TRIED FOR ARSON.

Brannigan Confesses to Being Drunk, but the Main Charge Not Established.

Monday and Tuesday were taken up in the examination of J. L. Brannigan on a charge of arson in the second degree, setting fire to the Provo woolen mills on Saturday the 28th. The examination was held before Commissioner Dudley, being taken from Justice Waldgrave's court on a change of venue. County Prosecuting Attorney Booth prosecuted and M. S. Warner defended. Assistant Manager Smoot testified that he was summoned from his home at 11 o'clock Saturday evening. When he arrived at the factory he found evidence of a fire having been started in Mr. Brannigan's office on the third floor of the factory. There was some burnt paper in the window sill on the floor, and in another place on the floor there was more burnt paper and a burlap partly consumed by the fire on the top of the paper. He asked the officers to go to Mr. Brannigan's house and bring him to the factory. When he arrived Mr. Smoot told him that as he was foreman of the room where the fire had occurred he (Mr. Smoot) wanted him to discover how it had started, and asked him if he could suggest any theory as to the origin of the fire. Mr. Brannigan at first denied knowing anything of the fire; they had a long conversation, but no information was obtained. When they were going away Mr. Smoot told Mr. Brannigan that he believed he (Brannigan) had set the fire, and asked him if this was so to confess and leave town that same night and nothing further would be done about it. Mr. Brannigan grasped Mr. Smoot's hand and said, "I expect to meet my Maker, and before God I am innocent." Sunday morning Mr. Smoot had another conversation with the defendant. It was then found out that the defendant had been drinking heavily on Saturday, and Mr. Smoot asked him if it was not possible that he had gone to the office drunk and laid down, and that after he had got up, being still drunk, he had unconsciously set fire to the place. The defendant replied that he had been thinking about it and believed that this theory was correct. He also said he thought he remembered opening the window to let the smoke out after he had put out the fire.

James Connelton testified that he was the night watchman at the factory. He had discovered smoke about 11 o'clock Saturday evening, but was unable to find the fire. He then called Mr. Taylor, the shipping clerk, and he went out on the street to give the alarm. He soon came back with Officer Buckley, who located the fire in Mr. Brannigan's office. He broke open the door and put the fire out.

Officers Buckley, Marshal Knight and Walter Taylor corroborated the testimony of the previous witnesses. Marshal Knight testified to seeing tracks west of the building, which were such as would be made by the Dolemaite shoes. (Mr. Brannigan had testified to leaving by the gate on the south side of the building.)

The defendant testified that he had been very drunk Saturday, and laid down in his office and went to sleep in the afternoon and remained there till about 8 o'clock in the evening. He then woke up and started to shave himself. He found a match on the sill, accidentally or otherwise, (he does not remember). The base of the match fell in some paper in the window and ignited it, a turkey hanging in the window also caught fire. He threw the burlap and paper out, as he supposed, he put the fire out, by stamping on it. He remained about fifteen minutes, and thought the fire was thoroughly extinguished and then went home. In explanation of why he had, at first, said he remembered nothing about the affair, he said he was so drunk at the time that he did not remember anything till the following day and that then the remembrance came gradually.

Testimony was introduced to show that Mr. Brannigan was very drunk Saturday. It was also testified that the burlap had left impressions on the greasy, dirty floor, which would not have been unless it had been dampened or pressed down in some way. One witness testified that a colendar, hanging in the window, was not partially consumed, which would not have happened if the fire had not been put out. A great deal of testimony was introduced to show that the defendant was very drunk on the Saturday when the fire occurred. After the arguments of counsel, Commissioner Dudley discharged the defendant. After the discharge the defendant took an oath in presence of his wife and the audience that he would never touch liquor again.

First District Court.

The case of the Rock Canyon Irrigation company vs Jessie Bennett et al has been before the First district court for the greater portion of two days. The suit is brought to determine the rights of the contending parties to the water in Rock Canyon creek.

Naomi Friedendorff has commenced a divorce suit against Max Friedendorff. She alleges that she married the defendant in Salt Lake City on the 5th of June, 1892, and that he deserted her in April, 1893, and has failed to provide for her since that time. She sues for a decree of divorce, the custody of one child, the truck in their store, and for alimony, attorney's fees and expenses of the court.

Rebecca Ann Bunds also wants to be relieved from the matrimonial bonds which unite her with Lewis De Mott Bunds. The parties were married in Salt Lake city on the 21st of October, 1885. Plaintiff sues for a divorce on the grounds of failure to provide, and for the custody of their one child and for attorney's fees and the expenses of the trial.

THE PRICE OF IT.

All, there is the rub in these hard times. But consider what you save in so many ways. How you expand your business, or specially on errand or attend to some duty with little cost of time that might otherwise be neglected. Think of the times you have gone home and been met by the wife or your house with the demand to know why you had not met up the hour, and you recalled how, when your business of it you put it all thinking to have more time here or, and then forgot, it seemed, until the inquiry came, and your feet ? said to your home. How if you had had that very morning light and graceful "Stearns" Yellow Fellow—that your wife thinks of bicycle construction—that errand could not, would have been attended to for a lady. Result: Convenience with money saved, wife smiling and affectionate, life filled with sunshine and contentment.
