and school house to be proud of.

WHEN, OH, WHEN?

Talking of school How long is Thurber to suffer the want of a school for our children? When or where is the remedy for this? Will some one please tell us?

AVENGED A CRIME.

Mr. John C. Wagner Tells Why He Killed Marshal Manuell.

Mr. John C. Wagner, who went on a trip to Germany last May, returned to his home, 161 Fairmount avenue, Jersey City, greatly pleased with his trip back to his native land. He arrived in the North German Lloyd steamer Bremen. Mr. Wagner was given an audience last June by the Duke of Meiningen, a relative of the Emperor of Germany, which is the place of Mr. Wagner's birth. Mr. Wagner was pardoned for the crime for which he was serving 15 years of a life sentence for the killing of Marshal Minutell, an Italian, who was the chief police officer of the present duke's father.

"I went abroad last May for the purpose of seeing once more the place of my birth and to renew the acquaintance of my boyhood," said Mr. Wagner in relating his experience, "and it was a most enjoyable experience. As to the killing of Marshal Manuell, there is nothing connected with it which any man need be ashamed of. It was done in the spirit of the moment while my mind was carried over the wrongs perpetrated by a bad man against my sister.

"Marshal Manuell was a high officer of the court of Duke Bernhard Erich Freder of the Duke of Meiningen, and was a very popular man. He was an Italian and about 6 years old. At that time I was employed at the castle of the Duke, and I was just 16 years of age. That was in July, the day a fete, at which Marshal Manuell was the father, was held in honor of the Duke's birthday. Some one had been having wrong he took immediately after to my sister. Then to throw the corpse into a lake and had had arrangements made to. The crime leaked out, however, and the people became very indignant. At that time a general celebration was instituted and the act of Manuell at most drove them to desperation. A meeting was called one night and it was decided that Marshal Manuell should be killed.

"The man to do the killing was the owner of doing the deed was not intended at that meeting, but it was decided for further consideration. I attended that meeting, and as far as I know I was a servant of Marshal Manuell, whose name was Di Gio. I was a boy of 16 years and had no idea of what had happened, and he conceived that I had Manuell's place to be where he was at the point of our meeting place in a short time. My sister, who lived with the family of Count Di Gio, had had done and I readily acquiesced in the suggestion. I took a gun which Brown brought to me and hid it and for my victim. He was some time and I deliberately stood him and shot him in the breast. He fell on the bullet going clear through and lodging in a board of a fence.

"I was arrested and tried and sentenced to a life imprisonment and Minna was given a sentence of 3 years in an asylum. I was pardoned after I had been 1 year and 2 months in prison, and Minna was released a fortnight after I had been released. Minna is now living in Italy.

"During my trial it was revealed that Manuell had been instrumental in securing the release of a man who was to be hanged for murder. The man was from the Duke's estate, and he was living in Italy. The man was found and the whole case of the man was brought to the attention of the Duke's father of his father and he had pardoned the man on one of his estates. The Duke congratulated me upon my escape in life to a distinguished and wealthy family, and I felt so relieved that I felt the great weight of my life lifted from me. I was a boy, and I was a boy, and I felt the great weight of my life lifted from me. I felt the great weight of my life lifted from me. I felt the great weight of my life lifted from me.
