OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH, NOV. 12, 1894.

Death of a Respected Citizen.

H. O. Walker, a well known and much respected citizen of Ogden, died at St. George at 5 a.m. last Sunday. Mr. Walker's health had been failing for a year past and thinking to improve it he started south a month since for Arizona in a wagon attended to accommodate his family. They reached St. George last Thursday, when Mr. Walker began to sink rapidly and continued so to do until his death Sunday morning. For eight years he had been in the drug business in Ogden.

Horse Thieves Caught.

Sheriff Belnap made a clever capture of two desperate horse thieves. On Friday they entered a saloon shop at Layton and stole a Winchester rifle and two pistols, alongs bowie knife. At Syracuse they stole two horses from D. K. Egbert; they then rode to Pete Terry's place near Riverdale and took one of his horses, also saddle and bridle, having one of Egbert's horses. At Riverdale they took one of David Rossell's horses. They then started for Weber canyon. Sheriff Belnap was informed of the robberies and hitching up his horse and buggy started for Weber canyon and market Mountain Green. While talking to Mr. Robinson, who lives in the vicinity, two men on horseback came round the bend of the road, riding towards them. The sheriff who surmised they were his men, he was unable to jump out to Robinson to aid him, so he waited easily until they came up, when he covered the head man with his revolver and ordered him to throw up his hands, which the latter resolved to do, but upon the sheriff taking the horse by the bit he complied. In the meantime the other man had dismounted and started to run across the fields. The sheriff handed Robinson a Winchester and told him to stop the fugitive, if he had to shoot him. The latter then gave up.

The first one captured gave his name as Roberts. He is about 20 years of age, and carried a Winchester and two revolvers. The other is about 17 years of age and gave the name of Whitesers. Both were brought to Ogden and lodged in jail. The men admit that the sheriff did his work well.

The Gold in Snake River Canyon.

(Chicago Herald.)

There is said to be gold enough in the Snake river canyon, Idaho, to pay the national debt, but it is very difficult to reach. The stream flows through the richest gold belt of Montana and Idaho, and wherever the miners have been able to reach the sand or gravel they have secured rich results. Thirty years ago the amphitheater around the Shoshone falls was a lively mining camp, and more than $100,000 of gold dust was washed out there. There is a little beach 300 above the falls covered with several feet of fine sand. It is about 250 feet long and 60 feet broad. There, in 1865, Tom Cavanaugh and Pat Garrity washed out more than $4,000 in a few weeks, and several years later some Chinamen went over the same sand again and found half as much more. All the way up and down the canyon, in every nook and corner, wherever the sand has lodged among the bottom of the water-like cliffs, the miners worked on flat-boats, and some rich deposits were discovered. In one place, where the current strikes with full force, a pocket containing several hundred dollars was washed out in a single day. This circumstance, as the miners claim, that the silent river is "loaded with gold," but its perils are great, for the current is so swift and resistless that a boat is easily carried over the falls.

So far as known, there has been but one disaster of this kind. Tom Bell, a miner who lived in a cave with two Chinamen, was coming down the stream in a boat some years ago when one of his men broke, and although he struggled desperately the other was not sufficient to carry it ashore. The Chinamen leaped into the water, hoping, it is supposed, to find safety upon one of the rocks above the falls, but Bell, who knew that destruction was certain, stood upright in his little boat, folded his arms and looked death squarely in the face.

His body was recovered a few days later several miles below, and after a month or more the corpse of Moo Sing, one of the Chinamen, was found in some driftwood that had lodged only a few hundred yards under the falls. He had $1,000 in gold dust on his person, and his boxes were sent across the ocean to be buried with those of his fathers. A man was paid $175 to carry the coffin in a cart to the nearest station on the Union Pacific railway. The body of the other Chinaman was never found.

Dog is Not Bad Eating.

There is actually nothing in the flesh of the dog that is distasteful or repulsive. Lewis and Clark, the explorers, who journed to see it through curiosity, actually became fond of it in time. It is not generally known that it is still a favorite article of food among certain people, but a French paper says that the number of dogs slaughtered at the abattoirs in Munich is to be increased annually in the past few months. The same fate of dogs flesh is said to have been imparted by Italian tourists, who have recently come in large numbers to the Bavarian capital. The meat is not used only as a substitute for sausages, but is eaten openly, under its own name, prepared in various ways.—New York Christian Advocate.
