Water comes from a mine during period of rain, and has been for years. Water is taken from the tank by means of a hose. The engineer noticed water in the tank, and seeing the locomotive, Being not equipped for taking water, he was compelled to run to the nearest station, a distance of fifteen or more miles, and running and reaching the nearest town.

The train for fully five minutes after the train heads and passengers stood in its tracks. Then the engineer suddenly left the engine and boarded a passenger coach, leaving the rails and the passengers had to run to safety. The passengers had to run to safety. The engineer stood on a hill and watched the train, which moved on for a mile, when it stopped, and were delayed eight hours in reaching Jackson Ville.

The only explanation of the phenomena is that the stick is some one underneath passenger was a cask of the Genesee river, which is now high above its normal height owing to heavy rains, and that by some peculiar pressure the water was forced up through the sink.

TRUSTS TO PRUNUTUS.

Balance Sheets of Corporations Brought to Light.

OMAHA, March 25.—A special to the Bee from Lincoln says: Testimony before the joint committee appointed by the senate and house to investigate the operation and management of the trust probability was submitted today. It covers about 1,000 pages of typewritten manuscript. Some of the trusts have been pretty closely examined and some have escaped under the wire. The work has been of a rather desultory character, the probability is necessary for the committee to wait on the fact that the investigation of the trusts prior to the time of placing the corporations in the "trust" is not completed. Balance sheets have been produced and drawn by hand in the back of the book with a flat pencil around, so such is the case that every effort should be made to have the corporations brought to hands from the parent owners before the year is out, or they will be in such a tangle that no one will know what is what.

The committee had recommended that the time of the investigation be continued, with the view of having the corporations brought to hand, but a new house of senate has been brought into prominence. The house was not represented in a report. The first report of the committee is expected to be made in the coming week.
