latter Sell More of the Cheering Beverage, at Times, Than The Former,

A committee from the Retail Liquor Dealers' association appeared before the municipal laws committee of the city council last night and protested vigorously against the alleged sale of liquor by drug stores and restaurants. Attorney A. J. Weber was spokesman for the committee and he pointed out that the license for drug stores and restaurants was $400 per annum, while that for saloons was $1,200. This, he contended, was an injustice to the saloonmen from the fact that some restaurants and drug stores did a larger liquor business than the regular dealers; besides, the latter were compelled to do po business with women after 7 p. m., while the former continued right along Il time to close. Restaurants, he said, ad liquor by the drink although under sola liquor by the unit at most marked such their license they were not granted such permission. Drug stores also, he con-tended, sold the cheering beverage by the glass, while on Sundays, when all glaons must be closed, they sold it by the bottle.

MURPHY'S PLAIN TALK.

Edward Murphy of the Liquor Dealers' association made some startling statements. He said that Manhattan cocktails and mixed drinks of all kinds were served in restaurants and kinds were served in restaurants of all that he could prove what he said. He further declared that he could produce a driver of a beer wagon who was offered $5 extra by a druggist if he would deliver a case of beer to his soda fountain on Sunday. It was stated as being understood that one of the Main street drug stores served hear through being understood that one of the Main street drug stores served beer through its soda fountain just as gingerale is drawn. Mr. Murphy also made the un-qualified statement that he obtained whisky in a drink at Druehl & Franken's fountain by merely asking for whisky. Councilman Hobday said that he learned that whisky highballs could be secured in all but two of the drug stores on Main street. The matter will be brought' before the council by petition to be prepared and submitted by the Retail Liquor Dealers' association.

The others stayed in the wagon until a full mile had been traversed by the runaways when in turning a sharp curve; the conveyance was upset and the ocupants thrown into a clump of bushes. The team broke away from the wreck and two miles further down the canyon collided with a light wagon, which separated them. One horse is still astray.
