Immigrants.

Immigrants on the way—a company of Swiss and German families—left Chicago at 4:00 this morning. They will reach this city on Wednesday at noon.

In Town.

MISS Hortense R. Hardy, daughter of the well known actor, James K. Hardy, formerly of this city, is spending a few days in Salt Lake. She is a niece of Mrs. Dr. Grant Young and Mr. Reynolds of Provo and has many relatives and acquaintances in Utah. We wish the young lady a pleasant visit.

Home Missionaries.

The regular monthly meeting of the home missionaries of the Salt Lake Stake of Zion will convene in the Social Hall on Wednesday, Sept. 24, at 7:30 p.m. A full attendance is desired. If any of the brethren cannot attend, they will please report their labors in writing. Parties members are requested to be present. J. D. SPENCER, Clerk.

The Street Car Strike.

Matters settled of the electric cars were in operation this evening. The management contemplates being supplied with applicants for positions as conductors and motormen, and are hands are being drilled as rapidly as possible by the company's electricians how to handle the cars. It is expected that within a few days a sufficient number of new hands will be fully instructed to run the cars. The prospects certainly are very pleasing.

Lost—A Cane.

At about two o'clock this afternoon a merchant tailor went to Mendenhall's, and stated that his brother, a working journeyman tailor, had entered his employ and had a gold-headed cane from his store. The money, it seemed, had made inquiries at 100's as some merchant stores, but in each instance the proprietors had failed to hit on who what they had lost the way of gold-headed canes. Hence he visited the assistance of the police. We did not learn the result.

Conference Rates.

From Deming and Lake, one fare for round trip, and for fifty days.

Funeral at Mill Creek.

(Correspondence of the DESERET NEWS.) Yesterday afternoon, Sunday, Sept. 21st, the funeral of Royal Ann, son of the late Levi North, took place at the family residence in Mill Creek Ward.

Twelve years ago Levi North, father of the deceased, was drowned in Green River, having a team and five sons to battle through life's journey. Royal was the son after the death of the father, apparently was about 13 years of age, only about a week over a month ago. The entire community seemed to have sympathy from many hearts, and expressed at the house and at the grave. The bereaved mother was supported at the house by the sons of the well known John Morgan, of Mill Creek.

The pallbearers were David Lant, James Sharpe and Edward Sharpe. Twenty-one children filled the hearse which followed the remains to the Mill Creek cemetery, where the grave was dedicated by George R. Stevenson.

Sunday School Review.

A very agreeable substitute for regular Sabbath evening service was afforded the people of the Fourth Ward last evening in the form of a review of the primary department of the Ward Sunday School. For many years past the smaller children, ranging from four years old down to the age of twelve, have constituted a good holding force of the Ward, being taught really in a separate room from the rest of the school, and the advancement they have made in the various studies taught, as manifested at last night's review, reflects great credit upon their teachers, Brothers Jos. Kelly and Day. The little people occupied seats on the stand, filling it completely, and went through the exercises, consisting of questions and singing, in a manner to elicit, in a most pleasing manner. Remarks of an instructive and congratulatory character were made by Brothers R. Kime, Geddes, Wm. Budge and Bishop Thorn, and a couple of songs were sung by Brother Gaddard, all of which, together with the singing of the children, constituted a most delightful evening's entertainment.

SHOT ON THE STREET.

Probably Fatal Results of a Quarrel.

PARTIES ARE RAILROAD MEN.

A Feud Between Foremen Leads To Terrible Results.

At about 12.30 o'clock today John T. Snellson shot a man named Lockett, who will probably die. The circumstances leading to and connected with the shooting are as follows:

Lockett has for some time past been in the employ of the Rio Grande Western Company as foreman of a gang of car inspectors, and Snellson has been in the employ of the same company as foreman of a gang of car repairers. Of necessity the two men had a more or less close connection with each other in their work, and they have not got along pleasantly. In fact, it is stated that they have quarreled repeatedly. On Saturday last trouble occurred between them which, it is stated, had its rise over the fact that Snellson wanted to put on certain workmen, while Lockett objected, claiming they were incompetent. Lockett says that on the occasion of their last quarrel Snellson drew a knife on him.

