Garden City Notes.

Articles of incorporation of the Western Lithographic Stone company were filed yesterday with County Clerk Jones. The capital stock of the company is $50,000 divided into shares of $1 each and consists of quarries of lithographic stone situated in Spanish Fork canyon. There are twenty-eight incorporators all residents of Springville, and that city is named as the principal place of business. The officers are: George A. Horne, president; Levi Curtis, vice-president; G. W. Meeuschwill, E. A. Gregory and Geo. T. Smith, directors; C. J. Peterson, secretary; Erastus Turnbaugh, treasurer.

The students of the Brigham Young Academy will all turn out Saturday to clean up the grounds surrounding the building. Co-ed-ns will aid in the good work by furnishing the necessary gravel from the ice cascade.

Peter Larson, a Lehi butcher, has been held to 1500 bonds to answer the action of the district court on a charge of slander. Two witnesses, Charles Dutton, the other butcher.

Judge E. A. Wilson intends to go to California next Saturday where he will remain for several weeks. Quite a number of people will be sorry to see him go, but he will be not absent long, his brother, J. H. Wilson of Spanish Fork.

Charles Stoughard and L. W. Park and have returned from Salem, Oregon, they will be employed by the Worden M'f'g company as dyer and finisher respectively.

POPULAR PHRASES.

ORIGIN OF SOME OF THE CATCH-WORDS THAT EVERYBODY USES.

We Have Taken Some From the English and Invented Very Many Ourselves—How We Come to Adopt Some of the Phrases Which Are In General Use.

Mention has been recently made of the disputed origin of the word "boycott," claimed by two inventors, one living in England and the other in America, and each of whom may have lit upon the word independently and for the different reasons assigned. To curious minded persons who like to know the when, where and wherefore of everything the origin of popular catchwords and figures of speech is an interesting subject.

The word "machine," as we use it politically, is another which, like "boycott," is of doubtful parentage. In the dayes of the old volunteer fire companies, which in large cities were important factors in local politics, the phrase "to run with the machine" came into common use, and it meant that a man so spoken of was identified with the political interests of the fire company with which he trained. The famous Boss Tweed began his career in New York "running with the machine" as a volunteer fireman. Yet the term as we now employ it was used in England long before. The Duke of Wellington, in a letter to a friend in 1841 deploring the increasing influence of popular opinion on the action of the houses of parliament, said: "Such is the operation of the machine as now established that no individual, no character, conduct or eminent services can stand against it; what they may, can have any personal influence in general." We may have derived our term "the machine" from our old volunteer fire company days, but in the England of Wellington's time there were no fire companies existing any political influence.

That much overworked word "crank" gained universal vogue in connection with Guiteau's assassination of President Garfield, but it was long before that applied by the late Joe Pulitzer, who claimed to be its inventor. In Horace Greeley, the purpose of it being to liken the fanatic editor to the crooked a hand organ, which is forever grinding out the same old tunes. The word, as we have now come to apply it, means much more and worse. It implies a condition of mind verging upon insanity, and this has given rise to the erroneous notion that it has its origin in the German word "krank."

The word "dago," now commonly applied to Italians all over the country, came originally from Louisiana, where it at first referred only to people of Spanish origin, but was later applied to Italians and Portuguese as well. The word is a corruption of "Diego" (James), which is a common Spanish name, San Diego being the patron saint of the Spaniards.

Another word of universal employment in America speech is "dude," with its feminine complement, "dudine." This may have come to us from the old English word for clothes "duds," in earlier times spelled "dudes."

Thackeray writes of one of his characters: "The clothes were wonderful, but beauty marvelous. Few women could boast such duds." Shakespeare, in "The Merry Wives of Windsor," writes of a "basket of dudes," meaning a basketful of clothes ready for washing. In present day literary currency dates from February, 1883, when the word appeared in Putnam's Magazine, but a dozen New York citizens, Mr. Bernard Gillette, claims the credit of first starting it as a popular term of contempt or ridicule for a conceited person. He claims that a youth of this type who passed by the Cafe club window with a monocle eye provoked himself and another cyclamen to him together as accompaniment to the youth's walk, thus, "Da, da, da, da, da, da, da," and that he remarked "Good enough; dude is the proper name for it," and that thus the word was born.

The words "jingo" and "jingoism" are also of recent derivation. We all know about the English music hall song which set the word going with a new meaning in 1877, but the original origin of the term "By jingo!" is quite doubtful. In the Basque language the word jingo means God, and it is widely believed that "By jingo!" was a form of oath with which the Basque sailors threatened the English sailors and, through them, all English speaking people. But others believe the word is a corruption of St. Gingolph. It is one of the oddities of popular wordmaking that the term "jingoism," as now used, is a complete travesty of the sentiment of the song from which it was taken. In fact, either in England or America, it was set down as a song appealing for a fight eager for war at any cost. But the original music hall song, with the jingo chorus, expressed exactly the opposite sentiment—a desire for peace. It began with "We don't want to fight," and its fervid war acts was struck in the declaration that if they had to do what they would rather not, they had plenty of men, ships and money.

Speaking of "Brother Jonathan," there is no doubt about its origin. When General Washington went to Massachusetts to take command of the Revolutionary army, he found a great lack of ammunition and other supplies. He turned for aid to Governor Jonathan Trumbull of Connecticut, and got it, and in many emergencies of that period he used the phrase, "We must consult Brother Jonathan on the subject." The expression became nationally current, and it stands as the American parallel to "John Bull."—Baltimore Sun.

The Note In Its Neighbor's Eye.

A moth poised and strayed out of the window of a Central Park West apartment the other day. Its wanderings along the cornice until he reached one of the windows next door and looked in solemnly. The absence of the previous tenants was soon discovered, and he was called back quickly and exponentially.

The next day the proprietors of the animal were informed that the neighbor had complained because the cat had passed into his room. They immediately informed the owner of the property that the man who had been so disturbed by a little feline curiosity practiced on the Stein Lyre two hours every day.

Where the World Lies.

Sir Arthur Sullivan was himself in Berlin to assist at the first performance of his "Pineapple" at the Royal Opera recently. While he was there he met Mascagni at a dinner given in honor of the two illustrious guests of musical Berlin. "In which of the European capitals would you assess live?" asked Sir Arthur, and Mascagni's reply was rather puzzling, "I would live from 8 to 11 a. m. at London, from 11 to 1 at Paris, from 3 to 7 at Vienna, from 7 to 10 at Budapest, and after 10 at Berlin."
