ALL IN EMBROIDERY.

The most practical frocks of the dressy types for small girls, and grown-ups, too, for that matter, are those of the embroidery, flouncings and bandings, with edging to finish the round necks and the cuffs of short elbow sleeves. For the very tiny tots one flounce of embroidery makes the skirt, but for older girls two flounces are necessary, the lower fuller than the upper which is joined to a baby waist with yoke and deeper berth.

The committees on arrangements for the outing of the Daughters of Utah Pioneers, the Daughters of the Mormon Battalion and the Nauvoo Legion at Wardensburg, next month, met at the Lion House on Wednesday and outlined plans for the event, which promises to be perhaps the most elaborate yet given by any of the pioneer organizations. It will be in the way of an all day encampment to begin with a formal meeting in the morning with a lecture upon topics which have been followed in the general study course of the Daughters of Pioneers; this will be followed by luncheon cooked at camp fires on the campus, then will come an unique program of addresses, music, recitations and other features, and in the evening a ball will be given at the Lion House. In Women's World.

Hanging baskets are always an attractive addition to the window garden, in which they may be suspended either from the ceiling or from brackets upon side walls. In summer they may be removed from the window and used to ornament the porch.

Certain trailing plants show to their best advantage only when grown in suspended baskets.

Hanging baskets of several different kinds are found upon the market. Earthenware baskets, both in plain and rustic shapes, are often used. One of the favorite types is that made of wire. When filled, it should first be lined with sheet of wood moss, with the upper side out. Where wood moss can not be secured, the basket may be lined with sphagnum moss, such as the florists use in packing plants for shipping. This is not so satisfactory, however, as the sphagnum is made up of loose pieces, which are liable to slip between the sides. After lining, the basket should be filled in the same way as an ordinary pot. Both sheet and sphagnum moss may usually be secured from florists. Sheet moss may often be found in dense woods, growing over decaying logs.

Square rustic baskets may also be purchased or they may be easily made from pieces of branches or saplings from one-half to three-fourths inch

THE LACE-TRIMMED LAURA.

Hats trimmed with lace, yards and yards of Valenciennes edging, are among the most effective midsummer millinery. The side-brimmed sailor shapes especially admit of this form of trimming, great whorls of plisse Valenciennes edging decorating the medium-high crown at the left side, and tiers of the same draping the side of the brim all around. A pretty use of flowers with lace shows a wreath of tiny roses draped from the edge of the crown over the lace.

Where it is impossible to secure a regular basket, an ordinary flower pot may readily be converted into a basket by the use of wire pot-hangers.

Women who have trouble with their rubbers breaking at the heel after wearing them a short time may like to know how I make use of mine when they reach this state, says a contributor in the June Delineator. I cut out the heels as far as the up slope of the arch, making sandals of them. These are sufficient protection except in the case of slush or heavy rain.

Any five cents' worth of borax and ten cents' worth of camphor gum. Put them into a large bowl, breaking the camphor gum first into small pieces. Pour over this one quart of boiling water, stirring to dissolve the borax. All the camphor will not dissolve. After it is cool, put it into a bottle and cork tightly. When wishing to use it, pour a portion into a basin, diluting it with half the quantity of cold water. Wet a tack sticking with this and sponge your goods, pressing afterwards. This will remove all spots and grease and restore the black.