What, if anything, passed between the two men between Saturday and noon today is not known, but the following particulars of the shooting are given by a workman who was an eye-witness to it:

On the northeast corner of the intersection of Second South and Fourth West streets, which, of course, is on the southwest corner of the block, stands a brick building belonging to T. C. Armstrong, Jr. The west wall of the building is on the line of the sidewalk on the east side of Fourth West Street, and the front of the building is flush with the Second South Street sidewalk. Immediately east of this building is another brick structure in course of erection. A workman on the latter named James Herndon stood nearby and saw the shooting.

For about fifteen minutes Lockett had been standing in front of the first building, occasionally bending his head round the corner of it and looking to the north. He appeared to be waiting and looking for someone. Presently he stooped quickly, picked up a stone and threw it at a man who was walking near the middle of Fourth West Street, and apparently going towards the R. G. W. depot. As soon as Lockett had thrown the first stone he stooped to pick up another, and at that instant the man he was throwing at fired a first and then a second shot. Lockett staggered but recovered himself, walked into the middle of Second South Street, hailed a street car that was going east, and stepped into it. He rode in the street car to Main Street, when the conductor and motorman, discovering that he was wounded, hailed policeman James Dunning, who called an express wagon and conveyed him to the City Hall, where he arrived within fifteen minutes of the time he was shot.

Five minutes later Dr. Meacham, city physician, and Dr. Fowler were in the office of City Marshal Young, where the wounded man was lying on a mattress on the floor. By direction of the surgeons, he was stripped to the waist, that an examination might be facilitated. There was only one bullet hole, and it was located in the left side about half way between the top of the hip bone and the arm pit, and seemed to be about in line with both. The ball had not come out, and the surgeons passed the flesh on the back and abdomen to find it, if possible. Whether or not it had passed within the rim was a matter of doubt. On pressing a spot three or four inches above the navel the patient winced, and gave it as his opinion that the bullet was there.

The surgeons seemed doubtful as to whether it was there or not, and Dr. Fowler inquired if the patient had vomited, and was told he had not. Dr. Meacham proceeded to bandage the wound, and while he was thus engaged Justice Lacey came into the apartment and asked: "Hadn't a statement better be taken from him?"

Dr. Fowler—Wait till we get him fixed. He is not in a condition now. But when we get him fixed up you'd better do it.

Sam Shell, driver of the patrol wagon, was kneeling by the side of the mattress, carefully supporting the wounded man, whose position, however, was uncomfortable, and he said: "Let me lie down." He could not lie prone, on account of the pain he suffered in that position, and he had to be raised up again.

At 1:15 o'clock, Judge Lacey came up to the bedside with paper and pencil, to take the wounded man's statement, and all except police officials were excluded from the room. As Dr. Fowler left the room he said, in answer to an inquiry:

"He's not dying yet; he is not pulseless, and there may be a reaction occur. But you can't tell, and his relatives ought to be notified at once."

Dick Sergeant Merrill at once directed a police officer to go to an address on First South Street, where it was understood the wounded man had friends. But little, however, could be ascertained about him. It was said that he had friends in the Sugar House Ward. He is of fair physique, dark complexion, dark hair and moustache, about medium height and apparently about thirty-three years old. It is believed he is single.

Immediately after firing at Lockett, Snellson walked to the county jail, two blocks distant, gave himself up and was locked up in a cell. He is about thirty-five years old, is of rather small stature, dark complexion, wears a black moustache, and looks like a hard-working man. The sheriff refused to allow report ers to speak to him.

At last accounts Lockett was still lying on the mattress in Marshal Young's room at the City Hall, in a condition which made it impossible for the surgeons to predict with any confidence whether he will live or die.

