Western Nevada is developing the quartz business.

Roswell, N. M., sells its surplus sweet potatoes at $2 per ton.

The New Mexican alfalfa crop is just being marketed for winter feed.

Ouray, Colo., has had its first change of postmasters in twelve years.

The Atlantic and Pacific shops at Albuquerque are employing a larger force than ever before.

A project has been started for a stage line from Hawkins, via Lander, Wyo., to the Yellowstone park.

Fort Morgan, Colo., has started up a feed mill to enable farmers to grind their feed. Wheat sells well for stock.

Brush, Colo., has had its charity ball. It engaged a carload of lumber, corks and geese to Denver's institute for week.

Indians in the vicinity of Jemez, N. M., are tapping lots of pine trees and sending them to the Albuquerque markets.

Lusbeta plateau, Wyo., continues to meet the recent storm as it came in. Until quite recently nothing else but snow was lost in the shadows.

J. D. McCullough, a prominent rancheman at Easton, Wyo., is reported lost in a blizzard on the Owl Creek range, near Lander.

Eddy, N. M., boasts of its climate. No snow has fallen there and the coldest snap this winter did not freeze a crust upon the top of a tanks of water.

Near Yuma, Colo., the farmers are marketing celery and lettuce. If the weather should pass without cold, they will be able to answer the calls for early spring crops.

Specimens of Walsenburg, Colo., have moved to attempt to propagate into mine if the pans of salmon can be procured at a reasonable figure in Colorado.

Mt. Carmel, Colo., people rejoice over the amount of snow and the prospects for the population to increase and transcending. They ask for six feet of snow on a level.

Nevada men are discussing the issuance of $3,000,000 of 3 per cent bonds to build a competing line of railroad from Carson and Virginia City via Lake Tahoe direct to the bay of San Francisco.

Heavy heavy snows in the mountains near Albuquerque, N. M., have prevented the game coming where the hunters can kill by wholesale. The New Mexican markets are being glutted with venison.

Colorado City is determined to develop the petroleum resources. The oil company has leased 130 acres of oil land near Colorado City and decided to issue stock to raise money to go down for oil. Petroleum is known to exist there.

In the Black mountains, thirty-two miles east of Las Cruces, N. M., a serving mining district has been organized by miners from Colorado, Utah and Idaho. Large quantities of valuable gold quartz have recently been uncovered there.

A monster icicle, thirty feet high and four feet thick, has been frozen at Truckee C. F. McClintock, as editor, is making a copy of what he calls relic. The curious piece of ice is to be sent to the Mid-Winter Fair in exhibition.

For some time a movement has been on foot among the members of the several churches to combine a crusade against gambling in Denver, Colo., and the district attorney has now filed a number of informations against the proprietors of gaming houses. The citizens will pull together and an interesting time is promised.

The crusade against the using of cigarettes by school boys in San Francisco is about to be extended on organized lines and by no less a body than the city school department. A resolution has been introduced appointing a committee of three to investigate the evil and to report to the board some feasible plan for eradicating the pernicious habit, as injurious to the morals, minds and bodies of our boys.

While the force of convicts employed in the canals of the Pioneer (Utah) Water Power company was engaged in excavating on Friday morning it was found necessary to put in a score of blasts. Consequently the men were ordered back from the vicinity of the blast. Quite a number failed to retire far enough, however, and fragments of the rock struck and injured four men, fortunately escaped death. The men were removed to the prison hospital.

The McCue Hankin Theatrical company seems to be in hard luck. On Friday night at Pasadena, Cal., Hankin disappeared entirely from the stage, but the receipts had been attached. Hankin and the company went to Los Angeles and attempted to secure the manager, Mr. Maher, for not skipping the town at Pasadena, but they were threatened with arrest and did not keep the manager. Miss Phyllis McKee Hankin has now sued to a complaint charging Manager T. M. Maher with embezzlement.

Indian Police Raid a Den.

There was a collection of opium among the men in the police of Anadarko, Indian Territory, and fell into the hands of the police. Some time ago the men had to be searched for the opium, but they had to be released because they had no legal warrant and think they are worth very much more than worthless Indian Territory boodlers. The police of the American Indian district believe in doing their own work and help.

If the Indian police knew we would get leaders to use their over again. But we should not want to put on such airs without knowing that they had been thoroughly cleaned out in the box. Two of a new lot's arrival should be put on duty over night in the box. Two men, and persons of prominence, may should be present, it is possible the box would go up, filling up with fresh honey without cleaning out the old contaminated honey, and then the new would be injured by the old.

It is not necessary that the entrance should be put on the hive to be cleaned and other scientific, but it is necessary to remove the honey for a separate box in the hive to be cleaned. Don't make saves work of it all the time. Put your money of another magazine where the bees can enter them, place in them honey and other city small substances in the hive or bees have can put it a time. If you allow to run among the bees will beat the cracks in pieces.
