married Mr. John Q. Ryan of Salt Lake City. Miss Cluff was charming in a beautifully embroidered dove colored gown, and carried a shower bouquet of American beauties. Ferns, smilax and carnations were used freely in the parlor, and a beautiful bower was formed where the couple stood while Judge A. A. Noon performed the ceremony. S. P. Eggertsen, an uncle, gave the bride away, mother and aged grandmother stood by the side of the bride while William Day of Salt Lake acted as best man. Ferns and chrysanthemums were used with excellent effect in the dining room, broad streamers of white satin ribbon twined with smilax reached from the chandelier to the four corners of the table. Among the guests from Salt Lake were: Messers and Mesdames William Day, John Ryan, Charles Blair, Mrs. Rachel Burton, Miss Blair and Mr. and Mrs. Wick of Washington, D. C. Mr. and Mrs. Ryan left for a tour of the coast where they will spend some weeks when they will return to their new home.

THEATER GOWN AND WRAP.

Though having the effect of a pronounced decolletage, this satin frock is made "high necked" enough to pass muster for theater and restaurant wear. The frock is of pale pink satin and chiffon, the deep pink rose in the corsage giving depth of color. Over this pink costume is a chiffon wrap in a warm brown tone, the little shoulder scarf attached to the wrap showing the "tete du negre" trimming of brown marabout.

In Woman's World

Following are some hints for Thanksgiving festivities given by the Woman's Home Companion which will be found useful perhaps by prospective entertainers:

This little game will help make fun at the Thanksgiving dinner-table. For the guest who gives the largest number of correct answers a prize of a hollow turkey stuffed with candy, or a small silver wish-bone in the shape of a stick-pin may be awarded.

Give to each one present a booklet, on the cover of which is a diagram of a dinner table and guests. Number the dishes and guests. Inside the booklet, opposite the numbers write:

CENTERPIECE.

1. A large dish of "what single men are apt to lose."

MENU.

2. Low in spirits and sharp ends.
3. A country.
4. An aquatic, oviparous animal.
5. To banter severely, a smoothing-iron.
6. A son of Noah.
7. Tubers.
8. What no one wants.
9. Upstarts.
10. A prefix meaning salt and to join on.
11. Containing many raisins and currants.
12. A kind of shoe, relatives and mixed type.
13. A pronoun, to yell.
14. "McGinty" and "Annie Rooney."
15. December 31, 1908, and January 1, 1909.

THE GUESTS.

16. The bishop of Rome.
17. A country.
18. An animal and what she cannot do.
19. A thirsty cave.
20. Fleet.
21. Part of a cent and a weight.
22. A game and a child.
23. Language and quality.
24. A shrub.
25. An animal.
26. What the cook is apt to get.
27. An elf, N. G.
28. A beverage, to notch, a vowel, a beam.

A charming centerpiece for a harvest home table can be arranged by treating the familiar pumpkin emblem in a new way.

Choose a pumpkin of a shape that suggests the hull of a medieval vessel such as are seen in old prints—the "Spanish galleons"—and hollow out the top. Insert a tall gilded stick at what now becomes the bow, and sew or paste to this a pretty white sail, preferably a scrap of white silk, but not necessarily so. On the sail, before attaching it, paint with gold paint in fancy lettering "The Mayflower, Thanksgiving, 1909," or anything else appropriate to the occasion. Line the Mayflower with gilt or green paper, and fill with a cargo of fruits of the earth (crystallized). These can be made at home at half the price they bring in the shops. Elevate the vessel on a small box or tin, and surround with a bed of green leaves or with shaved green tissue paper so as to completely hide the base it rests on.

Or maize, that emblem of earlier Thanksgivings, could be utilized with new and striking effects. For this, select a quantity of dried corn-stalks, and cut a bouquet of the tassels a foot and a half high. Trim the tassels down a little, and tie the stalks with a loose spray of ivy near the top. Arrange them in the center of the table in the shape of an Indian wigwam. Open the wigwam (by pushing aside the stalks) on three sides, or four, according to the shape of the table, whether round or square. In each opening place a funny little Indian doll with bow and arrow. Around the wigwam and flat upon the cloth place golden ears of dried corn in the form of a large seven-pointed star, a rosette or any other decorative geometrical design. It is pretty to dye a few of the ears red and to have these alternate with the yellow ones in mathematical precision.

As a finishing touch, continue the sprays of ivy circling the base of the wigwam and trailing among the ears of corn.

IS WOMAN A SERVANT?

"In the main, the position of woman is curiously like that of the servant in the house," says Inez Haynes Gillmore in Success Magazine. "A servant with good wages and a generous allowance of afternoons and evenings 'out,' a servant carefully nursed when she is ill and attended by the master's own physician, a servant who is sure always of generous tips, when there is extra work, and of a carefully sinecured old age. Like a servant, however, it is to her interest to spy on the master, to discover his weaknesses and to play upon them. In some respects it is a pleasant position, although it is always an uncertain one. For, from her birth to her death, her welfare depends not on herself, but on a man; her father or brother or guardian first, her husband second, her son last. Luck always controls her destiny. Though the wheel of chance may set her in a pleasant place today, there is always the dread on her of a week's notice, the possibility of the crowded vista of the employment agency tomorrow.

"Her duties, ranging over a limited arc of human endeavor, made for a cheap versatility rather than, as in the case of the men, for the development of special gifts. Her working hours and her wages are arbitrarily fixed by men. Her habits are settled by men. Her intellectual convictions are doled out to her by men. She has never, until this generation, been permitted to cultivate her mind. As her chief control of man is through his senses, she thinks almost entirely with her emotions."

"THERE WERE GIANTS IN THOSE DAYS."

Clyde Fitch, at a dinner he once gave in his beautifully decorated New York house, talked about the press agent.

"The press agent of today," he said, "has a dull and feeble imagination beside the press agent of the past. How Barnum would have scorned the press agent of today!

"Barnum, you know, had a good press agent. Take his press agent's story of the elephant Alpha.

"Alpha fell ill—so the story ran—with gastritis. No medicines would relieve her. It was discovered that she had wrenched off an iron bar from her stall, and as the bar couldn't be found anywhere, all saw that she had swallowed it. This bar was the cause of her acute gastric sufferings.

"Mr. Barnum had a small colored lad named Rufe working for him. He sent for Rufe and said:

"'I want you to take a rubber tube to breathe through, and we'll put a strong rope around your waist, and send you down into Alpha's stomach after that iron bar she's swallowed. It's the only way to save her life.'

"Little Rufe rolled his eyes in horror, but he knew Mr. Barnum. He knew he must obey.

"So he was well greased with cosmoline, and Alpha being safely gagged, they thrust him head-first down the enormous oesophagus, and a long stick, well-oiled, shoved him right down into the elephant's stomach.

"He soon found what he sought there; he gave three tugs on the rope, and they drew him out with the indigestible bar of iron clasped in his hands.

"It is superfluous to say in conclusion that Alpha's life was saved, and that brave little Rufe was handsomely rewarded by his generous employer."

FOR THE GIRL WHO RIDES ASTRIDE.

Cross-saddle riding is being taken up more and more by women who live out of town, and younger women ride this way in the city parks, though at the horse show, where everything is formal and dignified, side-saddle horsemanship is demanded. The habit for astride riding has a skirt which falls to the ankles, and the skirt is so arranged that it may be worn as pictured, in frankly divided fashion; or the two front layers may be unbuttoned, crossed in front and buttoned over each other to give the effect of an ordinary skirt. The loose hip coat is comfortable for riding, and is plentifully supplied with pockets.