Justice Lacey very properly refused to make public the contents of his note sourdes statement.

JUDGE ZANE DECLINED

To Be a Witness in the Dyer Examination.

A Session of Commissioner Stone's court was held in the Territorial Library room in the Wasatch building last Saturday evening for the express purpose of taking Judge Zane's testimony relative to the Dyer receivership.

When it came time to call the court to order, a conversation occurred between Commissioner Stone, Arthur Brown, who is representing Mr. Dyer, and Judge Zane. The latter expressed disinclination to testify, and said substantially:

"All I know is what is in the record and hearsay. I don't think a judge ought to be a witness in a case before him, unless it is absolutely necessary to the ends of justice."

Mr. Brown—Perhaps I could show that you are not a judge, but an attorney in the case. [Laughter.]

Mr. Brown continued—"I know it is a delicate position in which you are placed."

Judge Zane to Judge Judd—When Brother Stone first spoke to me about testifying, I thought I might be able to testify to some facts not in the record already; but I have been thinking the matter over and have reached the conclusion that, aside from hearsay, I have no facts in my possession not already in the record.

Mr. Brown requested that the stenographer note the refusal of Judge Zane to testify, and to add that he (Brown) only desired to examine him relative to matters with which he was connected as attorney, and that he did not want to ask him any hearsay questions.

The court—I do not think I have authority to compel Judge Zane to testify.

Judge Judd—Judge Zane's refusal to testify assumes the very matter concerning which we wish to examine him, namely, his qualification to act as a judge in a case in which he has been an attorney.

Mr. Brown—We will not insist upon Judge Zane's testifying.

An informal discussion ensued relative to Judge Zane's connection with the case as an attorney, and he said he had no objection to stating the particulars in the matter and did so. He and John M. Zane were employed by certain school trustees, who made certain representations to the judge, which, however, were hearsay so far as he was concerned. Zane & Zane and R. N. Baskin instituted certain proceedings, which are of record, as attorneys for the school trustees.

A discussion of the nature of the present examination followed, between Judge Zane and Mr. Brown, in which the former gave it as his opinion that a wider scope was being given to it than was intended by the court ordering it.

Mr. Brown—Well, as the judge refuses to be sworn, we can't waste any time with him. In view of his refusal, I would like to ask a few questions of some other witnesses.

A discussion ensued as to whether the business could be finished on Saturday night. It was determined to send for some witnesses forthwith and await their arrival.

After a wait, which was improved by a friendly chat, it was determined to adjourn till 9 a.m. Monday, at the Gas Company's office.

Commissioner Stone—I suppose Mr. Varian will be notified.

Judge Judd—Mr. Varian don't seem to take much stock in the proceedings.

At this the gentleman present left the room.

Just what Judge Zane's reasons were for refusing to testify are best known to himself; but it can readily be supposed that he did not care to expose himself to a cross-examination by Arthur Brown, Judge Judd and P. L. Williams on a matter concerning which he is said to be very sore, viz., his connection as an attorney with a case he now sits on as a judge.

This morning Commissioner Stone's court met in the Gas Company's office. Only two attorneys, Judge Judd and Leonard Young were present.

John P. Hales, clerk of the Territorial supreme court, was sworn and examined by Judge Judd.

The following handwriting of Chief Justice Zane, I recognize as his handwriting in the decree of July 12, ordering this investigation.

Witness identified several documents as belonging to the files in the case, among them being the petition of the school trustees, signed by Zane & Zane, attorneys for petitioners.

F. H. McGurrin was sworn and examined by Judge Judd. He testified to having taken, as court stenographer, certain testimony before Judge Harkness in the examination in this case had before him; the firm of Zane and Zane who took part in those proceedings, was composed of the present Chief Justice of this Territory, and John M. Zane, his son.

