CYCLISTS TAKE WARNING.

If You Ride on Sidewalks You Will Be Arrested.

Now that the mud has dried up and the streets are again in good condition, Chief Sheets is of the opinion that there is no longer an excuse for wheelmen to ride upon the sidewalks. Leniency has been exercised by the city authorities relative to this matter, and some bicycle riders have taken undue advantage of the consideration shown them and have abused the privilege. Children have frequently been knocked down and injured by careless scorchers, and pedestrians in general have been much inconvenienced by the use of the sidewalks by bicycle people.

Chief of Police George Sheets issued orders today that the bicycle ordinance is to be enforced, and beginning tomorrow George Harris, whose duty it is to look after those who break that ordinance, will begin arresting every person found violating the law mentioned. The restricted districts are well known by those who ride wheels, and warning is given that there is to be no more riding on the sidewalks within those certain limits.

GRIP QUICKLY KNOCKED OUT.

"Some weeks ago during the severe winter weather both my wife and myself contracted severe colds which speedily developed into the worst kind of la grippe with all its miserable symptoms," says Mr. J. S. Egleston of Maple Landing, Iowa. "Knees and joints aching, muscles sore, head stopped up, eyes and nose running, with alternate spells of chills and fever. We began using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, aiding the same with a double dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, and by its liberal use soon completely knocked out the grip." Sold by all druggists.

Humors

Come to the surface in the spring as in no other season. It's a pity they don't run themselves all off that way; but in spite of pimples and other eruptions, they mostly remain in the system. That's bad.

Hood's Sarsaparilla removes them and cures all the painful and disfiguring troubles they cause. Nothing else cleanses the system and clears the complexion like Hood's.

AMUSEMENTS.

Theater—Every lover of the drama, everyone who clings to the old tradition that the theater has a mission, and everyone who loves to applaud a perfect specimen of stage handicraft, should unite in making the deepest sort of obeisance to the Australian star, Nellie Stewart. Performances like that given at the Theater last night revive one's hope that high class dramatic presentations have not vanished from the face of the stage, and cause one to rejoice that there are still to be found on earth, even if we have to travel to such a remote corner as Australia to find them, managers, companies, and actors who cling to the good old ideals, who know how to produce, how to act, and how to cast a play from top to bottom. At odd times in the course of its long and varied history, the Salt Lake Theater had harbored such birds of passage as Julia Dean Hayne, Adelaide Nielsen, Julia Marlowe, Nance O'Neil, and others who could be named. Miss Stewart is reminiscent of the best of them, with a reminder of Ada Rehan thrown in, while her supporting company brings back memories of the perfect days of Union Square and Augustin Daly ensembles.

"Sweet Nell of Old Drury" is a rare piece of dramatic work. Our English friends take their own leisure in setting the stage it is true, and the length of the play forms its one draw back, but the stage pictures, scenery, and costumes which they present when they roll up their curtain, would repay even a much longer sitting. Miss Stewart is charming in face and figure, with a rich, melodious voice, and with the instincts of the artist to her finger tips. She must in the first place have been endowed with rare histrionic ability, and in the second place she must have had her schooling in the best of the London schools or under the hands of the best London stage manager. She literally swept everything before her last night.

Most admirable is her supporting company. Mr. Alfred Gran in the despicable part of Lord Jefferys, a great charcter which is fittingly made the villain of the play, pictured all the traits of character which history tells us he possessed. Mr. Lindsay was the manly and upright Sir Roger to perfection. Mr. Beatty played the role of Chas. II, and gave us the all too rare picture of a monarch who can be both regal, yet gentle, dignified, yet playful. Mr. Sterling and Mr. Lawrence gave admirable sketches of two beaux of the period, while the four supporting ladies, the two Miss Rignolds, Miss Jennings and Miss Willard lent excellent support.

The incidental music, the costuming, the scenery and the atmosphere entire, were all such as can only come from perfection in stage management, Miss Stewart, in the historical Nell Gwynn costume, with a stupendous hat weighted down with feathers, was a vision of loveliness that almost made the house catch its breath.

