SAW THE SEA'S BOTTOM.

Weird Experience of a Ship's Crew in the South Pacific.

An appearance of a new island in the Japanese seas calls to mind other rapid risings of land in the ocean. An island suddenly came to light off the coast of Sicily, remained two month and as quickly disappeared. Sabrina, near the Azores, retired from public life before it was fairly charted. The Gulf of Mexico has witnessed the advent and subsidence of small islands. These upheavals of the bed of the ocean suggest all sorts of mysteries connected with the unknown depths. An uncanny experience is related.

Our ship was out twenty-three days from Manila to the Sandwich Islands. It was a silent, dead-black night. The lead showed deep sea. Suddenly we felt as if we had grounded. The mate suggested a sunken wreck, but the skipper stuck to the theory of earthquake. Subsequent events showed that he was right.

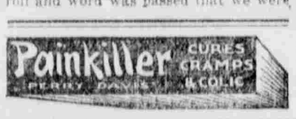
Daybreak revealed a low and misty sky. We lay as if becalmed in the midst of an oily sea, strangely discolored in patches. Suddenly the water trembled. I can use no other word. The ship rolled and in the distance rose a huge, balloon-shaped mass of vapor, steam or smoke. There was not the slightest sound, but a long line of chafing water stretched across the streaky calmness. Then the vapor settled over all and we could hear but not see the seething and pouring waters all about us. The captain ordered a bucketful to be drawn up. It was hot and smelled like gas works.

"H'm!" remarked the old skipper as he sniffed it. "They're poking up a new continent. I wish we were out of it."

The air grew more oppressive every moment. The vessel gave a gentle side roll and word was passed that we were aground. Over went the lead and came up covered with blue, oozy mud. We were wallowing in sludge, the darkness was pall-like and the atmosphere suffocating close. Then the air was rent with reports, awful to hear in that blackness. There were three of the deafening, roaring blasts and all was again still.

When the light came, red and unnatural, a strange sight met our eyes. It was as if the bottom of the Pacific was laid bare. We were helpless in a sea of thick mud. The sulphur fumes were choking and we had to take refuge below. Hour after hour we gasped, facing the probability of death by suffocation. Suddenly we felt that we were afloat. Whatever the bank of mud that held us was, it had disappered, and after a time we made our way out of the grewsome spot.

When we reached Honolulu the crew deserted. "There's no luck in a ship that has seen the bottom of the sea," they said.—Pall Mall Magazine.



Neglected Colds.

Every part of the mucous membrane, the nose, throat, ears, head and lungs, etc., are subjected to disease and blight from neglected colds. Ballard's Horehound Syrup is a pleasant and effective remedy. 25c., 50c., $1.00. W. Akendrick, Valley Mills, Texas, writes: "I have used Ballard's Horehound Syrup for coughs and throat troubles; it is a pleasant and most effective remedy." Sold by Z. C. M. I. Drug Dept. B

SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY.

That the crossing of the nerves of sight and hearing would cause thunder to give light and lightning to be heard as sound was declared by Du Bois Raymond, and has been confirmed by a recent strange experience. Wilhelm Braun describes a Berlin operation in which many nerves were cut in removing a larg brain tumor, a mistake being made when the auditory and visual nerves were then joined together. After some months the medical men have been able to communicate with the patient, and they now understand that the man sees all sights as sounds and hears all sound as colors. The shining of the sun yields a deafening noise. A blue sky produces a loud high and clear note, and a gray sky is heard as a gentle humming. A room is recognized by its sound. Equally strange are the effects of sound, a shrill locomotive whistle being violet, wile the clang of a gong is orange, and the dropping of rain is green. Many persons can be recognized by the colors of their voices. Music is especially pleasing, and gives colors more beautiful than were the corresponding sounds under normal conditions.

The novel theory that gravitation is closely allied to natural electrical phenomena, if not actually associated therewith, is deduced by Capt. Hugh Stewart, of New Zealand, from certain meteorological observations. The continuous electrical discharges between sun and earth, visible as aurora, may act as bonds to keep movable objects from being whirled tangentially into space, and storms are ascribed to ruptures or collisions of these streams of electrified ether, such as may be produced by the passage of planets.

A miniature dragon, projecting fire from both extremities, has been brought to notice by M. Le Cointe, a French entomologist. It exists in the Amazon region, and is a species of coleoptera of the genus Cicindela, with thorax and legs of a light brownish yellow, black forewings marked with yellow, and a total length of about two thirds of an inch. It hunts mostly at night. A dark lantern shows the individuals running about the garden in all directions, and on attempting to catch one a slight noise like escaping steam is heard, while a jet of smoke is forcibly ejected usually from the abodmen, but sometimes from the mouth. This smoke has a strong odor of nitrous gas. It gives a strong feeling of heat to the hand, any insect that may be caught feels hot, and the hot smoke stains the skin an indelible brown. It would seem to be a very caustic substance projected with violence in an impalpable dust. other animals project liquids or odors in defense, but the powerful character of this smoke shows a special chemical talent and a special resistance of the intestines that are quite remarkable.

A new electric radiator consists of four-cornered, concave-sided porcelain tubes wound with resistance wire, and contained in a casing giving rapid circulation of air without burning or deterioration. Each tube is a unit, and the heat is regulated by switching on separate units.

The armonipede of Sig. Dell Oro, a European musician, is a wind instrument played by the feet, and the pressure of the foot on each of the 27 keys serves also to depress the whole keyboard and so fill the bellows. The tone is decribed as round and pleasant though the range is limited to loud and soft. The inventor not only pedals it with both feet but at the same time manipulates a huge accordion of 170 notes and double keys.

Given Up to Die.

B. Spiegel, 1204 N. Virginia St., Evansville, Ind., writes: "For over five years I was troubled with kidney and bladder affections which caused me much pain and worry. I lost flesh and was all run down, and a year ago had to abandon work entirely. I had three of the best physicians who did me no good and I was practically given up to die. Foley's Kidney Cure was recommended and the first bottle gave me great relief, and after taking the second bottle I was entirely cured." Sold by F. J. Hill Drug Co.