Mr. Moffat, Mr. Dyer's clerk, was sworn and examined by Judge Judd; Heard Judge Zane make an argument in this case, on the petition of the school trustees; reported the same stenographically, and have made a typewritten copy of it.

The latter was introduced in evidence.

Judge Judd—Your honor, in making the record regarding the conduct of Judge Zane, we are aware that it is a matter beyond the jurisdiction of this court. But my client directs me to say that he objects now and always has objected to Judge Zane sitting on this case, because he has been an attorney against my client in the case, and has personal feelings against him.

The Court—As no objection is made to this evidence, it will be permitted to go in; but I regard it as immaterial and irrelevant to the purposes of this examination.

A discussion ensued as to the interest the Church had in the proceedings, and Mr. Young expressed the opinion that it had none in particular.

Judge Judd intimated that an application would be made to set aside the order for this investigation, because Judge Zane participated in it.

He then offered in evidence the articles of incorporation of the following: The association owning the St. George Temple; the Literary and Scientific Association; the Salt Lake Stake of Zion; the First Ward of the Salt Lake Stake of Zion; and the deed of H. S. Eldredge to the Literary and Scientific Association, conveying the Council House property. He offered these, he said, to show how the Temples and tithing properties were owned in various parts of the Territory.

Le Grand Young was placed on the stand and said that the articles of incorporation of a stake and ward offered in evidence were similar to the charters of all the other wards and stakes so far as he knew.

Mr. Dyer was placed on the stand and examined by Judge Judd. He testified—The investigation consequent upon the school trustees' petition, had before Judge Harkness, cost $4,638.87; the loss in sheep and rents consequent upon the order of the court, was 7258 head of sheep, worth $12,830 at the price they lately sold for; the expense of herding, etc., was $15,500; total loss, $28,330; less wool and lambs worth $8600; net loss, $19,730.

The witness stated what opportunities had been offered to lease the sheep. One bid was $4,301, and had they been leased at this figure the difference, or saving, to the fund would have amounted to $23,771. This loss to the fund the witness attributed mainly to Judge Zane, as he was the principal cause of the order being made by the court, which resulted so disastrously to the fund.

Judge Judd said he believed his side were through, but he would ask to have the case left open till the return of P. L. Williams and Arthur Brown, who were the senior counsel for the ex-receiver.

The court to Judge Judd—Do you wish to offer any findings?

Judge Judd—I don't know that, in the absence of the senior counsel, I do. I will say, though, that the file contains the findings of Judge Harkness, and the action of the court thereon. This examination don't seem to have changed the appearance of the case much.

The court here put some questions to Mr. Dyer in regard to vouchers for expenditures, which were answered when an adjournment was taken till 10 a. m. next Wednesday in Col. Stone's office.

It is probable that no more evidence will be offered, but that findings will be, and that an argument will take place.

THIRD DISTRICT COURT.

Wrongfully Convicted, but Set Free.—An Unsavory Case.

This morning in the case of Cyrus Aaron, convicted on Friday last of grand larceny, Mr. Hamilton, the defendant's attorney, moved for a new trial, on the ground that the insufficiency of the evidence did not justify the jury in finding the accused guilty.

Assistant district attorney Critchlow said the result arrived at by the jury was certainly a surprise to the prosecution, for the reason that, as it seemed to him, the principal defendant, J. W. Randall, was acquitted. Under those circumstances it did not appear there could possibly be any evidence against Aaron. The only testimony which went to connect the two men was that they were seen to leave the county together. In view of all the circumstances the verdict must have been arrived at through the sympathy of the jury for the relatives of Randall, and hence his acquittal. In exercising mercy toward one man the jury evidently failed to do justice to the other. It did not seem right or just that Randall should have been set free, palpably for illegitimate reasons operating upon the minds of the jury, and that Aaron—who was probably not guilty at all—should have been convicted.