This evening and tomorrow afternoon and evening, see the final presentations of this rare dramatic treat, and it will be a mater of astonishment if the house does not prove too small to accommodate the crowds.

The advance sale for the engagement of "A Message from Mars," beginning Thursday evening, started this morning at the box office and the demand was very large. "A Message from Mars" is considered to be a comedy of unusual merit. It is written by an American playwright, Richard Ganthony, who spent several years of his life in the western states, and a year or more in Utah. He was originally a newspaper writer.

Grand—The Grand is doing better this week, in point of advance sales, than it has for some time, and already the matinees of Georgia Harper's "Zaza" are fairly well sold out. For Miss Harper to come to a Pelton and Smutzer house with a play which has been made so familiar here by John Cort's leading star, Florence Roberts, suggests that the clash of the two managers for supremacy, is possibly growing keen.

"Zaza" has been seen before by most of those who are now seeing it at the Grand, and it must be said that Miss Harper's version hardly stands the test of comparison, despite the fact that her audiences are not especially critical. The tense, emotional effect given to the character by Miss Roberts is lacking, and now and then there is a shade of almost burlesque in what Salt Lake audiences have come to regard as the strongest lines of the play. Not much can be said for Miss Harper's support. As on her previous visit, it seemed perfectly able to be as animated as a wooden post in one play, and to do fairly well in the next, and this is one in which it isn't at its best. The play runs throughout the week, and the sales indicate that it will continue to draw good houses.

Orpheum — Extensive advertising, the use of the name of a former candidate for the presidency of the United States, with the announcement that his daughter, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Leavitt, had written a play "on a dare," which was to receive its first production on any stage, in Salt Lake, brought out an audience last night that packed the Orpheum in every part. The curiosity of the public had been worked to an altitudinal pitch, and it was variously gratified. Personal friends and one or two critics say "the theme of the playlet is new and the support excellent." The theme is originally, and quite strongly handled, but as to the support, that is altogether a different matter. It is not excellent for a single moment during the performance. Mrs. Spencer, the Denver society woman, who plays the title role, "Mrs. Sherlock Holmes, Detective," is a clever amateur who undoubtedly can make a success in a stage career. She is also possessed of a pretty face, charming presence and fine voice. It may be that the two male members of the cast have been selected with a view to permitting her lustre to shine the more brightly. If that is true, the management could hardly have done better, for certainly the contrast is most marked; and that, too, in spite of the fact that the possibilities are big for good work by Chamberlain in the part of James the butler, and Morton as the love-lorn English lord.

As a satire on the capture of criminals, Mrs. Levitt has furnished no end of material for the women's clubs, for certainly they will not agree with her. The young author, it would seem, inclines to the view that woman is decidedly "the weaker vessel" when it comes to a certain class of work—work that requires cool, keen, calculating system at the beginning, at the end and in the interim. The manner in which the heroine mixes matters when it comes to the apprehension of the noted crook Raffles, who turns out to be her own butler in whom she is constantly confiding, caused more than one member of the fair sex to murmur, "Isn't that just like a woman?" Will "Mrs. Sherlock Holmes, Detective," last? That depends. With a little judicious pruning and a new butler and a right-about-change-at-once in his lordship, it might have a profitable run.

Other features of the night's bill were Watson & Morrisey, novelty singers and dancers. The girl is a bedimpled brunette with taking ways, and her partner—well, he has a complexion as clear as a woman's. Frank R. Hayes did an old maid's monologue and rattled off a collection of chestnuts we have all heard in our youth. A pleasing dancer was Stella Lee, and real artists were Vontella and Nina in Roman ring work. Allan Shaw did a lot of coin and card tricks, some of which were reminiscent of our own late and lamented Eliason. The kinodrome turned out the most laughable set of motion pictures yet seen in the house in the "Dream of the Welsh Rarebit Fiend." The whole bill, including some extra fine overture work by the orchestra, goes for the rest of the week.