Judge Zane said the defense appeared to have been directed to the case of Randall, while that of Aaron was lost sight of. Assuming that Randall was in his right mind, he might have been convicted and Aaron acquitted. He failed to see how Randall could be acquitted and the other defendant convicted. The motion for a new trial would be granted.

Mr. Critchlow—In view of the circumstances attending this case and the evidence which is now in the hands of the prosecution, we do not believe there is anything upon which a jury would convict this defendant. We therefore ask that the case against him be dismissed.

Judge Zane—The order will be made.

The case of Clinton Ainsworth, charged with fornication, next came up. The offense was said to have been committed on April 5th, 1890, with one Matilda Neilson, who at the time was living in Victoria Place, on the State Road. A jury was quickly empanelled and it was stated in evidence that defendant had been in the habit, for the past three years, of visiting the complainant, and that their intimacy eventually resulted in the birth of a child. The defendant, at the time of the intimacy of the parties was a single man, but married in April last.

On cross-examination, Miss Neilson admitted that defendant had occupied the same bed with her on various occasions, but denied that she had ever been intimate with other men.

In answer to Mr. Critchlow the witness said that defendant had promised to marry her ever since they began keeping company together. She further stated that on one occasion, after she had discovered her condition, defendant induced her to go to a drug store (which she named) and wanted her to take some medicine which had been prepared for her, but she refused to do so. She added: "That's the sort of a man he is."

A witness named Hilda Neilson (not related to the complainant) testified to having seen defendant in Miss Neilson's room at Victoria Place on various occasions.

A young lady named Mortensen said that during the two months she resided at Victoria Place she saw the defendant visit "Tilly" Neilson some five or six times.

A brother of the complainant testified to the intimacy of the parties. He had seen defendant take the child—now just three years old—upon his knee and play with it.

Judge Powers, for the defendant, insisted that the only evidence including Ainsworth was the testimony of the woman herself, an accomplice in the alleged crime. All besides was "shotgun" testimony. The jury had nothing to do with the birth of the child three years ago; they had simply to deal with the offense alleged to have been committed on April 5th, and this, he contended, had not been proved.

Mr. Critchlow said an effort had been made to blacken the complainant's character. There was no engagement of marriage between the parties, and he asked the jury to say that this charge had been established.

The jury found the defendant guilty. Sentence was deferred.

The Wyman murder case was called on after the noon recess. Assistant District Attorney Critchlow will conduct the case for the prosecution, and Messrs. Powers and Dickson are retained for the defense. The defendant, Charles Wyman, is a lawyer by profession, and James Kelly, who was fatally shot by Wyman at Ophir, on November 17th, 1889, during a quarrel, was a prospector. Some time was occupied in empanelling a jury.

Justice Lacey's Court.

The following were to day fined $5 each for drunkenness, and in default of payment went to jail: Lewis Splinter, John Gill, John Jones, Jr., W. Ross, Lewis Blackburn, Wm. Hampton, Con. Crowin, Garrett Mead and Alex. Matthews.

The $10 drunks were John Hickey and John McCabe.

Paid a $5 fine for drunkenness: Philip Kiernan, John Williams, Benj. F. Godwin.

Andrew Johnson is in custody on a charge of trespass.

Hot Hong, a Chinaman, forfeited $5 which he had left as security for his appearance to-day on a charge of disturbing the peace.

Charles Collins and William Hunt, drunkards, also forfeited $5 under similar circumstances.

A Distressing Case.

Yesterday three surgeons performed the operation of tracheotomy on a little daughter of Brother Holliday, of Cottonwood, who is temporarily stopping in the Fifth Ward. A day or two previous the child was eating a carrot when a small piece of it lodged in her windpipe. Suffocation was threatened, and the operation was perfored for the purpose of inserting a tube in the windpipe below the obstruction. The case is a most distressing one, and we are informed that the child lies in a critical condition.

A Witness Arrested.

On Saturday last Miss Kate Houtz, alleged plural wife of Nicholas Grossbeck, of Springville, was arrested in this city by deputy marshals Cannon and Doyle, on an attachment. The lady was wanted as a witness against her alleged priest husband, who was under investigation by the grand jury at Provo, to which place she was taken.

FIRST DISTRICT COURT.

The Latest Court Proceedings at Provo.

On the reassembling of the court Friday afternoon, the Lemon unlawful cohabitation case was continued. The case was argued in brief and submitted to the jury, who found a verdict of not guilty.

James M. Stewart changed his plea of not guilty and entered one of guilty, and was sentenced to be confined six months and pay the costs of the prosecution.

Rudolph Mason desired to become a citizen of the United States. He believed in the form of government of the United States and would support the constitution, but as he was a "Mormon," citizenship was not granted.

James P. Johnson, of Utah County, had the quality of being a non-"Mormon," and was consequently admitted to citizenship.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 20.

The court opened at 10 o'clock, Judge Blackburn on the bench.

The grand jury came into court and reported fourteen indictments, and retired for further business.

Attorney Emmonds asked the sureties be exonerated in cases the grand jury had ignored. The following cases were ignored: United States vs. Elias Burns, Daniel Candland, Joseph Anodius, John Quinchurz, the people vs. Elizabeth Murphy et al. The case of John Hunsicker, charged with keeping a public nuisance now came up.

Mr. Emmons was the first witness. He testified: I am acquainted with the defendant. Have known him two years. His place is at Eureka. Keeps a corrall and stable. In April left corrall and stables were in a bad condition, having hogs, manure, etc. The premises were overrun with cattle, hogs and calves. Manure was piled up and it smelled very badly. Some of the cattle died and were allowed to lay there for two or three days. This was in last April. Some were left until they were destroyed by hogs. This was next to my house. Four or five other families are therabout. Have not complained to Hunsicker. Didn't think it was necessary. He has said he would stink us all out. I think it was injurious to health to have a stench of that kind around.

Cross-examined by Mr. Sutherland—Have lived at Eureka two years; all land is public everyone who has pigs allows them to run loose; some have had orders to keep them up by the board of health. Defendant's cattle died before the complaint was made; I think the cattle starved to death; don't know that his cattle were poisoned; don't know of a post-mortem examination of the cattle; dont know of more than two cattle dying; I think he son shot one to get it out of misery; The cows he claimed were poisoned died in May, after the trial.

A number of other witnesses were heard. Defendant was then called and said: I have lived at Eureka three years. He denied the story told by the witnesses for the prosecution, and other witnesses corroborated him. After a brief argument, the jury retired.

Arthur H. Campbell pleaded not guilty to the charge of adultery.

Zachariah S. Taylor was arraigned on the charge of unlawful cohabitation, pleaded not guilty, and the case was set for next Saturday.

Soren Michelsen, arraigned on the charge of unlawful cohabitation, pleaded not guilty.

John H. Jenkins, charged with adultery, pleaded not guilty.

Charles Vincent, charged with adultery had no attorney, wherefore Mr. Sutherland having been appointed by the judge took the statutory time to plead for him.

Charles W. Dollmann, charged with unlawful cohabitation, pleaded not guilty.

Rasmus Jespersen, charged with adultery, pleaded not guilty.

Christian Oldsen pleaded not guilty to a charge of unlawful cohabitation.

Charles A. Perry pleaded not guilty to a charge of adultery.

Court adjourned until 1:30 p. m.

The Tailors' Strike.

The members of the tailors' union, which was re-organized a short time ago, did not resume work this morning. The reason for their idleness is the refusal of the bosses to accede to their demands. The journeymen ask to be paid an increase of from $3 to $5 on each coat they make, from $1 to $2 on each pair of pants, and from $7 to $10 on each suit. As a merchant tailor was giving these facts to a reporter, a bystander—a clothing merchant—asked, "How can you do it?" "We don't do it," emphatically replied the merchant tailor, "and that is the reason why the men quit." The latter gentleman proceeded to add that it was impossible for the bosses to comply with the demands of the journeymen.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon the strikers were holding a meeting, but the minute of the proceedings could not be definitely learned.

At the Theatre Tonight.

No more popular attraction visits this city than the comedy drama "The Still Alarm," and the best evidence of its popularity is that each visit to a city finds it even more successful in a financial point of view. The reason for this is that the play deals with topics and events of every-day life, and, like Dickens' novels, portrays characters that are familiar to all. There is nothing in the every day life of a great metropolis that will create more stir and bustle on the streets than an alarm of fire. All stop and listen to the clang of the bell, count the strokes and then watch with interest the noble animals with dilated nostrils dashing along the streets, whirling the highly furnished engines, gladdening the men as gleaming at night with the lights of the lanterns along the streets, the driver guiding the snorting steeds in and out of the crowded thoroughfares with skill and dexterity. When a scene of this kind is presented on the stage with such fidelity to nature as is shown in this famous fire station act in "The Still Alarm," it is little wonder that audiences go wild with enthusiasm over what is perhaps the most realistic and best managed scene of modern life that the stage has produced in these days of stirring accuracy.

Performance will begin at 8:15 p. m. and indications at the Box Office point to a large house for to-night.

A Lightning Artist.

George W. Vedder, the well-known lightning artist of the Walter A. Wood Mower and Reaper Machine Co., of Hoosick Falls, N. Y., arrived in this city Saturday morning and will paint his celebrated lightning picture at our coming fair in the interest of the Co-operative Wagon and Machine Co., general agents of the Wood Co. These little pictures are genuine oil paintings, about 8x10 inches in size and are produced inside of two minutes and presented to lady visitors as souvenirs. As nothing of the kind has ever been seen in this section, much interest will be taken in watching this skillful artist, whose rapid work is indeed wonderful to behold. This lightning manipulation with paints and brush will be one of the striking attractions of the coming exhibit.

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR. | ONE HUNDREDTH & EIGHTH SEASON

Fall, 1890. SEASON Winter, 1891.

Grandly Equipped and Ready for Inspection!

Experience from past seasons, when our tremendous rate of business compelled us to duplicate nearly all of our season's stock, has taught us a wise lesson—"to be ready to meet a demand." The coming season will find our establishment jammed with all wants from pit to dome, and as to our Retail Department, all tables stacked to the ceiling and shelving "loaded to the outside."

How About Clothing?

Without the slightest exaggeration such a grand and unique line of Suits and Over-coats, such beautiful designs and patterns, never crossed the borders of Utah for any one before. The styles of course differ—as usual—but we guarantee to show one and all styles out of the leading "Fashion Plates of England and America." As to material, trimmings, etc., no comment, we simply answer "as usual."

Youths' and Children's Clothing.

Grander than ever, and this is saying a good deal. Already for the past years we stood competitors in this particular branch, owing to the extremely large stock we carry and the talented trade they cater to.

How About Hats?

The tremendous stock of Hats we dispose of every season can hardly be credited to any one but an exclusive Hatter. The latest and finest hat made can be found in our Hat Department, which forms a branch by and for itself. Every hat directly manufactured for our consumption, and although they are not branded with names of makers, who gather a fortune by their reputation, yet we claim to furnish you a $5.00 Derby Hat of finer stock than any one can or we will forfeit one to you.

How About Haberdashery?

A carload or two more than previous seasons. We doubled the usual amount of stock. We bring of these beautiful thousands of things displayed here and there. A superb line of neckwear, a tremendous line of Imported and Domestic Underwear and Hosiery. We added to the justly celebrated English "Cartwright and Warner Natural Wool Underwear," the latest discovery, "Dr. Warner's Health Underwear," recommended by all physicians of the country. Delicate persons should not fail to try them.

Now, How About Your Want?
